Senate Refuses to Split Neutrality Bill, Backs Administration, 65-26

Leadership Agrees To Modify Drastic Ban on Shipping Outside War Zone

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday refused to split "title and carry" from embargo repeal sections of the Administration's neutrality bill in a 65 to 26 demonstration of support for the President's program.

The test brought overwhelming defeat for a motion by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, to delay repeal of the arms embargo until restrictions on American trade could be enacted as a separate measure.

After moving the bill easily over its first vote barrier, the Senate heard Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, paint a dark picture of the future of the American merchant marine under the bill's sharp trade restrictions.

An advocate of repeal, and committed to the program, Bailey, nonetheless protested that the limitations on American shipping were "too drastic."

Johnson Drops Mediation

Other significant developments were:

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, pigeonholed his own bid for mediation of the European war by the President. Johnson, who sought to recess the Senate to give the President a free hand to work for peace, said he will not renew the motion. He said Premier Daladier's indication "that the French want to fight on" influenced his decision.

Prominent Democratic leaders reached an informal "accord" on the general principle of modifying the neutrality bill's regulation of American ship movements. Although no details of the change have been drafted, a wider extension of shipping rights in the Pacific Ocean and in other areas not involving war risk was involved in the plan.

Leaders Call Vote a Test

Administration leaders called the complete rout of the Tobey motion a "fair indication" of how the Senate vote will go on final passage of the bill and on embargo repeal. Senate Majority Leader Barkley claimed the Administration will pick up "two or three more votes" on final passage.

Isolationist opponents insisted there was "no significance" to the vote, although virtually all of their committed strength voted for the Tobey motion. Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota said embargo repeal opponents were "not the least disheartened" and "this fight isn't ended."

Marshaled against the "split bill" motion were 57 Democrats, 7 Republicans and 1 Independent. Voting to recommit the bill were 15 Republicans, 9 Democrats, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite.

Administration whips left no stone unturned to get out a big vote. Senators Harrison, of Mississippi, and Ashurst, of Arizona (Democrats), who have been ill, turned up for the test and at least two Senate absentees were called back from their home States. Former Gov. Chandler, of Kentucky, was sworn in as Senator an hour ahead of schedule, so he, too, could vote.

Other Lines Affected

Senator Bailey's plea for modification of the bill's stringent shipping provisions followed a speech by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, who declared no commercial sacrifice would be too great a price to pay to keep this country out of the European war. Urging enactment of the Administration bill, with embargo repeal, Wagner warned against the "delusion" that an embargo on arms would keep America out of war.

Bailey told the Senate the bill's shipping restrictions will "not only seriously disrupt and curtail and injure the American shipping industry, but would bring to a virtual stop this program to develop and maintain the American Merchant Marine as a great national benefit and asset."

Appraising the adverse affects on American ships, the Senate's commerce chairman estimated:

That 130 American dry cargo combination or passenger ships of 860,000 gross tonnage would be tied up and the lines that operate most of them "abandoned."

That an additional 16 American dry cargo and tank ships of 80,000 gross tons, principally moving be-

President Indicates He Is for Appropriation; Sees Institution Head

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that he was considering tentative plans for construction of a number of comparatively small buildings on East Capitol street to house individual Smithsonian Institution exhibits which are not being adequately displayed.

He said he had discussed this matter with Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who called at the White House Monday.

Dr. Abbot brought to his attention the fact that private funds to finance the work of the division of radiation and organisms of the institution were running low, and that an appropriation of $25,000 would be needed to continue the work.

Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he favored the appropriation. The division was established with private funds about ten years ago to investigate the chemical reaction whereby leaves of plants take up carbon dioxide from the air.

In view of the President's sympathetic interest, it appeared likely that a $25,000 item to carry on the research would be included in the budget for the next fiscal year.

Would House Indian Exhibit

Mr. Roosevelt said that so far as figures are concerned, his conversation with Dr. Abbot started out with the $25,000 item and ran into millions. He referred to the suggestion that exhibit buildings be erected along East Capitol street.

An item will be included in the budget as soon as possible, he said, for construction of a building to house adequately the Army Medical Museum and Library, which is incomparably superior to anything of its kind in the world. This would be the first of the East Capitol street projects which he has in mind, he intimated. Congress already has authorized construction of the building.

Another would be a building to house the National Museum's American Indian exhibit—a wonderful exhibit, the President said, which unfortunately is being displayed in the manner of the 1870's.

Others presumably would house the museum's American history ex-

Red Activity In U. S. Union Probed by Dies

Committee to Find Extent of Growth In Federal Group

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Alleged Communist activity in one of the Nation-wide unions of Federal clerical employes is under investigation by the Dies Committee, The Post learned last night.

The inquiry, to determine the extent of Communist penetration, was initiated at the request of an official of the union, Chairman Dies revealed. This official, said Dies, supplied information on which the investigation is based.

The committee, whose rooms on the top floor of the old House Office Building last night were placed under guard of a Metropolitan Police Department detective, has obtained possession of Communist Party periodicals published for employes of the Washington Navy Yard and the Government Printing Office.

Labor Day Cited

Copies of the Navy Yard Worker, issued by the "Navy Yard Unit" of the Communist Party, and the GPO Worker, put out by the "GPO Branch" of the party, are expected to be introduced in evidence Friday when Communist suspects from the Navy Yard and G. P. O. will testify.

Six Navy Yard employes and two from the G. P. O. will be served subpenas. Today and tomorrow, the committee will hear testimony from "the most important witness the committee has yet heard," according to Dies. Identity of this witness was withheld, but one report said he was W. G. Krivitsky, former head of the Soviet intelligence service in Western Europe.

"Spy System" Assailed

Three copies of the "Navy Yard Worker" which The Post obtained are dated August, 1937, and February and August, 1938. The publication, apparently issued bi-monthly, gave as its address Communist Party headquarters.

Dealing chiefly with Navy Yard activities, the paper includes comments on political and foreign affairs, with frequent references to the U. S. S. R.

Overhand Grip Vs. Backhand Sluice Wins Dunking Title

By Inez Robb.
International News Service Staff Writer.

New York, Oct. 10.—Even in these times of stress and strife, the finer things in life will not be sunk without a trace as long as the National Dunking Association can keep a cruller afloat in a "cuppa java."

Today the association crowned as its nation-wide queen of etiquette a Long Island housewife, Mrs. Frank W. Fredericks, who uses the accepted overlapping grip in doughnut dunking and was able to answer such posers as "what would you wear at a dinner at your boss' home?"

Mrs. Fredericks, a pretty woman who modestly figured her manners were good but hardly of the championship variety, won in a walk from a field of 20 contestants who ate their way through a variety of problems at a luncheon at the Park Central Hotel.

In an atmosphere of abandoned gaiety reminiscent of the feast at which the Ghost of Banquo paid a return engagement, the contestants, representing all ages, sizes, sexes

Trade Aims Outlast War, Hull Asserts

Urges Expansion Within Restrictions Brought on by European Conflict

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—Looking forward to the time when the war is ended, Secretary Hull declared tonight this country must hold firm to a belief that only through enduring peace and sound international economic relations can "the human race continue to advance."

For the immediate future, he told the Twenty-sixth National Foreign Trade Convention, the United States must continue efforts to maintain and expand its trade program "within such temporary limitations as may be dictated by the exigencies of wartime conditions."

"We are, in fact, engaged today in important trade agreement negotiations notably with the American nations," he said. "We shall neglect no opportunity, whenever it may present itself, to expand the area of our negotiations."

Serious adjustment problems face American exporting industries, Hull said, because of the "drastic" restrictions by belligerents of imports unessential to hostilities.

Sees Continued U. S. Peace

Additional limitations on export trade probably would result, Hull continued, "if we decide to adopt, as a prudent national policy, a course of action under which our ships will be kept out of the zones of danger. . . ."

The war also will impose some difficulty on imports, he added, and in this respect the Government is prepared to do its "utmost" to remove or reduce unnecessary hardships for business interests.

He said it was his firm belief that this country would succeed in its effort to remain "secure and at peace."

President Sends Message

A communication was read from President Roosevelt, in which he described economic nationalism as "the most prolific breeder of wars" and expressing hope that business men were facing the problem of how war may be averted in the future.

"It is obvious that the economic well being of the individual business man is inextricably mingled with the well being of the Nation and of the world," Mr. Roosevelt said. "It is a matter of direct concern to him, therefore, that every effort be made at this time to maintain those liberal principles and practices upon which our commercial policy is based."

These are essential, the President concluded, "to a truly just and enduring peace settlement when the present conflict shall have ended."

Referring to the trade restrictions provided in the pending neutrality bill, Hull said:

"We can, if we wish, abstain from these self-imposed restrictions, but if we do so, it must be with a clear realization that we shall thus expose ourselves to the risk of dangerous incidents which will increase the possibility of our being drawn into the European conflict."

Cites Belligerent Controls

Rigorous government control of foreign trade by the belligerents has been put into effect, Hull said, adding, "whether the net result of these factors will be an increase or a decrease of our total exports to

No Peace on Hitler's Terms, Says Daladier; Soviet Masses Troops, Fleet in Baltic Area

Lithuania Ceded Vilna as Russia Backs Drive With Soldiers and Ships

By Witt Hancock.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 10.—Soviet Russia tonight concluded a series of three mutual assistance pacts with the Baltic states by signing a treaty with Lithuania which gave the Red army the right to establish several garrisons at unspecified places within the country to guard its frontiers.

Steady military and naval activity by the Soviet forces indicated the Kremlin's program in the north Baltic was not complete and that Finland would be next to hear Russian suggestions for her "protection"—and for the consolidation of Soviet strength in the north Baltic.

Hundreds of thousands of Red troops were concentrated along the frontiers facing the Baltic states and in the Leningrad area within 25 miles of the Finland border.

Dispatches from Kronstadt, the big naval base near Leningrad in the Gulf of Finland, said, "A vast armada of battleships" was concentrated there.

Lithuania Gets Vilna

Sailors were said to be studying their geographies of Finland and the Baltic states, as well as the habits of the people, and reports from the frontier said, "Military trains go daily to the Baltic sea."

In the Lithuanian treaty, Russia gave her little Baltic neighbor an important concession by agreeing to cede Vilna (Wilno) and a surrounding area.

Vilna is the ancient capital of a once-powerful Lithuania. The Lithuanians never have ceased to regard the city as their capital, despite the fact it has been in Polish hands since 1920 when a "rebel" Polish general seized it for Warsaw.

The two previous pacts concluded by the Soviet were with Estonia and Latvia, in which she won the right to station air, naval and land forces on their territories.

Delimitation of the Vilna territory was described in a supplementary protocol and map.

The points at which Red army, air and naval forces may be stationed for "protection of the state boundaries of Lithuania" are to be determined by "mutual agreement" as well as the strength of such forces at each point.

15-Year Treaty

The term of the treaty is 15 years, with a 10 year extension if not denounced by either party a year before its termination.

A clause provides for consultation in event of the "menace of aggression" against Lithuania or against the U. S. S. R. from across the territory of Lithuania. Another clause provides for outright assistance in event of aggression without mention of consultation.

In other details the treaty with Lithuania was of a pattern with the Estonian and Latvian pacts.

Ratification is to be within 6 days.

The Soviet is to provide Lithuania with military equipment.

Each binds itself not to conclude any alliances directed against the other.

The Soviet agrees not to interfere with the economic and social

The War Today

PREMIER DALADIER answered Fuehrer Hitler's peace proposals with what amounted to flat rejection on the basis that Hitler's word cannot be trusted.

SOVIET RUSSIA massed troops and warships on the borders of its neighbors, signed a nonaggression pact with Lithuania, returning Wilno (Vilna); Latvian pact gave the Soviet three naval bases; Estonia's cabinet resigned as final terms of Russian occupation were settled.

FINLAND BEGAN evacuation of its two chief southern cities, and manned its borders as a delegation left for Moscow "negotiations."

JOSEF STALIN, his ambition fired by Baltic successes, is turning imperialistic eyes toward central and southwest Asia, Augur says.

Ready to Transport Troops to Aaland Isles If Russia Threatens

By A. Marcus Tollett.

Helsinki, Oct. 10.—To protect the civil population against possible dangers arising from the political situation, the Finnish government today requested all inhabitants of Helsinki and Viipuri, particularly women and children who are able to leave and whose work does not necessitate their staying in the towns, to evacuate by Wednesday or Thursday.

Should an emergency eventually arise, the government action foreshadows an enforced evacuation in various rural districts in the west and north sections of the country.

This evening many thousands left on special trains.

Although the government announced there is no cause for apprehension, the first total blackout of Helsinki and Viipuri was tried tonight for a half hour and was carried out successfully.

It is believed the first talks in Moscow will take place tomorrow. The Finnish delegate to the Kremlin, Dr. Juho K. Paasikivi, with a military assistant, Col. A. Paasonen, and a secretary are scheduled to arrive there tonight. During his train journey to the Russian frontier Paasikivi received the good wishes of large crowds and ovations culminating in a demonstration at the border station of Terijoki.

[Finland's fleet was mobilizing tonight at the port of Abo (Turku) to transport troops and war materials to the nearby Aaland Islands if they are threatened by Russia, the United Press reported. The Finnish bourse (stock exchange) was closed until further notice.]

Finns to Resist

Helsinki, Oct. 10 (AP).—Soviet Russia massed thousands of troops and heavy naval forces today on the frontiers of neighboring Baltic states.

The whole of Finland, whence came the flying feet of Paavo Nurmi and the flying music of Jan Sibelius, concentrated its attention on the forthcoming conversations between a Finnish delegation and Soviet Russian officials in Moscow.

Many Finns were asking whether the Russians, who ruled Finland

Stalin Reported Turning Eyes Toward Iran

Delay in Turkish Pact Explained by New Drive Upon India

By Augur.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 10.—Josef Stalin's ambition, fired by the vastness of his easy success scored over the desperate Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, is unsatisfied with Europe as a theater. Stalin's eyes now turn to Asia.

It is not Russian expansion at the expense of a suffering China which interests him. That process is held in Moscow to be so natural that it needs no special attention of the dictator.

Stalin, with Baltic laurels still uncollected, already looks southward, where beyond his native Georgia, lies Iran, an object of traditional Russian aggressive policy because that way lies the road to the Persian Gulf and the riches of Arabia and India.

Why the Turks Are Delayed

By his present Baltic policy Stalin restores to Russia the ancient possessions of the czars. His ambition soars higher. He wants to accomplish what no czar could do, namely, to break through to the warm southern seas.

Whilst with regard to the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, the Russian policy is strictly conservative—the problem is rather to forbid entry into the Black Sea by foreign fleets than to send a Russian fleet into the Mediterranean—penetration of the Persian Gulf opens the perspectives of world-wide expansion. It is that ambition, now awakened in Stalin, which really explains the amazing delays in the conclusion of Russo-Turkish talks at Moscow.

Stalin Defied

It is known in London that Stalin demands from Turkey not only the maintenance of the Dardanelles barrier but also a nonaggression pact. Turkey's whole position depends upon the strength of the little known Saadabad pact, concluded with Iraq, Iran and Afghanistan in 1934. That agreement placed Turkey at the head of a potentially powerful group of states occupying a central position in Asia.

If the Turks sign the pact demanded by Stalin, the Saadabad

By P. J. Philip.

Paris, Oct. 10.—Premier Daladier this evening replied for his government and his country to Fuehrer Hitler's peace proposals, with a clear declaration that there could be no lasting peace on Hitler's terms.

Having destroyed Poland, the German chancellor was asking for a conference that would confirm his conquests and organize peace on that basis, Daladier said. After the annexation of Austria and after his seizure of Czecho-Slovakia, he had used the same language, Daladier pointed out, saying that Germany had nothing more to claim.

(British Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected Thursday to answer Hitler in a similar tone, Chamberlain was to have spoken tomorrow in the Commons, but his weekly review of the war was postponed 24 hours, reportedly to give France and the dominions opportunity to read the outline of his expected "no" to Hitler.)

No Surrender to Violence

For France, Daladier replied:

"Certainly we have always wanted and still want only sincere co-operation and loyal understanding to be established among peoples, but we are determined not to submit to the dictates of violence.

"We have taken up arms against aggression. We will lay them down only when we have certain guarantees of security which may not be put in doubt every six months.

"How can this security exist either for us or for the world if a nation is wiped off the map of Europe by force? What people would ever feel protected from aggression if it appeared thus every six months despite pledges against the annexation or partition of another people which had the right like itself to live independent and free?"

There could be no peace, he declared, until wrongs had been righted and human consciences satisfied.

Commends French Army

"They say," he continued, "that the fate of Poland concerns only two powers. We reply that it interests also, and first of all, the Poles."

The premier began his radio talk with a reminder that France was at war and that indiscretions were dangerous. He wanted, he said, to explain the thoughts and decisions behind the actions of his government.

Paying a warm tribute to the army and air force and to the British forces who are pouring into France, he said:

"Britain and France are mistress of the ocean and you know from the experience of history that those who finally hold the seas succeeded sooner or later in carrying off victory."

Scores French Communists

For French Communists and Communist propaganda he reserved some biting words. Only a few weeks ago, he recalled, they had been parading as the stoutest patriots. It was they who were "the real Jacobins." They had not words harsh enough to denounce the peaceful efforts of the government. They were all aflame to fight Hitler and his armies for liberty and the fatherland.

"Yet," he charged, "it sufficed for the Bolshevists to find it to their interest to agree with the Nazis and partition Poland with them for these great patriots simply to make their excuses for a peace of treason."

Busman's Holiday, or Something, Take by Convention Delegates, Who'll Follow Sightseeing Excursions With Big Banquet

Nearly 5,000 postmasters swarmed on Washington yesterday for the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters of the United States, and the effect on the town was as big as Jim Farley's smile.

They clogged all available hotel space.

Carrying them to Mount Vernon and Arlington were 80 chartered buses, a record caravan.

The Mayflower Hotel, convention headquarters, is arranging a banquet for Thursday—the last convention night—expected to shatter all world records in size. The chef, Nicholas Marchitello, yesterday issued a statement of policy to the kitchen help: "Keep out of my way!"

The postal card business boomed at Mount Vernon as thousands of postmasters, with their relatives, dashed off for the folks back home the lines they had seen a million times: "It's wonderful; wish you were here."

In the morning they had seen the Postmaster General greeting them at Constitution Hall with the knowledge that he could call most of them by their first name.

From there they went Interior Department Cafeteria for lunch of chicken salad, ham, cake and brick chocolate and vanilla ice cream. Outside, and at other strategic points, were 51 mail carriers. One explained 48 were representative of the stars in the flag; the forty-ninth represented the Post-office Department; the 50th the District, and the fifty-first the American flag.

The visitors were well guided to the cafeteria, in the basement of Mr. Ickes' building. At the top of the escalator an attendant was posted, repeating, "Take the first step

President Uses Adam and Eve To Spike Mediation Rumors

President Roosevelt, clearly indicating he is not contemplating taking action to mediate the European war, said yesterday that no offers or overtures with regard to peace have been received by this Government.

He said frankly he didn't think much of press stories from Berlin to the effect that Fuehrer Hitler would welcome mediation.

The President used an Adam-and-Eve parable to indicate that he has his own views as to the worth of the article originating in Germany, a parable he said he had cited to Lord Beaverbrook, English publisher, who was the President's luncheon guest yesterday.

He told reporters at his press conference that he and Lord Beaverbrook had discussed newspaper stories which used such phrases as: it was learned on highest authority, or, sources close to the President revealed. Then they got to talking about the Berlin reports, and the Adam-and-Eve story followed.

Mr. Roosevelt said he once had encountered a friend named Pete.

Over the Coffee

THIS FLOOD OF ORATORY

Just as some of his fellow Senators were reaching the boiling point because of the claim by a pro-Nazi magazine in New York that Senator Borah had contributed a special article to it, the Idaho Senator took cognizance of the story and issued a denial he had written any article for the magazine in question.

Harlan Miller

The article, which appeared in Today's Challenge, was lifted apparently without his permission, so far as his office records show, from a letter by him in a student's publication at St. Olaf's College, in Northfield, Minn., which had solicited an utterance from him.

Mr. Borah insists on making it clear, however, that if Today's Challenge had asked him for permission he would have granted it permission to reprint the St. Olaf's letter. "And any magazine would be the better for it," said Mr. Borah.

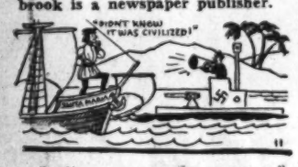
The pro-Nazi magazine had erroneously printed an editorial note with the article saying "it was placed at our disposal by the veteran statesman" himself. It had resulted in several editorials criticizing Borah, and at least one Senator was preparing to mention the matter on the floor of the Senate.

• • • •

FUN IN THE CAPITAL: One eminent hostess here has decided not to invite pro and antiembargo partizans to the same dinner party... The diplomatic crew may seem glamorous at night, but in the Senate gallery in the afternoon, listening to speeches, they look like a bunch of constituents from Missouri. Newsmen who heard the President repeat at yesterday's press conference the funny story he told Lord Beaverbrook at lunch couldn't help wondering whether the Briton actually got the point. Newspapers were the butt of the story, and Beaverbrook is a newspaper publisher.



"rediscovery may be necessary"

Tomorrow is Columbus Day, and as you celebrate it you might make a mental note that if the war goes on for a few years and if we get isolated as some statesmen propose, it may be necessary for another Columbus to discover us all over again after the war, if he can get through the floating mines and submarines...

• • • •

You'd better celebrate it, too; if Columbus hadn't discovered this continent you might be holed up between the Maginot Line and the West Wall this minute.

• • • •

Acoustics in the Senate are unsuited for delicate nuances of oratory. If a Senators lowers his voice during a speech he might as well be mumbling in his beard, so far as listeners in the galleries are concerned, or even other Senators sitting only 30 feet away.

• • • •

So Senators who want every word heard must shout from beginning to end of their masterpieces, as Vandenberg did. Others take advantage of this phenomenon to rest during passages not particularly brilliant, by speaking in ordinary tones. At moments, Borah seems to be meditating half aloud. When Overton lowered his voice there was a suspicion he was slipping into the Cajan dialect of southwestern Louisiana.

"—he meditates in the sun"

Borah differs from most Senators in one respect: He likes to sit and think occasionally. On sunny days he can be seen seated on the edge of a fountain on the Capitol Plaza, toying with a twig as he meditates and absorbes some ultra-violet rays.

• • • •

A man from Mars who dropped in for a peek at the debate of the decade at the Senate might, from a glance at the galleries, think it was a social rather than a political occasion. Except for the stark masculinity of the "men only" gallery on one corner, the seats are crowded with debs, matrons and dowagers, looking a little as if they were listening to the Flonzaley Quartet, in their furs, and hats which are another clue to the confusion in women's minds.

• • • •

Connoisseurs of oratory argue these days whether the current flood of oratory is better or worse than that of Calhoun, Clay and Webster. The concensus is that some of it may be as good after it's polished, edited and bound in books. Those rounded long sentences read easier than they listen. A few, like young La Follette, are streamlining, with phrases like "razzle dazzle" and "keep your eye on the ball."

Chandler, No. 1 in Kentucky, Smiles He's No. 96 in Senate

Barkley Escorts Former Governor to Rostrum to Take Oath; First Ballot Is Cast With Administration Forces

Former Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky yesterday smiled his way through Senate "swearing in" ceremonies, patched up old differences with Senate Majority Leader Barkley, and cast his first ballot with the Administration in an important Senate vote.

Then ruefully the new Senator told reporters:

"I was No. 1 back in Kentucky but I am just No. 96 here."

Escorted to the rostrum by Barkley, who beat him in Kentucky's last senatorial elections, Chandler found himself seated later in "freshman's row," that thin strip of seats on the minority side, where Senate Democrats rub shoulders with Republicans.

Chandler succeeded to the Senate place of the late Senator M. M. Logan by resigning as Kentucky's Governor and accepting a Senate appointment from his successor in office, Gov. Keen Johnson.

Chandler was administered the Senate oath by Vice President Garner an hour ahead of schedule so he might vote against a motion to split the Administration's neutrality program.

Senate Sergeant at Arms Jurney met him at the station and advised him of the vote. Result was Chandler skipped his lunch and took his oath at 1:30 p. m., instead of 2:30 as scheduled. The vote came at 2. Chandler's wife and an enthusiastic Kentucky delegation witnessed the ceremony.

"They said they needed me," Chandler told reporters, explaning why his plans were moved up.

Chandler, who fought Barkley to a standstill but narrowly lost to the Senate leader in Kentucky's bitter senatorial primaries, said he had made the first gesture of "appeasement" toward Barkley in presenting him with an umbrella in Kentucky last week. Barkley said the umbrella was a ribless wreck when he received it, but he accepted it in the spirit offered.

A reporter asked if he classified himself as a New Dealer.

"Well," smiled the former Governor, "I took Barkley that umbrella."

The inevitable third-term question was asked.

"If the President is nominated for a third term, I will support him."

"Will you support him for the nomination?"

Chandler stood on his first reply.

A good sign that Democratic chieftans, as well as Barkley, have accepted his appeasement umbrella was a friendly interview granted the new Senator by Postmaster General Farley.

California's 'Ham-and-Eggs' Plan Fantastic, President Says

President Roosevelt declared yesterday that his condemnation of the California "ham and eggs" pension proposal as a "fantastic" scheme still stands.

He explained, at his press conference, that statements which he previously made concerning the proposal could be used in connection with an election in California November 7 to decide whether the plan shall be incorporated in the State constitution.

Furthermore, the statements were made to apply to other such proposals, including one, on which Ohio is to vote, to give $50 a month to every person over 60.

Defeated Last Year

In previous statements, made before California voted down, by a 250,000 majority, a similar constitutional amendment last November, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that, in his opinion, the proposal was financially unsound.

It contemplates payment of "$30 every Thursday" to all persons more that 50 years of age.

The President was prepared when a California newspaper correspondent asked him to comment on the coming election. He referred to a sheaf of papers in which he characterized the plan as "something fantastic, and a short cut to Utopia."

Asked how he happened to assemble the sheaf of papers, he said he had understood some questions might be asked about the California election.

$976,000,000 A Year

Included in the papers was a memorandum, prepared by M. R. Diggs when he was Acting Comptroller of the Treasury, explaining that the plan would call for payment of $1,580 each annually to 600,000 persons in California, thereby imposing a tax on the remaining 5,400,000 people of the State amounting to $976,000,000 a year, or one-fourth of the annual income of all persons living in the State.

Although it was easily defeated last year, opponents of the scheme are emphasizing the need for getting people to go to the polls this year.

Unlike last year, the pension scheme is the one thing of major importance before the voters in the coming election.

Independents Held Victims of Big Oil Firms

Being Forced From Capital, Monopoly Committee Is Told

Independent gasoline dealers are being forced out of the National Capital by business tactics employed by the major oil companies, L. S. Scott, general manager of the Loughborough Oil Co., Washington, told the Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday.

Quoting extensively from tables compiled by The Washington Post, Scott, former NRA chairman of the district petroleum code committee, testified that "the major oil companies have for all practical purposes actual control of the market" in Washington.

"The anti-trust and other laws are being circumvented in devious ways," he said, "of which your department and the Federal Trade Commission are well aware"

Because the major oil companies are "freezing" out retail outlets throughout the city, Scott declared, the independent wholesale marketers are finding that the potential retail outlets for their products are being gradually eliminated, and if these practices are permitted to continue, these wholesale marketers will be forced out of business entirely."

Citing The Washington Post survey, which he characterized as the only comprehensive data available on the subject, Scott pointed out that as of December, 1938, there were 619 retail gasoline outlets in the District, of which 499 were operated or controlled by the major oil companies, leaving 120 operated by independents.

Of the 120 independent stations, 41 were partially controlled by major oil concerns, he added. Thus only 70, or 13 per cent of the total retail outlets, he figured, are strictly independent.

The major oil companies sold approximately 70 per cent of the total gasoline consumed in the District in 1938, Scott testified, and three of these marketed 55 per cent of the total.

The only hope of salvation for the independent marketers, Scott told the committee, is for marketing to be divorced entirely from production, refining and transportation in the petroleum field.

First Lady Asks Why Reds Can't Drink Her Tea

By the Associated Press

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, center of a tea party tempest blown up Monday by the Dies committee's un-American investigation, observed yesterday that she knew of no reason why Communists should not have tea with her.

A Dies committee witness, Kenneth Goff, had testified that William Hinckley, chairman of the American Youth Congress, and other members of that organization were Communists when they sat across a White House tea table from the First Lady two years ago.

Hinckley denied in New York Monday night that he was a Communist or a member of the Young Communist League, as Goff testified, as upon this Mrs. Roosevelt added her own denial yesterday.

She said that since the tea she had become personally acquainted with Hickley, Joseph Cadden, executive secretary of the congress, and other persons active in youth movements, and added: "Those I have known since are certainly not Communists."

President Obeys Wife's Censorship

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt declined yesterday to be drawn into discussion of Mrs. Roosevelt's newspaper column, "My Day."

A reporter remarked that sometimes he had been critical of columns and asked him to give his opinion of the article written by the First Lady.

No later ago than yesterday morning, the President said with a grin, she told him not to.

Slight Drop Noted in Sentiment for Neutrality Change Since Debate Started

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 10.—A slight decline in public sentiment for changing the neutrality law has taken place in the week since Congress began its historic debate on the neutrality issue, according to early returns of an American Institute of Public Opinion survey.

Continuously for many weeks the Institute has been measuring the trend of sentiment on the neutrality law, and the effect on public opinion of various speeches and debates devoted to the issue. During the past few days, after Senators Borah and Vandenberg had presented their case against repeal of the arms embargo and Senators Connally and Pittman had presented the opposite case, Institute interviewers were busy gathering the opinions of voters throughout the country. Semifinal returns show that the week's debate halted for the moment the rise which previous studies had noted in sentiment for changing the neutrality law.

GEORGE GALLUP

The issue which has been put to the public in the Institute's continuous surveys is:

"Do you think Congress should change the neutrality law so that England and France or any other nations can buy war supplies here?"

Before the President's speech on the opening day of Congress, September 21, 57 persons in every 100 with opinions thought the law should be changed. After his speech the proportion rose to 62 in every 100, but today, since the Borah forces began presenting their case in the Senate, the figure has dropped slightly. The trend follows:

BEFORE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH TO CONGRESS (Sept. 21)

Favor change	57%
Oppose change	43

AFTER PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

Favor change	62%

TODAY—AFTER FIRST WEEK'S DEBATE IN CONGRESS

Favor change	60%
Oppose change	40

To what extent sentiment may continue to change as the debate goes on, will be revealed in subsequent surveys. When the President presented his ide of the case several weeks ago, sentiment was affected, as the survey figures show. The speeches of Senators Borah and Vandenberg, presenting the other side of the case, rounded out the debate and there was some change of opinion. But it may be sometime before both the Senate and the House take action on the bill, and it is entirely possible that the public's attitude may be altered by the course of events or by what is said in the coming weeks or months.

It is unlikely, however, that there will be any important change of sentiment on the cash-and-carry plan which the Administration desires to see adopted. Even though a majority of voters may favor selling war supplies to belligerent countries, an overwhelming number (90 per cent) want such supplies to be shipped in foreign bottoms and for cash.

Reason for Opinions

Among those voters who want to see the arms embargo lifted, the chief reason is an economic reason. The principal argument they advance is that such a step might help American business and reduce employment. The second reason is one of sympathy for England and France, or, as one voter puts it: "What would become of the Allies if they couldn't get war materials?"

Those voters who think the neutrality law should remain unchanged and the arms embargo kept in force argue, principally, that to lift the embargo would lead the United States into war. Other groups declare that the United States should not sell arms to any nation, that it would be an act of unneutrality to change the law after war has started, and that if the United States doesn't send war supplies abroad, "the war will end that much sooner."

Mexico to Give Farms to Citizens Living in U. S.

Mexico City, Oct. 10 (AP).—The Mexican government today announced a farm resettlement program under way to repatriate 19,500 nationals now living in economic distress in the United States.

The program provides that the returning Mexicans be given land and equipment as an initial stake, with long-term loans from the Agricultural Bank for seed and implements.

Informed quarters said President Cardenas had a three-fold purpose in launching the movement: To carry out his policy of helping nationals in distress at home and abroad; increase agricultural production of prime foodstuffs, now said to be insufficient for home consumption, and answer criticism that Mexico should aid its own nationals instead of refugees from Spain.

Convoyed Iroquois To Dock Today

New York, Oct. 10.—The liner Iroquois, which, according to a warning to the American Government last week from the head of the German navy, was to be sunk when she neared the American coast, under circumstances similar to those attending the sinking of the British Athenia, is scheduled to arrive "sometime tomorrow" with 584 refugees from the war zone, convoyed by four destroyers and a Coast Guard cutter.

Hoover Favors Sale of Only Defense Arms

Would Bar Bombers But Permit Shipping Of Pursuit Planes

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—Former President Hoover tonight urged the United States to "raise a standard against barbarism" in warfare by prohibiting sale of bombing planes, poison gas and submarines to any nation at any time, whether neutral or warring.

"I do not like to think of the day when bombing planes, engaged in the killing of women and children, on both or either side in this war, will be identified as the product of American manufacture," he said in a statement which he described as a response to requests for advice on the neutrality bill from several Senators and Representatives.

"Equally important, and from exactly the same reasoning, I am convinced that we should permit nations to buy from us the instruments by which they can defend themselves from such barbarities," the statement continued.

For Defense Weapons' Sale

"We should therefore permit the sale of pursuit airplanes, light observation planes, anti-aircraft guns, and any other instruments of defense against attacks on civilians."

Hoover said he suggested a ban on weapons which could be used to attack civilian populations as a third alternative to the "repeal" and "no repeal" arms embargo proposals now being debated in Congress.

"After war itself, the threat of destruction of open cities and the killing of women and children is the greatest step to barbarism of a thousand years," he said. "And this is no emotional expression. We have seen it in horrible action in China, Spain, Ethiopia and Poland."

Cloudy weather, with showers and temperatures "quite a bit" cooler, was forecast for the District today. Today's maximum will probably be 26 degrees below yesterday's, officials said.

Hoover declared the major purpose of bombing planes, poison gas and submarines was not to destroy the enemy's source of supplies, as he said might be argued, but "to terrify or kill civilians."

Fears "National Regret"

"I cannot bring myself to believe that the United States should ever sell this type of weapons to anybody . . .

"Equally, I do not like to think of the time when civilian populations will have been attacked and we have deprived them of the weapons by which they could have defended their women and children from such barbarities.

"Should aerial catastrophe come to either side, we will see a national regret that we had either contributed to it or failed to aid in its prevention. And that is exactly the kind of explosive emotion that might lead us to enter into war.

"I do not claim this alternative proposal answers every argument on either side of this question," he said. "It does avoid the extreme objections and dangers of either repeal or no repeal.

"We would not be participating in 'mass murder.' On the contrary, we would be contributing to prevent it. By such action, America would again be raising a standard against barbaric action."

130 Post Employes To Get Awards For Safe Driving

One hundred and thirty employes of The Washington Post who have driven their automobiles without an accident for periods ranging from 3 months to 1 year will receive safety certificates this morning at a meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, will present 58 certificates to drivers who have completed a year without mishap. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, will address the group, outlining police department efforts to promote safety and enlist public support in the endless battle against highway casualties.

Award winners represent five departments of The Post. The certificates are presented by the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co. Safe driver cards will be given to 31 employes for a 3 months "no accident" record; 25 employes for a 6 months record, and 18 employes for 9 months without an accident.

Argentina Cuts U. S. Off Favored Coal Trade List

Buenos Aires, Oct. 10 (AP).—Hopes of United States exporters of finding a big coal market in Argentina were given a setback today by announcement of a new exchange control policy.

The new policy removes the United States, Belgium, Poland and several others from a list of nations allowed to export coal to Argentina at the favorable exchange rate of 15 pesos to the pound sterling.

Hereafter the United States will be forced to submit each request to import coal for examination, while Britain and other favored nations will be allowed to export without limitation at the 15 peso rate.

The action of the exchange board was not explained.

Little Margaret Gates, 3½ years old, is assured that this will not hurt, but exercises a woman's privilege and cries anyway as Dr. A. M. Grossman, examines her at Children's Hospital preparatory to a tonsillectomy. Inset—Ernest Hively, 5, is thankful, and smiles, because most of the plaster cast has been taken from his body. Ernest, victim of infantile paralysis, has been at Children's Hospital since August 20

Ernest Hively, Not Expected to Live 2 Months Ago, Recovers at Children's Hospital Through Gift to Institution

It is still six or seven weeks before Thanksgiving, depending upon which date you plan to celebrate, but 5-year-old Ernest Hively was beating the gun yesterday and giving thanks, he's that happy.

Ernest was smiling and gay, though he cannot move and less than two months ago he was not expected to live. He was cheerful because most of that plaster cast had been removed from his little body, because his nurse is so nice, because he was on the sun porch and could hear the birds singing.

He has been a patient at Children's Hospital since August 20, when he was admitted with an undiagnosed ailment that made his legs weak. Within a few days his case was found to be infantile paralysis.

"For a time it looked as though he could not pull through," said a resident physician. "His arms, legs, abdomen and neck became paralyzed. On September 5 he was placed in a plaster cast, which covered everything but his toes, hands and head.

"Now he has reached the point where the cast may be removed, piece by piece. Ernest will have to remain in the hospital for several more weeks and then will follow a long period, lasting years perhaps, of treatment to bring the life back into those limbs."

If grit helps, Ernest will make a complete recovery. His home is at 1806 Burke street southeast.

Contributions being received by Childrens Hospital in its drive for funds to wipe out a $25,000 deficit are helping to restore Ernest's health. Of the institution's 200 beds, only 25 are devoted to private cases, the rest being for the service of free or part-pay patients.

Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent, yesterday reported that $10,000 has been received so far in the hospital's solicitation-by-letter campaign. No more letters are going out, to avoid conflict with the coming Community Chest drive, but voluntary donations will be accepted at all times, said Miss Gibson.

She made public the hospital's summer report, for the months of June, July, August and September, which showed that 2,597 in-patients were treated and 22,597 dispensary visits made during that period.

Patients treated and examined in the X-ray department totaled 3,896, compared with 1,295 in the same four months in 1938. The number of laboratory reports was 17,372, an increase of more than 600. But the sharpest gain was in the dental department, 1,329 children being treated, compared with 722 in 1938.

Miss Gibson ascribed the dentistry increase to the fact that, for the first time, a full-time resident dentist has been on duty since July 1. His services are provided by the women's auxiliary of the District Dental Society.

G-Man Chief Asks Police to Help Hunt Spies

San Francisco, Oct. 10 (AP).—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, called upon police chiefs today to improve law enforcement standards "both for national defense and self defense."

Asserting that no vigilantes are needed, Hoover said in an address at the annual convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs:

"It is the unfortunate plight of America, in this period of chaos in world affairs, to become the jousting ground for the subversive forces which work against our best interest, even our national existence.

"That these may go beyond the ordinary espionage activities and into the realms of sabotage and the fomenting of outbreaks and riots is, of course, not beyond possibility. Such things have been tried before."

Louisianans Boo Gov. Long In Jury Fight

Prosecutor Faces Impeachment in Orleans Parish Case

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Oct. 10.—An effort to impeach District Attorney Charles A. Byrne, of New Orleans, moved ahead tonight after 5,000 booing persons gathered before Byrne's offices demanding his recall and loudly booed and denounced mention of Gov. Earl K. Long.

Civil Judge Harold A. Moise announced he would appoint an attorney tomorrow to institute impeachment proceedings against the prosecutor in accordance with a request of 25 citizens who filed a petition charging Byrne with "incompetence, favoritism and gross misconduct" in office.

The mass meeting and petition came on the heels of another petition, which caused an uproar in criminal district court yesterday when Judge George P. Platt refused to permit it to be read. In this petition seven members of the Orleans Parish grand jury accused Byrne of frustrating their work and asked his removal. Two jurors were held for an hour and then dismissed.

Long, who hurried to New Orleans this afternoon, was not available for comment on reports three Federal investigators questioned him in his capitol office yesterday. The Federal grand jury, in session here, has indicted former Gov. Leche, Seymour Weiss and other leading politicians.

Prolonged boos, yells and hisses rang across the Criminal Court Building's steps when the name of Long was mentioned by T. Hale Boggs, chairman of the People's League, which called the meeting. He was reading a petition to the Governor asking a recall election on Byrne.

When Boggs read "to the Honorable Governor of Louisiana," the crowd refused to let him continue, although he asserted this salutation was "but a matter of form."

"Let's throw Long out, too," many cried. The crowd finally allowed Boggs to continue when he amended his statement to read "to the Unelected Governor of Louisiana." Long became Governor when Leche resigned four months ago.

Boggs ended the meeting with the assertion the time had come for "action," and said the State must "be redeemed," and all "corrupt politicians removed once and for all from public office.

Roaring its approval, the crowd dispersed, the noise penetrating the courtroom, where Byrne's assistants had started a public hearing of the grand juror's charges against him. After a short session the three-judge court recessed to Monday for further inquiry.

Jury Exonerates Policeman in Blackjack Death

Policeman Ray D. McClure, First Precinct, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday by a verdict of "justifiable homicide" in the death of Arthur J. McMahon, 73, of 2322 First street northwest.

Deliberating less than 15 minutes, the jury decided that McClure "used his blackjack on the deceased in the performance of his duty."

McMahon died of head injuries and pneumonia at Sibley Hospital October 5, after fighting with McClure at a night club on Ninth street northwest, the Friday before. The policeman struck McMahon several times with his blackjack when the latter resisted arrest.

Child Ends Four-Year Sleep, Brain Too Scarred to Know It

By the Associated Press

Erie, Pa., Oct. 10.—Six-year-old Maxine Yarrington, blue-eyed "sleeping beauty," has awakened from four years of slumber but her mind will be blank, her "Prince Charming" said today.

Dr. H. B. Emerson, child specialist, who has treated Maxine daily since she was stricken by sleeping sickness, said her brain no longer functions because it has been badly scarred by the disease.

"Sometimes victims of encephalitis lethargica recover completely or die," he said. "Instead of dying Maxine has been left without mentality."

Maxine still does not see, although her eyes may open. She will eat all the food placed in her mouth. She goes to sleep like a normal child yet when she awakens she does not know it.

She was stricken on her second birthday, September 24, 1935, and has spent each succeeding birthday and Christmas in her crib. She has had cakes or candles for her birthdays and never saw the dolls and other gifts sent her by hundreds who read of her plight.

Dr. Emerson said she had passed through all the symptoms of acute encephalitis lethargica, including fever, fear, loss of power in arms and legs, rigidity of the neck, drowsiness and sleep. She recovered from all of them, but now her brain no longer is capable of being awakened.

"No matter how long she lives, it is beyond medical science to remedy this condition," he said.

Child Sleeps 58 Days

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP).—Blonde-tressed 5-year-old Doreen Shook slumbered a fifty-eighth successive day in an isolated hospital ward today as physicians sought to diagnose the ailment.

Sinking into somnolence three days after being stricken mildly ill August 11, the girl is being fed by liquid nourishment through her nose. Five blood transfusions have been given. At times, physicians said, she has had temperatures as high as 107 degrees.

Roosevelt Plans Further Army Increase

Indicates Total Strength of About 600,000 Men

By John G. Norris.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that further increases in Army strength are planned, designed to provide a force of about 600,000 men ready for action in case of war.

He told his press conference, however, that such a total included the National Guard and Reserves and that the present combined strength of the armed forces is not far below this figure.

The comment was the result of a statement made earlier in the day by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson. Johnson said that the Nation should profit by the lesson of Poland and provide a force of 600,000 men ready for instant mobilization. Asked about this figure, the President said it was not far from Administration aims.

Computations Differ

Because military authorities compute man power in two different ways, the exact extent of the contemplated increase was not revealed by the President's statement. Officials pointed out that Johnson was speaking of "mobilization day" troops, now numbering about 400,000 men, and soon to be augmented by 32,000. The total Army strength includes not only these "mobilization day" troops—most of the Regular Army, all the National Guard, and some of the Reserves—but also overseas garrisons and Reserve officers to train and lead men recruited after a war begins.

In this connection, officials recalled that just last week the War Department announced plans for new Army units, "when and if" an additional 53,000 men are provided for; the Regular Army, and that Gen. John J. Pershing and Congressional leaders have advocated expansion of the Regular establishment by this figure and the National Guard by nearly 200,000.

65,000 Rifles Ordered

Meanwhile, the War Department pushed forward its armament program, awarding a contract for 65,000 semi-automatic rifles to the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. and other munitions orders totaling $31,055,388.

The Winchester order, together with 103,000 of the new weapons being manufactured in the Army arsenals, will fully equip the Regular Army and National Guard with the new rifles. Described as the world's most effective shoulder weapon, the quick-firing "Garand" guns will replace the old Springfield. Officials state the weapon will increase the Infantry fire power 2½ times.

Plane Engines Bought

Largest of the other arms awards was a $6,966,292 contract to the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, of Paterson, N. J., for an undisclosed number of warplane engines, said to be among the most powerful in the world. Two types were ordered, one of 1,000 horsepower, for the newest "flying fortresses," and the other of 1,500 horsepower, for a new all-metal medium bomber, still in production.

Assistant Secretary Johnson's proposal for an expansion of the Army came in a speech at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on "The Lessons of Poland." He declared that Poland was defeated because her army was not ready to fight immediately, because it was not large enough to defend all Polish frontiers, because of German supremacy in modern weapons, and "finally, because she placed too much faith in others."

No Match for "Blitzkrieg"

Urging that we analyze our defenses in the light of Poland's fate and correct any deficiencies, Johnson declared that the American Army is not adequate in numbers or modern weapons to fight a "blitzkrieg." Like Poland, we need time to prepare. Nor, like the Poles', is our Army and Navy strong enough to defend our entire frontier—the Western Hemisphere—he said.

"How about our own tanks, our combat cars and our anti-tank weapons?" he asked, after reciting Poland's inferiority in this respect. "Had our mechanized units met the German Panzers we would have been outnumbered in combat cars, in light tanks, and in medium tanks. Against them, we could raise but a few anti-tank guns. We have not even one full strength mechanized brigade. In Poland alone, Germany used ten Panzer divisions."

agreement would be stultified because should Iran be attacked from the Caucasus the Turkish army would be prevented from going to the assistance of Shah Pehlevi. It is resistance on that point which is at the bottom of the Turko-Russian controversy. The Turkish government is defiantly refusing to accept Stalin's dictation.

Meanwhile the Germans are continuing to use Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, as an instrument of attempts to seduce Ankara from an Anglo-French alliance. Von Papen now offers to Turkey the famous Mosul Oil Fields, now in the possession of Iraq. The Turks smilingly refuse to consider the suggestion, knowing that a move in that direction would do more harm than profit by destroying the Saadabad group of Asiatic powers.

Ankara Woos Rome

The power with which Turkey is working on increasingly good relations is Italy. It would not be surprising if the improvement soon became apparent to the world in some tangible form. Italian policy is governed by the increasing determination of Premier Mussolini to keep out of war and to keep unchained by Hitler.

German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's agreement with Stalin does not leave a place under the Balkan sun for the Italians. It is no wonder that Italian diplomacy is busily engaged with Balkan capitals thwarting German moves and promoting unity among Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Turkey, and counteracting German intrigues in Bulgaria.

Price Abuses Hit In British Bill

London, Oct. 10.—Manufacturers and tradesmen who abuse the war risk insurance scheme by making it an excuse for exorbitant price increases will be liable to heavy penalties for profiteering under a government bill just introduced.

Certificates vouching for fair prices are to be issued to traders by "watchdog" committees representing both business and consuming interests.

Swedish Steamer Sunk, 9 Missing

London, Oct. 10 (INS).—The Swedish steamer Vistula, 1,018 tons, was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea Sunday about 40 miles northeast of the Shetland Islands, it was announced today.

One lifeboat with nine members of ship's crew was sighted and the men rescued by a barge which brought them to Scotland. Nine other men, including the captain of the ship, were reported missing.

here with those in the Soviet Union. It is a time to pledge to work for a Soviet America!" Another, in the same issue (August, 1938), says:

"In the Soviet Union . . . officers and men eat the same food at the same table. The same equality exists between officers and civilians. There is no kowtowing to uniforms in a peoples' democracy! There is none of this undemocratic snobbery and superiority. This is the proof that there is more real democracy under socialism than there can be under capitalism."

In the issue of February, 1938, an attack on the "spy system" in the Navy Yard includes the following comment:

"High ranking naval officers sneak up on poor devils that might be off their guard a moment! Not even in uniform—no sir! They do their low snooping in civilian clothes. I'd say it's time they shelve that fine custom, and begin to think a bit more of how to improve conditions for us, instead of spendin' good Government money stoogin' on us."

This issue includes the information that "The Navy Yard Worker is becoming increasingly popular and influential in the yard. Its message reaches an estimated 3,500 men and their families."

Supports C. I. O. Union

The lead article in the issue of August, 1937, dealing with formation of a C. I. O. union among the technical staff of the Model Basin here says:

"We urge all technicians to join a really democratic union of technical men, not alone for any personal gain which might be forthcoming in the near future, but also to aid in building up a weapon for the struggle between democracy and dictatorships. If you are for democracy, join the C. I. O."

The committee held no hearing yesterday. Dies announced that he plans to subpena Fritz Heberling, said to be an official of the German consulate in Chicago and leader of 1,000 German citizens living there.

It was learned that in his testimony at an executive session of the committee Friday, Martin Chancey, local secretary of the Communist Party, said that the party's branches are: Frederick Douglass (U street northwest); East Washington (Navy Yard); Columbia Heights and Georgetown.

Told to Memorize Names

Chancey said that leaders of Communist branches here were told some time ago to memorize members' names and addresses so they could destroy membership lists.

J. B. Matthews, committee investigator, asked Chancey, in reference to a report dealing with Communist activities in the District: "You know you made it to somebody?" The answer was "Yes."

"Within the last year?" queried a committee member.

"Yes" was the reply.

(Chancey protested Monday to Attorney General Murphy that, contrary to Dies' assertions, he had not identified the report.)

Communist workers and then team up with their leaders. In France, he promised, there would be no confusion of workers, whatever their political opinions, with the men who sought to mislead and betray them.

In another passage the premier contrasted the thoughts of a German and a French soldier. The former must be wondering, he said, how he could reconcile the destruction of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland with the claim that his government had protested the Treaty of Versailles in the name of the right of peoples to their full independence.

The French soldier, he declared, knows that his country has done everything possible to preserve peace, that it oppresses no people and that he is fighting to protect his country from the tragic fate that has during the last two years overtaken millions of men, wome and children in Europe.

Berlin Notes Disagreement

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP).—Informed quarters tonight said Premier Daladier's radio address today "naturally disagrees with the German standpoint."

There was no immediate publication of Daladier's speech, but assurances were given "essential points" would be carried fully by the German press.

Nazi Bombing Mission Fails

London, Oct. 10 (AP).—An admiralty communique tonight amplified reports of German air attacks on the British North Sea fleet Sunday and Monday with a statement that the Germans failed to score a single hit while several bombers were believed to have "failed to return to Germany."

(The German high command today reported Nazi warplanes had scored six hits on a British cruiser off the west coast of Norway yesterday, "and two German planes were obliged to make emergency landings on Danish soil."

The British communique said: "Although dispatches have not yet been received, a somewhat fuller account may now be given of the series of minor actions on the North Sea reported in yesterday's communique.

"An enemy squadron reported and shadowed by our patrol on Sunday afternoon, aware that its presence was known, appears to have turned back and in the night to have eluded our forces which did not sight it.

"On Monday morning a British destroyer in a heavy sea sighted an enemy aircraft and turned stern-on to the sea to fight her guns.

"A level bombarding attack was made at 5,000 feet.

"Her bombs burst about 400 yards to starboard. A second and larger aircraft, making a similar attack, was probably hit by our guns.

"Three larger bombs were dropped, but again fell wide, about a half mile from the ship. The first attacker came back and tried a dive bombing attack, but it was driven off by our fire. The aircraft may have been hit. Two bombs were dropped and missed by over 200 yards.

"The same afternoon, a British cruiser squadron was attacked by bombers and engaged them for over an hour.

"In none of these actions has any British ship been hit or damaged, and there have been no British casualties."

Papers Attack Allies

Soviet leaders already are in conference with German delegates who seek to reinforce the Reich's wartime economy, making Moscow the continued center of European diplomatic activity.

Trade negotiations designed to provide food products for Germany were indicated today as a German agricultural products trade delegation which recently completely an agreement with Bulgaria prepared to leave Sofia for Moscow.

While Russia is concentrating at the moment on questions involving the Baltic, negotiations are still pending with Turkey regarding Dardanelles and Black Sea problems.

Thus, diplomatic discussions involving the entire Russian frontier from the Baltic to the Black Sea are being carried on by the Soviet.

Foreign quarters saw the Soviets taking advantage of the preoccupation of Britain, France and Germany with war, to strengthen her frontiers and solidify her position.

There was much speculation but no answer to the enigma of the Kremlin. Russia's objectives were as secretive as her diplomatic moves are manifold and there was no indication of what the next move would be.

Moscow papers continued to attack Britain and France and indicate they were responsible for the continuance of hostilities.

At the same time, the government's moves seemed to indicate she intended to seize any strategic advantages which would be of immense value in the event Russia ever went to war against Germany.

Germany and Russia have emerged as official partners in the partition of Poland and are now engaged in talks for conclusion of a trade agreement.

Yet some foreign quarters believed the government's moves were directed at no othr nation in its drive for Baltic dominance.

Latvia Ratifies Pact

Riga, Latvia, Oct. 10 (AP).—The government today ratified the Russian-Latvia pact, which greatly strengthen the position of Soviet Russia in the Baltic. It closely followed a similar Russian pact with Estonia:

The agreement provided:

Three Latvian ports are set aside as Russian naval bases.

Russia is to sell Latvia munitions at low cost.

Both parties are to extend military aid in case of aggression.

Neither party is to conclude a treaty directed against the other.

Each party will observe the sovereignty and social system of the other.

Estonian Cabinet Quits

Copyright by New York Times.

Tallinn, Oct. 10.—The Estonian cabinet resigned tonight. It is rumored the new prime minister will be Jueri Uluots, president of the Estonian Parliament, who went to Moscow to partake in the Soviet-Estonian negotiations.

The new foreign minister will be, it is believed, Ants Piip, who was also a member of the delegation sent to Moscow.

Negotiations between the Soviet Union and Estonia have been satisfactorily concluded, it was announced here.

Troops to Enter Estonia

Tallinn, Estonia, Oct. 10 (AP).—A supplementary Estonian-Russian agreement today cleared the way for the march of 20,000 Red troops to their new bases in Estonia, but there was no report tonight of such troop movements.

It was said unofficially that Friday had been set for the entrance of the Red troops.

Tallinn official quarters said the soldiers would cross the border at Narwa and march to the coast by way of Haapsalu and Virtsu, avoiding Tallinn.

The agreement was said to provide that the Soviet troops would march by road under escort of Estonian police and that Estonian police would remain in authority over the new bases.

Informed Lithuanians said a population of 500,000 to 600,000 would come into Lithuania as a result of Russia's cession of the territory about Vilna. They said Lithuania would get back about half the territory she would have received under the Soviet-Lithuanian treaty of 1920 which recognized Lithuanian independence, had that treaty not been upset by Poland's seizure of the area.

3 Belligerents Pledge Fairness To Prisoners

Britain, France and Reich Tell U. S. They'll Abide by Geneva Pact

By the Associated Press

Great Britain, Germany and France promised the United States that they will abide by the rules for treatment of prisoners of war contained in a 1929 Geneva treaty.

The State Department sent notes to the three nations as a preliminary to undertaking the work of checking treatment of British and French prisoners in Germany. This is in line with the American agreement to look after Anglo-French interests in the Reich.

The notes asked for assurances that the powers would regard the rules of the Geneva convention as applicable in the present war. Affirmative replies have been received from all.

The State Department, therefore, is prepared to go ahead with inspection of German prison camps containing British or French officers and soldiers.

May Be Put to Work

The rules that American diplomatic officials must see applied guarantee a prisoner of war against confiscation of his money and personal effects and against being mistreated in any way for refusal to give information regarding his army.

He may be put to work, but his labors can have no direct connection with the prosecution of the war. He must be paid the same wage scale as civilian employes doing the same kind of work in the same district.

He must be given every medical attention and, if seriously ill or injured, must be sent back to his own country.

If he is charged with a criminal offense, he must be given a public trial.

Special Treatment for Officers

Prisoners may appoint an agent of their camp to represent them with the power holding them prisoners and with the power assuming protection of their interests.

If the prisoner is an officer, he must be given special treatment, he cannot be confined in the same camp with private soldiers, his insignia of rank cannot be taken from him; he must be paid the same compensation received by equivalent officers of the detaining power. He cannot be made to work unless he asks for it, and then suitable wark must be provided for him.

American diplomatic officials in Germany will make periodic inspections of the prison camps, attend trials, authenticate prisoners' wills and other documents, and communicate with Berlin and France in their regard.

Youth Arrested In Frat Pins' Theft

A 23-year-old colored youth was arrested yesterday and detectives marked "closed" a case involving larceny of $2,000 worth of fraternity pins nearly a year ago.

Kenneth Kjos, of College Park, Md., a salesman for the pins, reported them stolen from his parked automobile last December. Police watched the pawn and second-hand shops.

Several weeks ago Detective Sergts. Thomas Sweeney and Michael Mahaney found a "frat" pin in one of them. Yesterday the culprit walked into a second-hand shop and into the hands of Sweeney and Mahaney.

Chamberlain Expected to Say 'No' to Hitler

Reply Delayed Until Thursday to Weigh Nazi Offer Further

By Raymond Daniell.

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 10.—Prime Minister Chamberlain has decided, the House of Commons was told this afternoon, to wait until Thursday before announcing the attitude of Great Britain to Fuehrer Hitler's demands that the democracies choose between a war of destruction and peace on his terms.

The postponement, made known by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, it was stated authoritatively, was in keeping with the government promise to weigh the German offer carefully and should not be interpreted as any indication of weakening.

In view of the fact that the British government has been in consultation with Paris almost daily since Hitler's speech was delivered to the Reichstag, and recalling Chamberlain's assertion yesterday that London and Paris see eye to eye on war aims, it is not unfair to assume that French Premier Daladier's radio address tonight foreshadowed the tenor of the British minister's own speech.

It is plain, therefore, that unless Hitler is prepared to modify his "final offer," there seems little basis for hope of peace being restored or even that the present unofficial armistice will be long continued. While there still exists an avid desire for peace among most British people there is growing resignation to war.

No Basis for Negotiations

The chief reason for delay in the delivery of the prime minister's report, it was understood, was tomorrow's scheduled conference of Auguste Zaleski, the new Polish foreign minister, with Chamberlain and Lord Halifax, foreign secretary. Allied war aims and participation of the Polish army in the war on the Western Front are expected to provide the agenda for the conference. The Poles are confident that restoration of at least an ethnic Poland would be a primary condition for Allied entry into any peace negotiations.

The prime minister, it was understood, however, had not intended making a new detailed pledge about the restoration of Poland in whole or in part. It was regarded likely he would point out that Hitler in his Reichstag speech does not promise either to restore the independence of Poland or that of Czecho-Slovakia. Chamberlain's present intention, it was understood, was to concentrate on the absence of guarantees from the Nazi side.

The Prime Minister, it was said, will reiterate the government view that Hitler's word is too unreliable and that the Reichstag speech does not furnish a basis for negotiations.

Conservative supporters of the Chamberlain government are confident that while the speech will not be a flat rejection in so many words, the sum total of the diplomatic words which the Prime Minister will use, will be to answer "no" to Hitler.

The Answer Desired

This is the answer desired by almost the entire conservative party in the House with exception of a minority of not more than 20 who prefer that Chamberlain, for tactical reasons, explore Hitler's proposals by making further inquiries and spinning out discussions.

Except for the Independent Labor Party, a small handful of pacifists and appeasers, plus Lloyd George and Willie Gallacher, the lone Communist, there is no section of the House which would support Chamberlain if he took the most unlikely course of proposing an armistice or indicated a wish to withdraw from the war.

After the session ended Clement R. Atlee, leader of the Labor opposition in the House, said in a radio address that the British people, while detesting war and longing for peace, are determined not to be fooled by a man whose actions showed that no reliance could be placed on his words. If Hitler wants peace he must show it by deeds, Atlee declared. Lasting peace could not be established, Atlee said, without closer unity among European peoples for economic co-operation, disarmament and collective security.

There was a marked tendency to criticize the government at question time by all parties. Most of the criticism appeared to spring from increasing national confidence and impatience with government restrictions and wartime control.

Laborites protested especially against the rationing of fuel and Conservatives predicted confidently that the government would soon be forced to cancel or relax the rationing of gas and electricity.

tween Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports of the United States, could not operate as at present.

That between 169 and 170 additional American dry cargo and combination passenger vessels of 1,100,000 gross tonnage could continue to operate in foreign trade, but more than half of these "would be adversely affected, some seriously."

That if a combat zone were established around Mediterranean ports, "20 vessels of 108,000 gross tons immediately would be withdrawn and seven other vessels of 74,000 gross tons would have to be rerouted so drastically it is possible their continued operations might no longer be practical."

Fears 1914-18 Conditions

Voicing fear increased South American trade would not take up the large surplus of idle ships, and tha 1914-18 conditions might return, with American export commodities piling up for want of ships to move them, Bailey predicted there would be "far reaching repercussions" unless the ship restrictions are modified.

"Those lines which would necessarily abandon their services would be forced to reduce their organizations and release personnel," he said. "They would bear heavy, out-of-pocket expense for laying up vessels as well as depreciation expense, unless such vessels could be employed in some other trade. The prospects for such other employment are not encouraging in view of the large number of American ships which would be thrown out of such service and made surplus."

Bailey warned "thousands of American seamen would be thrown out of employment," and many ships subject to mortgage indebtedness would face foreclosure when deprived of revenue to meet payments. Where such mortgages are held by the Government, he said, it would be "morally questionable" to foreclose them, since default would result from Government action.

Construction Plan Cited

He questioned what would happen to long range ship construction agreements with the Government, adding:

"If their revenues are wiped out by Government action, obviously they will have no money for ship construction."

Bailey urged that "some plan be developed to the end that vessels removed from service will be kept in condition for immediate operation to meet possible national defense requirements," contending that if vessels are laid up for a long period of time "their usefulness in case of emergency would be seriously impared."

Proposals to make Government payments to ship operators to keep laid-up vessels in operating condition have recently been privately discussed.

Bailey stressed his support of the Administration bill, with embargo repeal, and said he was advocating no change in the shipping section that would expose American vessels to actual risk. He said he sought an agreement on modifications in the shipping section "in the interest of peace, but without such a tremendous sacrifice to American shipping."

Sacrifices Stressed

The bill as now drawn prohibits any American ship from carrying cargoes to a belligerent port and empowers the President to restrict travel through "combat zones." In the interest of South American trade, ships could stop at French and British possessions in Southern Hemisphere waters with passengers and mail, but could not make such stops at Bermuda or Nova Scotia, or go by ocean to Canada. All such trade in the Pacific would be banned.

Wagner told the Senate that the requirement of title transfer before goods could be moved in belligerent ships, and the American shipping restrictions, would remove all the "obvious dangers" of American involvement in war. He admitted this would be done "at tremendous sacrifice to our industries and our shipping."

The New York Democrat said only 10 per cent of exports to belligerents before America entered the last war were arms—and declared the only real arms embargo is an embargo on all trade with belligerents.

"Unless we are ready to adopt that proposal, let us cease to delude ourselves by placing an embargo on an insignificant and arbitrarily selected group of war materials," Wagner said.

Speaking late in the day, Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, declared the arms embargo should not be repealed until an "overt act" is committed against America. He said it should then be used as a weapon of military strategy, in self-defense, and followed up "with still more direct and effective measures"

Illustrating the conflicting interpretation placed on the Tobey motion vote by leaders of the two Senate camps:

Senator Borah said, "The Tobey vote was not the antirepeal vote."

Senator Pittman said: "It was a straight out-and-out test of repeal sentiment. . . . This should satisfy the country that further debate will accomplish nothing."

Trade Aims Outlast War, Hull Asserts

Europe, no one can tell at this moment."

The 21 American nations, he declared, already have moved to solve problems caused by the European war by creating, at the Inter-American Conference, a financial and economic advisory committee, which will meet soon in Washington.

When the European war ends, Hull said, "we must stand ready to redouble our efforts in the direction of economic progress."

R. E. Thorne, of Montreal, chairman of the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said there might be "some harassing trade and exchange regulations and tighter customs formalities" between the United States and Canada as a result of the war, but he expressed belief the two countries would subject themselves to them "with the utmost good will and co-operation."

Grady Urges Imports

Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady told the convention that some powerful American industrial interests were seeking through Congress to sabotage the objectives of Hull's bilateral trade agreements.

Picturing the gold buried at Fort Knox, Ky., as "a bombshell" that might explode in a frenzy of inflationary activity," Grady said other goods from abroad must be imported for "a healthy expansion of our trade."

He named "one of our important export industries" as having urged "buy American" legislation of Congress after it had obtained trade concessions, and added that this "narrow and unenlightened" attitude threatens "economic destruction to us all."

German Raider Believed Seen Off Costa Rica

San Jose, Costa Rica, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—An unidentified steamer, obviously disguised and believed to be the German liner Havelland, today was reported seen off Cape Velas on the Pacific Coast, lending credence to the belief the vessel may have turned raider.

The steamer was traveling northward at approximately four knots. The name Avella was visible on the bow, but no home port was given. The funnel was painted the same color as those of the Grace line, but it still bore a Hamburg-American line shield. The ship flew no flag.

Authorities expressed the belief the liner's captain planned to convert it into a sea raider, or possibly use it to supply submarines reported in the Pacific.

British Crew Tells of Seeing 2 U-Boats Sunk

Houston, Tex., Oct. 10 (AP).—Eyewitness accounts of the sinking of two German submarines by British destroyers were given today by the crew of the English freighter Newton Pine, which loaded 240,000 bushels of wheat after a perilous Atlantic crossing.

"For the first four days of our 25-day trip across, we were convoyed by British destroyers," one sailor said. "There were several other ships in our convoy.

"In those four days, three German submarines attempted to attack us. From the decks of our ship we saw two of the subs sent to the bottom. One of them was only about a hundred yards off our port rail when the depth bomb got it.

"We did see a British tanker sent to the bottom, however," he added. "She was heading toward our convoy when the torpedo struck. It was just one big explosion and the ship vanished."

WINTER APPEASED!

How OIL-PLATING spares your cold engine from 90-HOUR BATTLE

"Doesn't hurt," you'd say at one drop of water hitting your head. Yet you have heard of men in ancient times tortured by drop after drop after drop, till along came Death.

Death never instantly strikes a cold engine starting up without decent oiling. Even 5 to 8 minutes of "warming up some," won't bring Death a-galloping. True, it takes but a few such starts every day to come near a full hour's warm-up. And start after start after start, during all or most of this Winter, could make those hours add up to 90.

Would you wish your engine 90 hours of tough torture when there's an easy "out"? . . . Go today and have it OIL-PLATED.

OIL-PLATING turns the tables. OIL-PLATING is death to the worst old wear of Winter starting. OIL-PLATING is lubricant that's fully distributed throughout your cold engine—bottom to top—while you're still indoors, at breakfast, at work, at the party or movie.

That's because OIL-PLATING can't "all go away" whenever you park. Conoco Germ Processed oil won't let it!

The Germ Processing of this patented oil makes it clothe the engine parts in skin-tight, slippy OIL-PLATING—exactly as form-fitting as the plating on the bumpers or headlamps. And like any such plating, OIL-PLATING can't drain down. It's lastingly "knitted" to the working surfaces, hence always ready beforehand to prevent any rasping dry starts, and extra drag on the battery. You'll go many extra miles between quarts with your engine OIL-PLATED by Conoco Germ Processed oil—from Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. OIL-PLATE today. Continental Oil Company

Allies to Blame If War Goes On, Hitler Asserts

'We'll Abide by Their Decision and Fight to End,' Meeting Told

By Edwin Shanke.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 10.—Adolf Hitler declared today that "Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through" if the western allies rebuff "our readiness for peace."

If the war goes on the western Allies will be to blame, he said in a speech opening the Nazi winter relief campaign.

"We do not know what the future will bring," he said, "but we are clear about one thing—no power on earth will again bring Germany to its knees. They will not defeat us militarily, nor destroy us economically, nor break our spirit. Under no circumstances will they live to see any sort of German capitulation."

The decision regarding peace or continuance of the war, he said, "no longer lies with us, but with the other side."

"With us exists only the grim determination to abide by the decision, whatever it may be, and to fight through to the last end," he declared.

In Angry Tones

His 21-minute speech was delivered in angry tones at the huge Sportspalas.

Asserting as he did in his Reichstag speech last Friday that Germany has no war aims against England and France, Hitler said:

"I have expressed our readiness for peace. In case this readiness on our part is declined, then Germany is determined to take up the battle and fight it through.

"Neither fright of the moment nor a proclamation of the length of this battle will be able to tire or even discourage us. Before us stands the eternal life of our people. No matter how long it may take to bring this life to realization, nothing can shake us, nothing can perplex us, nothing can bring us to despair—on the contrary, whatever the other world may choose, that it will get!"

Authoritative quarters said no response had come yet to Hitler's peace bid of Friday from responsible statesmen in England or France. These quarters declined to comment on any other reaction to Der Fuehrer's Reichstag speech, because it would not be in the interests of peace."

Appeals for Sacrifices

Hitler said he was opening the annual relief drive—which this year will combine its work with the Red Cross—in a spirit that Germany, "without being interfered with by others, can within its living space mold its own destiny and partake of the goods of the world, to which it has a right.

"Let no one henceforth think of the greatness of his sacrifice, but of the sacrifices of those who gave their all," he urged. "Compared to their sacrifices those at home are nothing."

Propaganda Minister Goebbels preceded Hitler as a speaker with an accounting of last year's winter relief work. He reminded his listeners that sacrifices must be greater because the tasks ahead were greater.

Last year, he said 535,300,000 marks ($214,120,000) was raised, compared to 417,000,000 marks ($166,800,000) in the previous year through once-monthly street corner collections.

The supreme command's morning communique said that German occupation of the Polish region north of the Bug River and in the Suwalki sector was almost completed.

On the Western Front, the communique added, "there was a little reconnoitering, troop and artillery activity."

Germans To Quit Latvia

Riga, Latvia, Oct. 10 (AP).—A German commission arrived here tonight to arrange for repatriation of Latvian Grmans as a parallel to the Russian-Latvian agreement.

Latvian Germans were being permitted to take only their clothes and were advised that they first would live in camps and later would be spread among German districts chiefly in Poland.

Repatriation is obligatory in Latvia for German citizens, numbering about 4,500. Howevr, many others are expected to go.

To Leave Russia Also

Copenhagen, Oct. 10 (INS).—Russia has agreed to evacuation of all Germans living in the U. S. S. R., the newspaper Politiken said today in a Berlin dispatch. The extent of the exodus from Russia is not known, the dispatch added.

Much Buying in Estonia

Tallinn, Oct. 10 (AP).—Heavy buying and selling today marked the preparations of Estonian Germans to return to the Reich.

Germans were disposing of property and changing money as well as buying merchandise believed unobtainable in their new homes in former Polish territory.

The German minority in Estonia was estimated at 18,000, of which 1,000 were German citizens. Some estimates said 95 per cent were returning but others said it was nearer 50 per cent.

Many said they would not return to the homeland except for the fear of Russia communization.

Berliners' Tears of Joy Turn Into Tears Of Sorrow as Armistice Report Proves False

By Joseph Barnes.
Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, Oct. 10.—For several hours this morning the war was ended in Berlin. With an eight-day armistice to start at noon, Prime Minister Chamberlain in retirement and the Duke of Windsor succeeding King George VI on the English throne.

It was not until after noon that authorities recovered control of the situation through the radio and told Germans that they are still at war.

The chastened and subdued city went back to work. The news had raised peoples' spirits higher than anything that has happened in months; its denial worked like a blackout in the middle of the day. The Germans had had a taste of the "war of nerves" and by this afternoon Nazi officials were claiming that the entire episode had been a sinister plot of the British secret service.

The report that an armistice had been announced over the radio ran like wildfire through the city early this morning. After diligent search this reporter has found no person today who definitely heard the radio, but literally everyone has a friend who heard it.

Almost nobody had read a two-line announcement in yesterday's paper that the Berlin radio station—for unannounced reasons—would begin its daily program at 12:30 p. m., instead of at 6 a. m., as usual.

The most credible explanation in Berlin tonight is that unknown persons—either here or abroad—broadcast the report over the Berlin wave length at a very early hour. Country women bringing vegetables to the Berlin markets opened their stalls by drinking to peace in brandy and new cider, and by the time the city was at work the word was in every office and on every street corner.

Telephone operators called up subscribers to pass on the good news. Mail men confirmed it. Strangers stopped each other on the streets to check each others' version and add new details. Only in Wilhelmstrasse offices and newspaper editorial rooms was there a kind of bewildered silence. They pleaded ignorance for a little while and then stopped answering the telephones.

In a market place on the Wittenbergplatz a citizen stood on a chair and made a speech about the peace. He ended with a toast to the French and the words: "That Daladier is smarter than we thought."

Lines of people formed in front of newspaper stands, waiting for special editions to be put on sale.

Small stores put up their shutters for a day of celebration. One man who has two sons and a son-in-law at the front, treated his entire office to free beer. There were 200 beer drinkers and it cost him an entire months' salary. A bakery in Berlin's west end whose proprietor is carrying a rifle somewhere, was so excited that it gave away the store's entire stock of bread and cake, free and without ration cards.

At least one group of "Hitler Youth" held a special meeting at the end of the morning to celebrate Hitler's latest triumph. They voted to do their good deed for the day by ringing every doorbell in the district to announce that the war was over.

According to reliable reports, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was the first man to tell Fuehrer Hitler about the report and its lack of basis in fact. It was only at 12:30 that the Berlin broadcasting station was working again, ready to broadcast to all Germany a special announcement ordered by the Chancellery that there had been no armistice and no resignation of the British government.

The announcement blamed the report on English Secret Service agents. It stated: "The report was intended only to plunge the peoples of the world into anxiety, as everyone will immediately realize, so that the campaign of lies of the English war mongers would find it easier to accomplish its dark plans."

Nazi Regulars Now Man Line, Activity of Patrols Increases

By G. H. Archambault.
Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Oct. 10.—One reason for unwonted activity of the German infantry on the Rhine-Moselle front in the last four days was revealed today — the Westwall is now manned entirely by units belonging to the regular army.

They are fully trained men, many of whom doubtless fought in Poland. They have more punch than the half-trained reservists whom they have relieved. Their patrols and scouting parties do not turn back, as before, as soon as they are fired at but persevere until they can throw hand grenades—now used by the Germans for the first time on the Western Front.

The persistence shown by German patrols these last few days had led to the surmise that the German high command might be preparing to execute its long-awaited move.

That it has replaced reservists by regulars does not necessarily confirm this supposition, since that would be elementary precaution, if an Allied attack were feared. Nevertheless, belief persists here that with their "peace offer" already virtually rejected, the Germans will act soon.

But a change in the Westwall garrison need not mean that such action will come immediately. It is normal for troops taking over a new sector to reconnoiter enemy positions in front of them, and to endeavor to take prisoners in order to ascertain the enemy's order of battle. This is enough to explain the insistent patrolling which was mentioned again today in the French G. H. Q. bulletins.

Although German reconnoitering occurs intermittently along the entire line, it is always most marked in two sectors—Mosselle and Saarbruecken. For two or three days patrols were satisfied with getting the lie of the land; yesterday and today they progressed within hand grenade range of several French advanced positions, possibly in hope of enticing the defenders to engage in a hand to hand skirmish, during which prisoners might be taken. But in each case the French drove them back with machine gun fire without the need of coming to grips.

These attempts were supported by artillery fire, to which the French promptly replied. By now each side has been able to spot most of the other's guns, either by direct ground or aerial observation, or by means of sound detectors, thus enabling the preparation of special charts, knows as "directing plans." With aid of them, reply to any battery's fire becomes almost automatic.

The day's events are reported as follows in the French G. H. Q. communiques.

Number 73. (Morning). Enemy patrols continue very active especially east and west of the Saar River. There were reciprocal artillery actions in these same regions."

"Number 74. (Evening). Between the Moselle and the Saar rivers there was very great activity on the part of enemy reconoiteiring elements. In this region we have driven back several raiding parties, some of which were rather important in strength."

ONE little thing will illustrate the unsparing care we're spending to make this 1940 Buick the best car we've built.

Take the springs — not simply the great soft-action spirals that cushion the car, but even the valve springs.

After they're shaped and tempered and finished there's likely to be here and there a tiny scratch on the surface of the steel.

Such a scratch conceivably might start a fracture. So we shot-blast our springs — to heal such tiny scratches, "peening" the surface in miniature like hammered silver.

All through this massive, powerful beautiful car you'll find special precaution like that.

For example we used to balance by weight all sets of parts in our tornadic Dynaflash straight-eight engine, to cancel out even a hint of "rough."

We do that still, but now we do more. On special machines we electrically balance this great engine to micropoised perfection after assembly, paring metal if need be to smooth its velocity to velvet.

Seat angles, pedal positions, shock absorber travel-arc, brake areas, control tensions — every detail comes under special study.

When the experimental models had done their stuff on the General Motors proving ground, we turned 'em over to sharpshooters to punish, over thousands of miles of bad roads and good.

Out of it all comes an automobile we're mighty proud to offer — an unbeatable travelmate you will be thrilled to own.

Italy Accepts French Refusal Of Hitler Plan

Rome Believed to Be Awaiting Results Of Winter's Trends

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 10.—Premier Daladier's firm refusal to consider Fuehrer Hitler's peace offer was accepted philosophically here tonight in spite of all the press compaigns trying to persuade Italians that the proposals were being carefully studied and that there were possibilities of peace.

It was well known in informed circles there were no such chances. In fact, today's newspapers were quite pessimistic for the first time, which paved the way for the Allied rejection.

There is some cause for reflection here in the fact that France, not England, made the first refusal. The Italian people had been told that the French did not want war but were being driven to it by England. Now they see France take the lead in demanding a continuation of the war until Hitlerism is defeated.

Settles Down for Winter

So Italy is settling down for this winter, during which she does not expect her neutrality will be seriously challenged. Next spring, great developments are foreseen, including the invasion of the Balkans by Russia or Germany or both and then it is going to be difficult for her to remain neutral. But that is a long way off. Meanwhile, she has cut loose and is going her own way.

The press campaign against Russia was intensified today, showing that the scorching editorial in Air Marshal Balbo's Corriere Padano on Sunday was not accidental.

It seems now as if Italy is preparing to take a definite position against Russia.

The Italians believe Moscow threatens the Balkans more than Germany at the moment, although no one really expects Germany to be stopped in the long run.

Then again, while Japan and Germany may have nullified the anti-Comintern pact, Italy and Spain have not. They are both very Catholic countries and have close relations with the Holy See, which is waging an anti-Communist, anti-atheist campaign. The Vatican does not seem to be getting much encouragement in its campaign from England and France, which still hope to separate Germany and Russia and hence do not want to antagonize the Soviet.

Soviet Criticism Mild

For the present, criticism of Russia is rather mild. This morning's Messagero, for instance, points out that in Russia-occupied Poland the Soviet system was immediately set up, presided over by men who have just been released from jail, while private property had been abolished and the churches closed.

In German Poland, on the other hand, "order is being restored, property respected and schools reopened." Yet, says the Messagero, the Allies attack Germany and say nothing about Russia.

The evening's Tribune explains the difference from the Italian point of view in the ideology and reality of the situation. Italy remains anti-Communist theoretically, it says, but practically she finds it desirable to deal with Moscow on friendly terms.

It is only Balbo's Corriere Padano which again returns fiercely to the attack, incidentally expressoing an idea which is widely held here.

The Worst Is Feared

"It is certain that bolshevism is not awaiting and does not desire anything except the reciprocal slaughter among western peoples," it writes, "so as to construct the terror, tyranny and infamy of the Soviet on the smoking ruins."

Tonight's Osservatore Romano says there are more than 9,000,000 Catholics in the territory occupied by the Russians and the news from there has been "most uncertain." It is clear, however, that the Vatican fears the worst.

Proctor said a number of the ministers have already signified their intention to arrange a special Chest program October 29. Among these are the Rev. Peyton R. Williams, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church at McLean, the Rev. Herbert Donovan, of Fairfax, and the Rev. Carl Maxwell, of Fairfax.

in the days of the czars, would demand military and economic concessions such as they have gained from Estonia and Latvia.

If so, one responsible Finnish source said, the nation would resist, reluctantly but with determination. Thus a nation whose population was estimated in 1937 at 3,834,662 persons would be arrayed against the estimated 170,000,000 population of Russia.

The Finnish delegation will discuss unannounced economic and political problems with the Russians. In similar conferences with Estonia and Latvia, Russia has gained sweeping concessions of naval and military rights and her troops were ready to march into those nations to make the agreements effective.

Russia also was massing warships at Krnostadt, huge naval base near Leningrad and less than 100 miles from Viipuri. Leningrad is approximately 200 miles from Helsinki, straight across the upper tip of the Gulf of Finland.

Since Russia has shown an interest in Finland, the radio and newspapers in the tiny country have been instructing the people in air defense measures.

Snow, welcomed by the Finns as a major defense during winter, fell in flurries today and the city went through a practice blackout tonight.

Despite the snow and the blackout, however, Finns gathered by the thousands in city squares to discuss the Moscow missions.

Workmen kept busy on the grounds intended for the 1940 Olympics. Nurmi, at 40, is coaching Finnish athletes and advising the Olympic officials.

The 74-year-old composer Sibelius remained quietly in the home of his son-in-law in Helsinki but throughout the day and night his composition, Finlandia, was included on most radio programs. Sibelius wrote the piece as a poetic protest against Russian rule at the end of the nineteenth century.

Scandinavian Alliance

Helsinki, Oct. 10 (INS).—It is believed Finland has reached an agreement with other Scandinavian states to resist with all their strength any Russian efforts at further westward advance.

Reports that Sweden had called 250,000 men to arms gave added strength to Finland's determination.

Finland today was in what was described as a state of "increased readiness" for war. Nine regiments were on the Russian frontier in full war strength. The entire reserve strength of the army stood ready for service at an hour's notice, and the liberty corps also was in readiness.

The university was closed and all students drafted for the regular army as well as those who have volunteered for service in the Liberty Corps have left. The latter corps numbers at least 100,000. It is fully equipped, having uniforms and arms at home.

Reports of an unidentified warship stopping and inspecting all except German freighters in the vicinity of the Aaland Islands led to the belief that troops assembled for the defense of the islands will be sent there at once.

President Doubts Mediation Wanted

whom he engaged in conversation by asking whether Pete had seen in the papers——But Pete stopped him by recalling the case of Adam, whose wife, Pete said, had told him that if he would eat a nice big McIntosh apple, he would be wise. So Adam ate, and both of them were thrown out of the Garden of Eden into the fog.

They had a pretty miserable night, without any blankets, Pete went o, and in the morning Eve, wishing to make up to Adam for the discomfort she had caused him, snuggled up to him and started to remark that she had seen by the papers——

But Adam interrupted, commenting caustically that while she may have seen it in the papers, she should remember that since the preceding afternoon he had been wise.

Asked whether the story about Pete marked the extent to which he wished to discuss the peace question, the President said it did.

To a further question whether the moral of the story was that he didn't thing much of mediation talk. Mr. Roosevelt replied that he did not think much of the Berlin press story.

The President withheld further information regarding operations of alien submarines in the Florida area. White House officials on Monday reported a submarine and two foreign tankers near Key West, while an undersea craft had been reported off Miami on Saturday. Asked whether the tankers were handling oil from Mexico, Mr. Roosevelt said he had no news on that, and he replied to another question by saying he had no further information for the press whether the tankers had been identified as to their nationality.

He admonished newspapermen against guessing what will be done under the Declaration of Principles adopted at the recent Inter-American Conference at Panama at which it was agreed to establish a "neutrality zone" around the Western Hemisphere. He assured the newsmen the program will be worked out properly.

The President received the press immediately after conferring with Wollmar Bostrom, Swedish Minister to the United States. The call aroused particular speculation in view of the new Russian threat toward Scandinavian countries. Bostrom's name was not on the regular calling list announced in the morning, and was added shortly before he appeared for his audience.

Japan Leaves Changsha in South China

Area Is Birthplace Of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, Founder of Republic

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Oct. 11.—Japanese forces are withdrawing from the Chungshan district of South China, it was announced here today.

The withdrawal, following a similar movement from the Changsha area of Hunan Province, was ascribed to a desire by former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-wei that the Japanese shorten their battle lines in advance of new peace moves and the possible launching of a new "central government" for the Japanese-occupied areas of China.

Chungshan, the Chinese "Holy Land," is the birthplace of the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, founder of the modern Chinese state, and is the homeland of many Chinese residents of the United States.

Claim Chinese Routed

The Japanese occupied the Chungshan district, not far from Britain's colony in Hongkong last week after bitter fighting. They claimed strong Chinese forces were routed and driven into the mountains.

Chinese long had defended the area vigorously, because of its sentimental importance.

There were persistent but unconfirmed reports that Wang Ching-wei, who deserted the Chinese Nationalist government in Chungking and issued a statement urging peace between China and Japan, is in contact with nationalist agents to arrange an armistice.

One report was that Wang's plan envisages Generalissimo Chiang's retirement. Another was that he hopes to induce a number of the generalissimo's strongest supporters to desert.

Chinese See Victory

Shanghai, Oct. 10 (AP).—China, fighting desperately to preserve the republic founded 28 years ago, today celebrated its national holiday with confident predictions of ultimate victory in the 27-month-old war with Japan.

The killing of a Chinese civilian by a Japanese sentry in the Japanese-occupied territory adjacent to the French Concession was the only untoward incident. The cause of the shooting was not immediately determined.

Meanwhile, foreign quarters confirmed reports of a severe Japanese setback in Hunan province. The Chinese reported that the Japanese, thrown back last week, still were retreating. Foreign observers said the Japanese defeat frustrated attempts to capture Changsha, capital of Hunan Province.

Belgrade Held Dismayed by Croat Trouble

Geneva Hears Violence Marks Area as Nazis Spread Propaganda

Copyright by New York Times.

Geneva, Oct. 10.—Information from Yugoslavia today indicates the situation in Croatia, which was recently granted partial autonomy, is far from peaceful.

While informants state the Yugoslav government realizes there must be initial difficulties in the province, Belgrade is somewhat dismayed.

It was stated by these sources that 150 Croatian soldiers waiting at Karlovac to be entrained for transfer, deserted.

An inquiry revealed the cause of the desertion was a rumor circulated in Croatia by German propagandists that Yugoslav soldiers were to be sent to France to fight for the Allies. It is said that at last Saturday's cabinet meeting the question of executing some of the deserters was discussed.

There has been violence in Zagreb and provencial Croatian towns. It was said the bodies of some 20 murdered police agents and officials connected with the regime before autonomy, have been found in the streets.

Belgrade authorities are acting quickly to check any spread of unrest. Gendarmes and tax officials are being transferred from Croatia to other parts of the kingdom and are being replaced by members of the Croatian Peasant Party, dominant factor in Croatian politics.

All meetings in the province were banned some time ago. Croatian leaders are seeking to educate their followers to accepting responsibilities.

U. S. Officials Fear Red Hunt By Dies Group

Employment Rolls Are Checked Against Membership Lists

By Alfred Friendly

Fear of an impending "red hunt" among Federal employes, increasing in the minds of many informed Government officials, was intensified by the disclosure yesterday of Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, that his committee on un-American activities is currently investigating a national union of white collar Government workers and compiling a list of Federal employes with memberships in "Communist front" organizations.

News of his own committee list was revealed during clarification by Dies of misunderstandings from his announcement some days ago that there was a list of 2,875 Communist Party or of Fascist-Bund organization members employed by the Government. He said the list was not compiled by his committee, that he had not seen it, but that he learned on the "highest authority" of its existence and that he believed it was gathered by various agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

Checks Second List

In addition, however, he said, his own investigators were now working on a second list, checking civil service employment rolls against the membership lists of several Communst "front" organizations, mentioning specifically the American League for Peace and Democracy, the International Labor Defense and the Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Battalion.

Present plans do not call for making this list of Federal workers public, Dies said, since it might work an injustice on many "good citizens," who had entered organizations unaware of the Communist domination he believes committee hearings have proved.

He said, however, that he might transmit the list to President Roosevelt for his information. He added that there was a "strong presumption" of Communist sympathies against persons who still retained membership in the organizations after his committee had revealed their domination by Communists.

Despite denials by the President and Attorney General Murphy of any knowledge of the first "2,875" list, Dies said he was convinced of its existence and that Government agencies were taking steps to rid their pay rolls of Communists and members of Fascist groups.

Red Oath Is Cited

Although the Communist Party is a legal organization, Dies said he believed there was a basis for dismissing members from the Government service on the grounds of violation of the oath to support the Constitution, required of Federal employes. He said his committee has shown the party to be directed by the Comintern, and that members must abide by party orders or resign. Members thus have first allegiance to a foreign agency, Dies concluded.

A thoroughgoing check of Government agencies, however, failed to reveal any official with knowledge of the list of any admission of purging the rolls of "reds." In only one agency was there a report of an investigation of an employe on information from the Dies committee that he was a Communist. An immediate investigation of the employe in question disproved the accusation and the man was not dismissed, according to the administrator in charge.

The survey of Federal agencies revealed, however, a widespread fear by high executives of a "red hunt." Many said that the stage was set, and that the temperament of the country, stirred by espionage and sabotage stories, would not resist an indiscriminate campaign.

Likely Sources Listed

Some asserted the Government "red" list was probably the result of personnel investigations by various organizations such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Military Intelligence Division and the investigatory branches of several departments and independent offices.

They cited cases to show, however, that many determinations of Communists in the Government by these agencies were based on subjective evidence. One official told of a stenographer classed as a Communist, who, on investigation, was discovered to have been so labeled by a former employer merely because she found no criticism with an open-air meeting attended by white and colored persons.

Another executive told of receiving a personnel investigation report terming an employe a Communist exclusively on the evidence that, when an undergraduate, he had joined a radical student organization.

Morton Friedman, president of the United Federal Workers WPA local union, who was dismissed from his Government job during the summer, will be re-employed today in the WPA, the union announced yesterday, after having threatened to take the matter to the President or to a board of arbitration.

The union had charged that Friedmann's dismissal three months ago was antiunion discrimination. WPA officials insisted it was a routine termination as part of a staff reduction.

Col. Oehmann's Son Gets Sharpshooting Awards

Troops of the District National Guard marched and countermarched under the eyes of their commanding officer, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, in review on the Mall last night. While twin searchlights played across the sky, awards were presented to companies and to individual soldiers for marksmanship.

Following a parade from the District Armory, troops were presented to the commanding general, and the band of the 121st Engineer Regiment played under leadership of Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman.

Service Company Wins

The drill attendance trophy of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was presented to the Headquarters and Service Company of the 121st Engineers, commanded by Capt. Edward A. McMahon, by Commander George G. McLeish of the District Department, V. F. W. Company E, Capt. Walter E. Knight, received 121st Engineers, commanded by the National Rifle trophy for excellence in marksmanship.

The Mosher Cup for company team pistol championship was awarded to the state staff and detachment team, composed of Maj. J. C. Jensen, Capt. Hugh Everett, jr., and Staff Sergt. Harry B. Parsons. Maj. Jensen won the R. Harris & Co. Cup for individual pistol marksmanship. The individual rifle championship match winner, Private W C. Jensen, of the 121st Engineers, received the Senatorial Cup.

Overhand Dunker National Champ

and walks of life, fought through a four-course luncheon.

With no caddy to guide them, it was every man for himself as the contestants, confronted with a phalanx of silver, had to choose the right weapon for every hazard from soup to doughnuts. Mrs. Fredericks went into the lead when she instinctively spotted the right club with which to attack the dessert, known as a chocolate doughnut russe, or natural hazard.

On the final, or dunking, lap, Mrs. Fredericks had no peer, although it was obvious that Irving Weinstein, a self-styled philanthropist, had had more practical experience in this department. The Weinstein suit may have been worn and rumpled and the shirt a trifle frayed, but judges agreed that his backhand sluice in the dunking department was the neatest piece of business in the contest.

Mrs. Fredericks lives in suburban Forest Hills and knows that when a lady goes to dine at the boss' home (and no monkey business!), she wears a floor-length dinner dress with long sleeves. (It was my contention that she should wear her oldest clothes, so the boss would be ashamed and raise her pay.)

In Mrs. Fredericks' circles, she said, gentlemen are always helping ladies into chairs at table, while in mine it seems that ladies are always helping gentlemen up from under tables. But that's life, and the judges gave Mrs. Fredericks the title, $10 and a loving cup.

The judges included Tony Williams, man about town and tables; Etiquette Authority Elinor Ames, Artist Russell Patterson and Jules Segal, three dozen dunker and an officer of the National Dunking Association.

"Just being kind and polite, and taking sufficient time to be both," is the Queen of Etiquette's golden rule for good manners. "Kindness, courtesy and common sense," she added, will total up to good form under any circumstances.

Narcotics Suspect Arrested Twice

A 32-year-old cripple accused of peddling narcotics from his sick bed was arrested for the second time in 10 days yesterday.

George Jackson, colored, of the 400 block of I street northwest, was arrested October 2 after a search revealed heroin in his bed.

Released on $500 bond, the man was arrested again yesterday after police said they had made four bedside "buys" to complete evidence. He was held under default of $10,000 bond, and charged with violations of the Jones-Miller and Harrison narcotics acts.

First Things First

There is much that is significant in the decisive defeat yesterday of Senator Tobey's motion to recommit the neutrality bill in order to split it into two separate measures.

It was the well-meaning purpose of the junior Senator from New Hampshire to obtain immediate action on the sections of the bill which would sweep a large portion of American shipping from the seas, while deferring consideration of repeal of the embargo on arms shipments. Advocates of this separation were correct in arguing that there is no essential connection between the two parts of the pending measure. Their mistake is in believing that the shipping clauses are less controversial than is repeal of the arms embargo.

Propaganda often overshoots the mark. This has been the case with the organized effort to prove that there is something unneutral, improper or dangerous in permitting belligerents to buy munitions for cash in this country and transport the supplies in their own ships.

On every point that argument has collapsed, leaving it obvious that the one accomplishment of the present embargo is to make it appear that the United States desires a victory for Hitler in the present war. As this has become clear the public demand for repeal has naturally made itself increasingly apparent.

In consequence, repeal of the arms embargo is now emphasized as the issue on which immediate action is both logical and desirable. On this subject every possible argument, pro and con, has been exhausted. But to the implications of the shipping clauses of the bill, a few of which are discussed elsewhere on this page today, little or no consideration has been given. As Senator Pittman pointed out yesterday, certain of these other provisions demand the most searching examination.

Senator Tobey properly urges that "we should put first things first." He is mistaken only in his ordering. The 26 votes mustered for his motion yesterday undoubtedly represent all, or nearly all, of the pro-embargo strength and that strength seems more likely to diminish than to increase.

The rational procedure now is clearly to put Mr. Tobey's motion in reverse. The bill should be recommitted with instructions to give the shipping clauses the careful committee examination so far denied them, and with parallel instructions to report out an embargo repeal resolution, two lines long, for the definite and final showdown which public opinion increasingly demands.

The Bridge Shortage

In 1860 the total population of the District was in the neighborhood of 75,000, most of it concentrated around Capitol Hill and in what is now downtown Washington. The District was then served by three bridges across the Potomac and two that spanned the lower Anacostia.

Since then the population of the Metropolitan area has increased tenfold. Tens of thousands of those who work in the District have made their homes across the rivers. But the bridge facilities of the community have altogether failed to keep pace with the tremendous growth and decentralization of population, and the equally striking increase in the District traffic problems.

To be sure the obsolescent bridges of Civil War days have all given way to modern structures. But in these 80 years only one additional bridge has been built across the Potomac and one other across the lower Anacostia. The result is the present congestion on every one of Washington's trans-river arteries during peak hours.

One aspect of this uneven development was brought out in Christine Sadler's article, in The Post of Monday, on the district known as Washington Highlands. The inhabitants of that section have access to the centers of business and governmental activity only by a long and circuitous route over the congested Anacostia bridge. The result has been a retardation of development in an otherwise attractive section of the District, and a consequent increase in overcrowding elsewhere in Washington.

There is no indication that Washington's growth has reached its maximum. On the contrary, continuation of the upward population trend so marked during recent years can safely be anticipated. But even on the basis of existing population figures the need for better communication across the Potomac and Anacostia rivers is obvious. The shortage of bridges is a serious deficiency in an otherwise admirably planned community.

"A Balanced Course"

As discussion of the neutrality bill continues, one fact stands out with increasing clarity. Enactment of the measure in its present form would come close to repealing the merchant marine act of 1936.

Under this statute much progress has been made toward rehabilitation of the American merchant fleet. Congress laid down a definite policy designed to maintain the flow of "domestic and foreign water-borne commerce at all time." Its aim was two-fold: First, to promote American commerce and to guard against a collapse of our foreign trade during times of emergency, when the vessels of other nations might be withdrawn from service; second, to develop a merchant fleet that could serve as an auxiliary to the Navy in the event of war.

There has been no direct criticism of this policy as it is being carried out by the Maritime Commission. Presumably it has the overwhelming support of the American people. Yet certain clauses in the pending bill would drastically alter that policy without making any allowance for resulting confusion and losses. Congress certainly should not take such a step without full examination of its implications.

Our most important shipping lines are precisely the ones that would suffer most from the proposed restrictions. All traffic in American bottoms to belligerent nations and to combat zones around neutral countries would be stopped. Since ships serving these areas have been built and operated with Government funds, they could not properly be sold to foreign lines. Nor, under the present law, could they be chartered by foreign operators.

Some ships may be diverted to South American trade, but that number would be relatively small. For the most part, then, American vessels whose routes have been affected by the war would have to remain interned until hostilities cease. Reliable estimates show that nearly one-half of our merchant fleet might thus be rendered temporarily useless.

The effect of such a policy on shipping rates must also be considered. The withdrawal of American ships from active service would create a shortage of facilities at a time when demands for transportation may be expected to increase. In some cases, moreover, the pending bill would leave competing lines free to charge monopolistic prices that might seriously affect our foreign commerce.

It would, of course, be unreasonable to contend that our foreign policy during the present war should be built around the welfare of the merchant marine. What is desirable, as Secretary Hull pointed out in his address to the National Foreign Trade Convention in New York yesterday, is "a balanced course between the greatest practicable protection of our commercial interests and the avoidance of imprudent risks." The question is not whether precautions against involvement in war should be taken. The country has already given affirmative replies to that query. The problem now is the adjustment of precautionary measures so that they will not entail absurd and unnecessary sacrifices.

There is no question as to the desirability of forbidding Americans to travel casually in dangerous areas. When that is accomplished, however, other restrictions on our shipping seem to be of doubtful value. By no process of reasoning can the proposed ban against merchant vessels plying between our West Coast and Australia, India and Canada be justified. And the best interests of the country might be served by leaving to the judgment of shipping companies themselves the question of whether they should carry freight, as distinct from passengers, to belligerent ports.

Obviously shipping companies would take every reasonable precaution against losses. Should some ships be sunk under this arrangement, however, that problem could be handled without thought of entering the hostilities in Europe. It is naive to assume that a sweeping withdrawal of American cargo ships from the sea lanes is the only alternative to war.

Since Congress is convinced that our neutrality should be maintained, its real task is to avoid unnecessary measures so drastic as to threaten the eventual collapse of even reasonable precautionary measures.

Useful And Timely

For the eighth successive year the League of Nations has issued a world economic survey covering events up to the beginning of August. This report has always been among the League's most interesting and useful publications, combining statistical summaries with running commentaries upon current trends in various fields of economic and financial activity.

The present survey is especially valuable because it presents a picture of economic conditions up to the date of the outbreak of hostilities in Europe. As a result, it supplies a background of information that will enable readers to gain a better understanding of the war measures applied by various countries.

In addition to the usual type of information covering economic developments in all parts of the world, the survey contains some timely special studies. One chapter, for instance, discusses problems of public finance and the effect of rearmament costs upon national incomes. The concluding chapter, entitled "The Economic Effects of War, Rearmament and Territorial Changes," summarizes the main theme of the volume.

Word comes from Geneva that the work of the Economic Information Section is continuing, with special emphasis upon the Monthly Bulletin of Statistics. That is encouraging news. It would be a great misfortune to have the League's reporting services abandoned at this time.

Undoubtedly the war will interfere seriously with the work of assembling economic data. But, despite unavoidable deficiencies, it is to be hoped that the League's experts will pursue their researches into the economic effects of the war and embody their findings in a ninth survey.

Housing Controversy

Long-standing differences between Alfred Rheinstein, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, and Administrator Straus, of the USHA, have been brought into the open by the former's resignation. The immediate cause of this break is surrounded by controversy, but the underlying cause is undoubtedly a fundamental conflict of policy.

In submitting his resignation, Mr. Rheinstein has made two serious charges against the head of the United States Housing Authority. He accuses Mr. Straus of hamstringing the New York housing program and of being intolerant to criticism of USHA methods. More specifically, Mr. Rheinstein complains that the USHA "killed" the Bedford-Stuyvesant project in Brooklyn, after approving the original application, because of a current magazine article written by himself and Henry F. Pringle.

The seriousness of the latter charge is minimized by the statement of Mr. Straus that the Brooklyn project will go ahead when differences over land costs have been settled. Spokesmen for the USHA insist that the telegram denying support to this undertaking was merely a routine notice to prevent acquisition of land at higher prices than had been agreed upon by the two agencies. It is difficult to determine whether there has been any shift in the position of the USHA, but if the project is still scheduled to go forward the suggestion of bad faith on the part of the USHA will be difficult to sustain.

More important is the charge that Mr. Straus is using his control over housing funds to silence criticism of USHA policies. In his letter of resignation to Mayor LaGuardia it is asserted by Mr. Rheinstein that Mr. Straus recently "told me in so many words that there is no place in housing for any one who criticizes him as I did in that article and that not another cent will go to New York City for a new project until that is corrected." Such an indictment, if substantially sustained by fact, is a matter of national importance.

Mr. Rheinstein's article was not a vicious attack upon the USHA. Rather is was a well-reasoned presentation of the argument that public housing should for the most part replace actual slums—a viewpoint which seems to have the indorsement of most housing authorities and is in accord with the general practice of the USHA. But regardless of differences between Mr. Straus and Mr. Rheinstein, it would be inexcusable for the USHA to direct its great influence against local housing authorities who do not happen to agree with some of its policies.

Public housing policy in this country is still in a state of evolution. The broadest sort of discussion is desirable to develop the most effective technique of slum clearance. Criticism of existing methods ought to be encouraged rather than denounced. It may be that Mr. Rheinstein has been indiscreet in some of his public statements. But even if such indiscretion is assumed, it would not justify the undemocratic threat of which he complains.

The only encouraging aspect of the development is that it gives additional point to the Washington Housing Association's plea for a national committee to outline a comprehensive housing policy.

Abstracted Publicity

In the current issue of Editor and Publisher, Mr. Perley Boone, director of press from the New York World's Fair, takes pen in hand to explain just what went wrong on Flushing Meadows. It is now possible, says Mr. Boone in that article, to "weigh abstractedly (sic) the problems of publicity and public relations connected with the exposition."

Mr. Boone's explanation is somewhat verbose. As he admits, "the chimerical evolutions of an exposition come with such kaleidoscopic rapidity that it is difficult to write sanely . . ." But it all boils down to a conclusion that the management of the fair blundered in relying on the free publicity which it received in "tons." It would have been wise, thinks Mr. Boone, to have balanced this uncontrolled and uncontrollable promotion with paid advertising designed to counteract the "bad" stories of $1.25 hamburgers and $9.00 meals.

This sounds reasonable. And another point, not mentioned by Mr. Boone, is that advertisers are less likely than promoters to write "abstractedly"—meaning "inattentive, preoccupied or oblivious"—when the word they mean is abstractly.

Letters To The Editor

Failure Of The League

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We as a nation, can by no means escape responsibility for the present state of the world. After tolerating kicks from both sides such as a hundred years earlier, when we were small and weak, we had refused to tolerate, we entered the war against the side that kicked us the hardest, and therby reversed its results. Germany had the war all won when we came in—completely victorious on two fronts and with plenty of force to smash through in the west.

This gave us great influence at the peace conference, and we almost compelled the Allies to incorporate with the treaty a plan which, if successful, would have prevented all future major wars. Then we ourselves refused to ratify—certainly not from any idealistic motives.

There was at that time no serious objection to the treaty; indeed, the great body of opinion was that it should have been dictated at Berlin, and that it should have been more severe to Germany.

The predictions that we should lay ourselves liable to become involved in European wars have been completely falsified; no nation has been involved in war by its membership in the League, and neither should we have been. Besides, we should have been perfectly at liberty to withdraw at any time, just as other nations subsequently did, "for good reasons, for bad reasons or for none at all." On the other hand, the failure of the League is likely to involve us in a war vastly more disastrous to us than the last.

No course is now open to us which offers such happy results as the one we rejected then. One slight guide there is, the extreme probability that the advice of the men, and their successors, whose advice and forecasts were so conspiciously wrong 20 years ago, is wrong now. Consider their cry, that if war must come, let it be fought in defense of our own soil. To one who thinks what it means to a land to be invaded and partially overrun, this is a pitch of altruism too high to be demanded of any nation. W. C. ROSE.

Our Rights

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are the Americans people becoming utterly pusillanimous? We talk with fear and trembling of the danger of dictatorship at home while we tamely submit to a foreign dictator. A super-patriotic speaker on a local forum program declares that it would be better to give up all foreign trade than to sacrifice the life of one American soldier.

That's all very fine, but if thousands of men are thrown out of employment because we take all our American ships off the ocean will they be willing to pay the price of financial dependency on the Government for themselves and their families just for physical safety? Is it any better to become morally and physically weakened by lack of work than it is to risk one's life in protecting American rights on the sea?

I don't believe we are going to be drawn into this war, but I don't believe that supine submission to terrorism is the way to keep us out. Submission to a bully brought England and France to war in the end after all their concessions and unless we stand up for our own rights there's no telling what may happen to us. HERIOT T. COOKE.

Washington, Oct. 9.

Eight Times Bigger

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the tragedy of another great war is upon the world, it is worth while having in mind this quotation from Collier's, September 15, 1934:

A study of 902 major wars fought since 500 B. C. was made recently by two Harvard professors. The statistical index that they used to "measure" each one was based on its duration and the number of combatants, casualties and countries involved. The startling fact was brought to light that the World War was eight times bigger than all the other 901 wars combined.

DELCEVARE KING.

Appeal From France

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I beg to give you below a translation of letter I have just received from a friend in Paris, which I believe may be of interest to the readers of your paper.

"I wish to tell you how happy I was to learn that you had arrived safely on board the 'Queen Mary' whose Commander navigated so skillfully.

"Thus our last hopes have come to naught. Hitler, the bloodthirsty madman, has turned loose upon the world the most frightful cataclysm that it has ever known. There is no other reason for it than the necessity to satisfy the ambition and pride of a madman.

"Now the war is going to be conducted without mercy by this people of prey. Already the Athenia was sunk without warning. We will see even greater outrages as conditions in Germany become worse. The catastrophe has been precipitated by the illusion, the fatal dream of two Germanies. I lived in Germany for two years before the last war and I know her people. One must not differentiate between them and their leaders.

"Are there still neutral consciences? I will not believe it. But politically there are still neutrals. Their number will diminish as the war progresses.

"England has set forth into the war with clenched teeth. She will not loosen her bulldog hold until victory is assured.

"Here France has lined up unanimously behind her government and behind her leader, Daladier, has done everything possible to avoid war and the country has given him its confidence.

"What is America going to do? It matters little whether it acts through feeling of certain groups or through self-interest of others. In lining up at our side and immediately, it is her safety which she is defending.

"Without America victory is certain just the same. If it is obtained without you, what pitiful figure America will make at the time of settling accounts. Have your isolationists looked into that?

"Americans! Be with us!"

RICHARD BALZAC.

Student's Predicament

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: After completing three years of medical training in Scotland, I find that I am not permitted to return to that country due to a ruling by the State Department. In addiion to myself there are 400 other such students in the same predicament who have completed from one to four years of study. Indeed there are those who must only complete three months of school to be eligible for graduation.

As a last recourse we have made application to numerous American medical schools and they have all been unanimous in their reply that they will not consider taking on additional students.

Mrs. Shipley, chief of the Division of Passports has not seen it fit to grant us passports. We are determined as a group to go on our own risk if they are granted. We believe that our reasons for going are just as imperative as those of Mr. Grover Whalen and others who have had the good fortune to have enough influence to obtain passports.

If passports are not obtained, and 400 future medical men are not to have their careers terminated by a sudden turn of events then it is the duty of American schools to accept us. If every school in America were to accept five students, the problem would be solved. We appeal to the people of the United States to help us in our struggle.

JACOB LEVINE.

New York City, Sept. 20.

Rule Of Reason In International Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The redefinition by the State Department of the Americas' oceanic territorial jurisdiction is justified by incontrovertible law and by impervious right and can be justly maintained against protest.

The three-mile limit is universally archaic, and in respect to the Americas, completely obsolete. It was derived from the power of the ancient artillery which could thrust its projectiles only three miles, and that was, in such days, the limit at which a nation's maritime sovereignty could be enforced.

There were then no floating metal citadels, none of the myriad electrical implements that annihilate space, no airplanes. The lawful limit of territorial jurisdiction from the shore today is the reasonable distance at which respect for the nation's rights can be rigidly enforced, whether 100 miles or 300 miles, for such extension, as is so in regard to a blockade, must be strictly enforced.

In the law of nations, the United States and Latin American governments are justified in their projected extension of their oceanic territorial jurisdiction by the right, derived from the common law, to prevent or to abate a nuisance at their doors, and by the practice of the right of international eminent domain.

Interference by nations at war with the commerce of the Americas in which the peaceful merchant vessels of any land may engage, constitutes a nuisance; and as the continental ocean lanes are of vital import to the American nations, they possess the right to continue them open and free from any obstruction or interruption in the interest of themselves and of the neutral nations of the world, the commercial traffic of nations at war not being excluded.

The State Department, in originating this policy and the Latin American nations in approving it, did not legislate international law. Their resolution was somewhat analagous to the procedure of the United States Supreme Court a few years ago when in the absence of a specific constitutional sanction, the judges adopted and applied in their adjudication the rule of reason.

Thus the Americas, possessing the right in the recognized law of nations to prohibit or end a nuisance, and the duty in the interest of civilization to practice the right of international eminent domain, apply the rule of reason in redefining their oceanic territorial jurisdiction, a determination required to make the American nations reasonably immune from the European war.

The history of the endeavors of neutral nations to obtain respect for their rights by nations at war indicates that the redefinition will obtain recognition where the Americas compel such respect.

The Born Artist

WHEN BRYAN MacDONALD was 10 years old he lived with his family on a Nova Scotia farm, miles from the nearest settlement and the nearest barber. Because of this and because it didn't really matter, anyway, the heads of the MacDonald children were left unshorn and they counted themselves lucky if they perched once a year on the high stool in the village barber shop. So, for most months of the year their hair was shaggy and, to the eye of Bryan, unsightly.

There came a day when Bryan looked at his 8-year-old brother and shuddered. The boy's hair was nearly down to his shoulders. Bryan found the family shears and took his brother out to the barn.

"You know," he told me, lowering the chair a little so he could get freer access to the back of my head, "when I saw all that hair I just wanted to cut into it. And I liked doing it just as much as I thought I would." My brother was smaller'n me, of course, and he didn't dare make any fuss.

"Yes, sir. That was the first head of hair I ever cut. But I cut hundreds more before I ever got paid for it. The word got around the neighborhood that I could cut hair and pretty soon I was doin' it for first one kid, then another." Mr. MacDonald pointed his shears at my reflection in the mirror. "You want a little more off the top?"

A sudden breeze came in the second-floor window and Mr. MacDonald paused querulously. It had apparently upset the delicacy of his touch. He crossed the floor of his one-man shop and closed the window on the Main street side. He walked back slowly, scuffing through the hair and cigarette butts that littered the floor.

"Yup," he said. "Well, after a while we moved to a mining town and I kept right on cutting hair, only a lot more of it. Naw, I didn't get paid for it then neither. Why, them miners only made $1.65 a day.

"I went to work in a gold mine. 'Twa'n't much of a mine, though. Never could find any real big pieces of gold. I made up my mind that just as soon as I found a piece big enough for a stickpin I'd steal it. And after a while I did. I still got the stickpin.

"Naw; they never searched us. Wasn't enough gold in that mine to worry about. Never searched us in another mine I worked in out West, neither. The gold there was all mixed up with other kinds of rock. Wouldn't do no good to steal it, because you'd have to have a refining machine to get the gold out.

There was no nostalgia in Mr. MacDonald's recollections of those bygone years. Neither was there any condemnation of the lust for gold that drove men to dig in the bowels of the earth when they could have been on its pleasant surface happily cutting hair. Instead, like the mature artist and philosopher that he is, he seemed to regard those bolsterous days as just another phase of existence.

When the gold mine petered out he drifted East, working at such odd jobs as he could pick up. Then one day he saw a newspaper ad, "Barber wanted," and he remembered that he could cut hair. He remembered the fine, luxurious feel of it in the fingers, the satisfying snip that demolished hundreds of hairs at a stroke. He got the job.

"You know," Mr. MacDonald continued, "some barbers don't like to work on a fellow whose hair's as thick as yours. But I like it. You've got something to work on. I wouldn't give a cent for them thin-haired fellows that you can only dab at.

"'Nother funny thing. I'd rather cut a curly-head than anything else. Boy! It makes me feel good every time I see one of 'em walk in the shop. First time I ever worked on a curly-head, I remember, I cut the wrong way and he sure looked funny. I learned from that, though, and now I cut a curly-head every chance I get. Most barbers hate 'em.

"Say, tell me. Are most of them barbers in the city furriners? I always thought they was. No, I just wondered whether they could speak English any. Didn't see how you could talk to 'em

"You want it shorter? Say, you're near as bad as Dan Henderson up here. He got married, Dan did, and I'd judge his wife musta been tellin' him how he ought to wear his hair and they got in a row. 'Cause he come stompin' in here one day and he says, 'Bryan, I want you to cut all my hair off.'

"'I won't do it, Dan,' I says. And then George—I had George with me then—comes up and says, thinking it's a joke, 'I'll cut it all off for you, Dan, and, what's more, I won't charge you nothin'.' So Dan gets in the chair and George starts cutting away the same as he always does.

"'Hey,' Dan says, 'I said cut it all off.' George looks at him and takes his clipper and cuts it all off. Dan walked out looking like a jailbird, but I guess he figured he'd done away with all cause for argument with his wife. Hurt us, though, 'cause he didn't pay for that one and it didn't grow back for about three months. And he used to come in every two weeks, regular."

Mr. MacDonald sauntered to the window again and pulled the shades. The noise of traffic on Main street was growing fainter and he explained that it was closing time and that if he kept the shades up he would be inviting trade and therefore scabbing the Master Barbers Association to which he belonged.

"There's only one scab barber in town," he said. "Got a shop over on Arch street and you can get your hair cut there for two-bits if you can ever find him sober. Most folks don't think it's worth taking the chance. He was up Whitehawk way but he drank so much they drove him out.

"I bet this is the best haircut you've had for a long time. Them city fellers don't know how to cut it. You ought to come up to me. You know, I'm the best barber in 16 counties.

"Joking? Well, maybe about the 16 counties. But I guarantee you won't get a better-fitting haircut than this anywhere."

Mr. MacDonald gave a final snip and, turning the chair slowly, viewed his handiwork with pride.

"You know," he said, "I started cutting hair because I loved the feel of clipping it and seeing it fall, and I still love it today just as much as when I was a kid. And every day I get better." HETER ODOX.

How To Avert War

IT LOOKS as though the arms embargo will be repealed all right, and when it happens no man on the opposition side may say that his team was the victim of a rush act or high pressure or otherwise was denied the benefits of free discussion and sober judgment. Senators rarely change position on any issue in response to the logic or eloquence of their colleagues, and, as far as the statesmen themselves are concerned, the vote will represent about the same division of opinion that existed when the question was put to them. It ceased to be a partisan issue when the war actually began, and the question whether the war would have begun at all if the American law had been otherwise is one of those scuttle-butt propositions which may be argued forever but never can be solved.

Hitler alone can give the answer to that, but the man is such a liar that nobody would believe him, whatever he might say, and, anyway, all that is down the drain now because the war did begin. When that happened the question ceased to be one of partisan politics and became one of national defense, although that phase of it has not received sufficient emphasis.

Allies Would Help Build Up U. S. Needs

THE ARMY maneuvers at Plattsburg were a terrible fiasco, and while the inexperience and consequent clumsiness of the soldiers were placarded to the Nation and, incidentally, to the rest of the world, little was said about the amount and kind of equipment now available. Certainly the Allies are not the potential enemy of this Nation, while Germany, Russia and Japan undoubtedly are, and a munitions and arms industry built up at the expense of the Allies would not only help them to break up that threat but would stand ready to serve American needs.

There are much propaganda and some dumb, honest belief that Hitler's Germany means no harm to anyone and only wants to live in peace and prosperity, but anyone who believes that forgets that Britain and France were caught almost unarmed and had to put up with the arrogant impositions from a dictator armed to the teeth.

He was constantly strutting his divisions, boasting of his invincible will and speaking of the exhaustion of his patience in a manner which plainly said that the rest of the world lived in peace only by his kind permission. Finally the Allies just had to fight him, because it was unsafe to go on unmobilized and impossible to pursue the ways of peace with men and industry mobilized for war.

Success Of Allies Reduces Our Risk

IT IS ASKING Americans to be just too broadminded to request that they regard the Allies and Germany as six of one and half a dozen of the other. The Allies may have a fault or two—as who hasn't—but the Nazi idea challenges the American at every point, and it is the enemy of Americanism and the aggressor in this enmity, at that. The danger that the United States might be drawn into war would seem to diminish in proportion to the success of the Allies and the improvement of American strength.

It happens that the United States, having no envy of any nation or any territorial ambitions, isn't the arbiter of the question whether to go to war or not. The decision will be made by the goon countries, just as Hitler decided the same matter for Britain and France.

If the prosperity that comes of war trade is prosperity—which always must be followed by a compensating slump, possibly by disorders at home—that is just one of the risks of existence in a world whose decisions for war or peace are made by marauding dictators.

Military Weakness Shown To Be Fatal

HITLER HAS MADE one thing plain—that military weakness is fatal to peace in any nation against which he develops a grudge. He talked and wrote big about his hatred of Russia, but Russia was well heeled, and when the time came for him to pick his enemy the enemy wasn't Russia at all but the British, who were so weak that they flinched and backed away at Munich in order to gain a year's time for preparation.

Certainly this is no New Deal measure that is about to pass now. It is an expression of the majority sentiment of the country, agreed on by many who hate the New Deal and is more likely to prevent an attack on this country's interests by the aggressor and thus to avert war than to shoo us in.

It would be interesting, and probably shocking, to know just how many shell and anti-aircraft guns the United States possesses at this moment and how long it would take to produce enough to meet an enemy.

Roosevelt Wishes Y. M. C. A. Success On Anniversary

President Roosevelt yesterday described the international work of the Y. M. C. A. as "a means for the promotion of friendly understanding and the spirit of the good neighbor in other lands."

In greeting with a message approximately 1,311,000 members who will celebrate Founders' Day today, Mr. Roosevelt declared, "I trust that your commemoration will inspire all participating with new determination to extend the good work of the organization . . ."

The President added he always "desired to be counted among those who appreciate the all-around work for our youth which the Y. M. C. A. has accomplished."

Dr. John R. Mott, president of the World's Alliance of the Y. M. C. A., is scheduled to broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 4:45 p. m. today.

Premier Says France Will Fight Till Peril Of Aggression Ends

By the Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 10.—The text of Premier Daladier's broadcast to the nation tonight follows:

We are in war and you will understand that silence is necessary for success of our military operations.

You have rightly thought and I am thoroughly in agreement with you that it is only natural and legitimate that you be informed of general action of the government on thoughts and decisions which animate it in the principal events of international politics. It is of that that I wish especially to speak to you today.

For a month our soldiers have advanced on enemy territory. In the air our aviators have multiplied the proofs of their courage. On the sea our sailors have assured free communications of France with her empire, pursued enemy submarines, captured hundreds of thousands of tons of raw materials destined for Germany.

Britain and France are mistresses of the ocean, and you know from the experience of history that finally those who hold the seas sooner or later succeed in carrying off victory.

But England does not confine herself to giving us the support of her fleet. She does not confine herself to sending more aviators daily to our front who give repeated proofs of their ability and valor. She also is sending rapidly to France her splendid youth, her robust material.

Marching British Disprove Nazi Story

I WAS TOLD the other day that in some French regions at the moment when the German radio was carrying on its vain campaign to separate France from England that it was repeated that Great Britain wanted to wage war with the blood of the French. The voice of the traitors of Stuggart was covered by the uninterrupted rumbling of convoys which were taking soldiers and cannon of the British army toward our frontiers.

Thus factual propaganda is stronger than that of lies.

It is thus, moreover, in our national life, as you have certainly noticed yourselves. There also events have wrecked many other undertakings of enemy propaganda.

Several weeks ago Communists' leaders posed before you as fierce patriots. They were, according to themselves, new Jacobins. They had no words harsh enough or even insulting enough to scorn the peaceful efforts of the government.

They announced in meetings that they were ready to fight against Hitler and against his armies for liberty and the Fatherland. Yet it sufficed for the Bolshevists to find it to their interest to agree with the Nazis and partition Poland with them for these same great patriots to simply make their excuses for a peace of treason.

There are dictators who massacre Communist workers and reach agreement later with their chiefs, but we French never think of confusing the workers of France, whatever may be their political opinion, with men who wanted to abuse and betray them.

On the contrary it is with even more ardent faith in the people and the common fatherland that we appeal to French fraternity which will permit us once more to overcome trials and vanquish peril.

For we are fighting not only for our soil and homes but also for civilization which surpasses our frontiers and which made us what we are; free, worthy beings respectful of their neighbors, capable of keeping their word and faithful to the great tradition of western culture.

Neither France nor Great Britain entered the war to support a sort of ideological crusade. Neither France nor Great Britain entered the war any more with a spirit of conquest than that they were obliged to fight because Germany wanted to impose on them her domination over Europe.

Will Lay Down Arms Only With Guarantees

WHO COULD be made to believe now that it was a question of Danzig and the Corridor or of the fate of German minorities? Germany has taken upon herself to show that she wanted either to subject Poland by deceit or crush her by steel and fire.

After Austria came Czecho-Slovakia and after Czecho-Slovakia, Poland. All these undertakings were only steps on the path which would have brought France and Europe to the harshest of slaveries.

I know that they talk to you today of peace, of German peace, of peace which would only consecrate conquests by deceit or violence and would not prevent preparation for new ones.

What in fact does the latest speech before the Reichstag amount to? This: I (Hitler) destroyed Poland, I am satisfied; let's stop the combat; let's hold a conference to consecrate my conquests and organize peace.

The misfortune is that we already had heard such talk. After the annexation of Austria, Germany told the world: I have taken Austria; I ask nothing more. Several months later he claimed the Sudetens and Germany's chief told us at Munich that once this claim was satisfied he would ask for nothing more.

Several months afterward, Germany seized all of Czecho-Slovakia. Then before the Reichstag the world was told: Germany wants nothing more.

After crushing Poland it is the same assurance that is given today.

Certainly we always wanted and still want only sincere cooperation and loyal understanding to be established among people, but we are determined not to submit to the dictates of violence.

We have taken up arms against aggression. We will lay them down only when we have certain guarantees of security which may not be put in doubt every six months.

Security of Nations Excludes Conquests

HOW CAN this security exist, either for us or the world, if a nation is wiped off the map of Europe by force? What people would ever feel protected from aggression if it appeared thus every six months despite pledges against annexation or partition of another people which had the right like itself, to live, inoepenent and free?

And how can it fail to be understood that, far from making reduction of armaments possible, the subjection of one nation can only force all other peoples continually to live and work only to arm?

If peace really is desired, a lasting peace which will give to all women, to all children, the joy of living and confidence in the future, it will be necessary first to calm the revolted consciences, correct abuses of force and conciliate honestly the rights and interests of all peoples.

They say that the fate of Poland concerns only two powers. We reply that it interests also and first of all the Poles. They want to make the map of Europe without taking any account of living realities of peoples, either their traditions or their needs. We reply that Europe is brought thus to revolutions and wars which plunged it into blood for centuries.

If peace is really desired, a lasting peace, it will be necessary to understand that security of nations can rest only on reciprocal guarantees excluding any surprise and erecting a barrier against any attempt at domination.

If peace is really desired, a lasting peace, it will be necessary to understand finally that the time has passed when territorial conquests bring wellbeing to the conquerors. After all these conquests, Germany is beginning the war with bread card, meat card, milk card, sugar card.

We French have a horror of all this servitude. We want our victory to create only a Europe freed from all threats of aggression.

France, on whom war has been imposed, speaks in battle the same language she has always spoken. I affirm then that we are fighting and we will continue to fight to obtain a definite guarantee of security.

Poilus Wouldn't Condone Quitting

THE MOST MODEST soldier, as well as our greatest chiefs, understands what risks our fatherland would run if, after having demobilized under vain promises, we had to face several months later an abrupt aggression.

I know everyone would fulfill once again his duty to the fatherland. But then they would have to rejoin units under fire of the enemy and organize under aerial bombardments. No Frenchman would pardon us for having bared France thus.

In the minds of soldiers, all problems of which I have just spoken moreover are presented with clarity which leaves room for no uncertainty. In the trenches the German soldier must say to himself: "My government protested against the Versailles Treaty in the name of the right of peoples to dispose of themselves. Now it has seized Vienna, Austria, Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, Warsaw and Poland. This policy of violence has thrown me into a murderous war. These people had the same right to life as the German people. The cause I defend is not a just cause."

And the French soldier thinks on the contrary: "My country did everything to save peace. It oppressed no people. It wants to oppress none. I am here to defend my fatherland and save it from the tragic fate which so grievously struck in Europe for two years millions of men, women and children. I want to end this. The cause I defend is a just cause. I will lead it to victory."

What our soldiers think the people of all France think as well. And the government in its daily action, in its unbreakable will, will show itself worthy of the faith which animates all sons of our fatherland.

Unstable Prosperity

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Wartime Boom

A WARNING against the dangers of war-trade boom has been issued to the C. I. O. and the Nation at large by John L. Lewis. Mr. Lewis looks beyond the present flurry of economic activity due largely to the European war and arrives at this conclusion:

"To some extent labor will benefit from this activity temporarily. There will be more employment, wages will be maintained and employment will be steadier, but those benefits will be temporary and in the large measure false."

The benefits will be false Mr. Lewis says, for two reasons. First, because if there is a real war boom, prices will rise more rapidly than wages, so that workers will be able to buy less food, clothing and housing. Secondly, because:

"When a war boom ends, the Nation is certain to be in a worse economic condition and the workers to suffer worse hardships than before such a boom began. That we know from bitter experience.

"Rather than a war boom, with all the injustices and evils that arise out of it, labor wants a solid and stable prosperity based upon the kind of fundamental economic readjustments that will last. Rather than work building guns and explosives, battleships and bayonets, to kill other workers, labor wants work building homes and automobiles and radios to make other people happy.

"The illusion of prosperity brought by war is a hateful deception . . ."

Ideals, Dollars On the Same Side?

WITH MR. LEWIS' diagnosis many industrialists and businessmen agree. So do many members of the Roosevelt Administration—some of them stanchly New Deal, some more conservative in their attitude toward domestic issues. So do some members of Congress on both sides of the current argument over the repeal of the arms embargo.

But the members of the Administration, to all intents and purposes, are gagged. Most of them are voluntarily loyal to the President. They feel that they cannot say publicly what is on their minds. Many of them do not have direct access to him or are asked for recommendations or advice only on their own limited sectors of domestic affairs.

The President has shown no concern whatsoever about the possible effects of a war boom on our economy or on his liberal domestic objectives. In fact, one of his best-known lieutenants has boasted that the President would win the fight over the arms embargo because "for once the ideals and the dollars are on the same side."

This boast is untrue. For many of the dollars and of the ideals are on the opposite side of the arms embargo issue. The arms embargo does not go to the heart of the question, however, because whether it is retained or repealed, we can expect a war boom of a kind. Mr. Lewis thinks that unless we get into the war the boom will "take up only a small part of the unemployment." With this view, leading economists in the Administration agree. Unless British and French industrial capacity suffer heavy destruction from aerial bombardment, they expect the war boom in this country to be limited to certain branches of heavy industry and (if the embargo is lifted) ariplanes and a few types of ordnance and munitions.

Boom Will Not Aid Peacetime Industry

A WAR BOOM in special lines would build up productive facilities which have little or no peacetime use. (Airplanes probably are an exception, since we can reasonably expect a great continuing expansion in civil aviation in the years ahead.) And in the building up of productive facilities must be included the training of workers.

A great expansion of heavy industries, especially for war purposes, runs counter to the New Deal objective of channeling more of the national income directly into direct consumption; that is, toward increasing the standard of living. This is exactly what John L. Lewis was talking about when he said American workers would rather be engaged in making houses, automobiles and radios than in making guns, explosives, battleships and other implements of war.

When the war boom peters out, the readjustment is likely to be more difficult than our present problem of finding useful work for nine or ten million unemployed.

Such distortions in our economic structure can be prevented only by restricting exports of all kinds of heavy industrial goods to the belligerent nations to approximately peacetime levels. A few exceptions could be made for industries essential to our own national defense or useful to our own future peacetime needs—the airplane industry being the most conspicuous example.

In issuing his warning, John L. Lewis has said what many others—including many who are hostile to the CIO—think, but for various reasons have felt restrained from saying.

Labor Hearing Set On Young Drivers

A public hearing on a proposed Labor Department order, which declares that the occupations of motor-vehicle driver and helper are hazardous for minors between 16 and 18, will be held at 10 a. m., October 27, in Room 3229 of the Labor Department, Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, announced yesterday.

The order, scheduled to take effect January 1, 1940, would bar shipment or delivery of goods in commerce produced by establishments employing drivers and helpers in the 16-18 year group. It is under the fair labor standards act.

American Peace Efforts

IF THE PEOPLE of the United States want President Roosevelt to use the great power of this country now or at any moment in the future in behalf of peace, they should untie the President's hands and repeal the so-called neutrality act. They should regain for the Government of the United States freedom of action. They should appoint a bi-partisan and expert committee of national defense to advise and consult with the President continually.

The United States will have influence precisely in proportion to our power and to our willingness to use that power. Everyone wants this war to end, and, most of all, I should think Adolf Hitler. Because Hitler has already lost the war. He has lost it to Soviet Russia. The man who won all the opening moves in the great chess game has been stalemated by a much shrewder and more ruthless player. The man whose audacity against the weak—against Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland—earned him in certain limited minds the right to be called a political genius emerges for what he always was: A consummate political idiot on the most grandiose scale, a crackbrained hysteric without a principle in his whole kit.

Political Fiasco Was His 'Blitzkrieg'

THE MAN who wrote "Never permit another great military power to rise up on your own frontiers" has exchanged Poland and Czecho-Slovakia for Soviet Russia. He is tied hand and foot by the Soviet Union. His "lightning war" against Poland was a military success and a political fiasco.

He has won the larger part of Poland for Soviet Russia—and Stalin, with complete cynicism, has taken over Hitler's previous roll of conqueror without spilling a drop of blood. Day by day Stalin makes real gains—ports on the Baltic, which before this war was a German sea. Hitler has got to share his famous "lebensraum" with the most uncomfortable and unscrupulous neighbor that he could possibly select. This neighbor, unlike the democracies, has a revolutionary weapon to use, as well as guns, and is using it. And Hitler must depend upon Russia for the very sustenance of his people.

It is a Homeric story. The man who designed the anti-comintern pact, who set up himself and his regime as the bulwark against Bolshevism, has introduced Bolshevism into Europe. Soviet Russia is in a position where it can threaten the Scandinavian countries and all of Eastern Europe.

Moscow Rules Berlin Axis

AS MUSSOLINI became a mere gauleiter of Hitler until the Russo-German pact, so Hitler today is a mere gauleiter of Stalin. The capital of the Rome-Berlin axis was in Berlin. The capital of the Berlin-Moscow axis is in Moscow. We do not see Molotov or Stalin flying, like Ciano, Chamberlain and Daladier a few months ago, to Berchtesgaden; we see Ribbentrop commuting to Moscow.

Those who think Stalin may turn against Hitler and at some moment assist the western powers are making, I fear, a great mistake. The perennial enemy of Russia has been the British Empire. Stalin detests the west. He is an Asiatic. What could be better for him than to have the assistance of Germany—a country which Hitler himself has always said has no claims against Great Britain beyond a few colonies—to destroy or weaken the empire? Who would be the heir to india? Hitler? Certainly not! Russia would be. Who would be the heir to the Black Sea ports and the Dardanelles in the event of a Russo-German victory? Germany or Russia? And could Hitler make another volte face and drive his desperate people finally against Russia, with whom he is now on such fulsomely friendly terms?

Suppose that Hitler could successfully make the "horror war" which he threatens against the west. Suppose the worst for the western powers and the best for Hitler. Suppose that he concentrates in still more terrific form than in Poland all his great air force, assisted even by the Russion air force, against the cities, industries and lines of the western powers. Suppose, even, that he could win in the west the lightning war that he threatens. He would inherit chaos in the west, and Russia and the Red army would be after him in the east, more dangerous and devastating as a friend than as an enemy. Again the heir would be Russia.

Desperate for Peace On Any Terms

IT IS THEREFORE to be presumed that this time Hitler is desperately sincere in wanting peace and in wanting it on almost any terms. For this genius to chambermaids, this superman to house porters, this catastrophic conqueror of a great and long-suffering people—the Germans—this self-styled inspired somnambulist, is this time walking in his sleep on the edge of the roof, and perhaps even he has waked up.

He is like an untalented theatrical producer. He has invested a fortune in a bad script; another fortune in a bad cast; another fortune in press agents. He has, he thinks, the greatest spectacle of the ages. He has tried it out in the sticks and it is a wow. But some city critics sat in on the show and, after the notices in Variety, he is advised not to take it into New York.

It did for Prague and Warsaw, but it will flop in Paris and London.

If Hitler wins the war in the west, he loses to Stalin. If he loses the war in the west, however ignominiously, by whatever peace, he loses to victors who have only one passionate desire—to welcome Germany back into the fellowship of western civilization, realizing that all have sinned and all are guilty and that the time has come to make a new deal all around.

Peace Restoration Depends On U. S.

BUT THE HOPE for such a new deal and for the restoration of genuine peace, justice and civilization depends upon the United States of America. It depends upon our imagination, our gold, our resources, our organization. There will be no peace, no return to prosperity, and no future for western civilization except upon the recognition of the unity of that civilization and upon the recognition that this war is an awful civil war among men who are all members of one civilization.

In this situation the United States can be the determining factor for the future of our common civilization, but only if we are willing to use the power we have, and only if the Government has freedom of action with which to bargain.

This war can still be won for western civilization by political action.

But that needs courage and imagination.

Pelz Succeeds Dent as Surveyor For Washington

Carl E. Pelz yesterday succeeded his former boss, Edward A. Dent, as District surveyor. Dent was sworn in as District tax assessor.

A veteran of 25 years in the District government, Pelz has served as assistant surveyor since early this year. He was first appointed to the District service in 1889 as a chainman. After one year he left the District service, but returned in 1895 as an assistant engineer in the street repair division, remaining for three years.

In 1918, Pelz again returned to the District service as an assistant engineer in the surveyor's office and has been there since.

Lutherans Elect Rev. Mr. Shumate

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—The Rev. A. R. Shumate, of Waynesboro, was re-elected president of the Staunton conference of the United Lutheran Church today at the opening of the two-day annual convention here.

The Rev. H. E. Poff was re-elected secretary and the Rev. E. B. East, Waynesboro, was named treasurer.

Two resolutions were adopted. One removed a portion of the Augsberg confession from the conference program and the other removed the compulsory Sunday school feature. A third resolution placing the conference program entirely in charge of the Synod of Virginia was tabled after a long debate.

A. F. L. Appeals Order On Beer Truck Drviers

Attorney Arthur E. Reyman yesterday filed the A. F. L. notice of appeal with the District Court of Appeals from an injunction granted the brewery workers' union by Justice Goldsborough in the District Court last week. The injunction branded A. F. L efforts to transfer 25,000 beer truck drivers from the brewery union to the Brotherhood of Teamsters as a breach of contract.

Hitler And Stalin Talk It Over

Hitler.—Let's check up and find out.

Hitler.—I know you're sure, but I want to be sure, too.

Stalin.—We're partners, are we not, comrade?

Hitler.—Don't call me comrade in such a loud voice.

Stalin.—Don't you like it?

Hitler.—Yes, but it's a little premature.

Stalin.—But we are partners, as I was saying, ain't we?

Hitler—I'm afraid so!

Stalin.—It can all be summed up in the old adage.

Hitler.—What adage?

Stalin.—What's yours is yours and what's mine is something you'll ultimately discover.

Hitler.—You puzzle me. I never can be sure when you are serious and when you are just jesting.

Stalin.—You'll find out!

Hitler (proudly).—Think of it, here we are giving orders to all Europe!

Stalin.—Yes, sir, and it's certainly scared of me!

Hitler.—Scared of me, you mean.

Stalin.—Nonesense. You know Europe wasn't scared of you; that is why you signed up with me.

Hitler.—Anyhow, let's go over the situation and see how we stand. Things have happened so rapidly we need a checkup. I want to be sure you and I have no misunderstandings.

Stalin—Always an optimist!

Hitler.—Did you hear my last speech?

Stalin.—No, but they're all the same.

Hitler.—In it I explained our respective roles and outlined what part you would play in Europe from now on.

Stalin.—That was nice of you.

Hitler.—I assume you are satisfied. Take Poland, for instance. Was the division O. K.?

Stalin.—I could have done with fewer marshes, but I'm not kicking yet.

Hitler.—I don't like that word "yet." You're getting the upper hand in Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Finland . . . why, when I realize what you've got out of my war I'm stunned.

Stalin.—Russia considers it one of the best wars she ever won.

Hitler.—The point is this: Are we sure we can trust each other?

Stalin (distastefully).—Have I got to trust you?

Hitler.—It's only fair, seeing as how I've got to trust you, too.

Stalin.—The strain is mutual.

Hitler.—I tell you what we'll do. I'll make the pledge that I solemnly swear to be on the level with you and you repeat it.

Stalin (repeating it).—I solemnly pledge myself to be on the level with you.

Each (in an aside).—And that sap believes me!

Vox Clamantis

The boys are on the campus now,
The feast is spread upon the board,
The harvest of a thousand years
By clerk and scholar reaped and stored.

And some are spinning golden dreams,
And some are treasuring a store
Of revelry for unknown years,
While chapel bells ring out once more.

And some are straining back and limb
To sweep a rival foeman down,
While others bend at unsung toil
To earn their way toward cap and gown.

The drowsy summer days are gone,
And autumn's tang is sharp and clear,
His banner flames on shrub and tree——
The college starts another year.

Lewis Expects Labor War to Be Continued

C. I. O. Leader Backs Boosevelt Embargo Repeal, Peace for U. S.

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 10.—John L. Lewis demanded peace for America in opening the second C. I. O. convention today, but offered no peace to the A. F. L.

He urged Congress to adopt President Roosevelt's neutrality program and expressed the hope "President Roosevelt will make available his own great influence in behalf of peace, when conditions warrant and justify his intervention."

The question of a united labor movement was laid before Lewis by Gov. Olson of California, who told the 400 delegates "unity between the C. I. O. and A. F. L." was "desirable alike from the standpoint of labor and national well-being."

Lewis Rejects Idea

Lewis replied, "The Congress of Industrial Organizations had to be organized before Gov. Olson could come here to make a speech . . . The people of the United States were never made conscious of the labor problem before the Congress of Industrial Organizations came into being."

Gov. Olson had forecast A. F. L.-C. I. O. unity. But Lewis' remarks indicated he expected to lead the C. I. O. as a separate entity for at least another five years.

"Five years ago my voice was a feeble voice in this hall," where he was a delegate to an A. F. of L. national convention, the C. I. O. leader said; "But today I come back to San Francisco and behind me is an army of four million men and women—a greater numerical force than ever followed any conqueror in the pages of history.

This "army of peace," he said, represented 20,000,000 Americans.

10,000,000 Predicted

"When I come back five years from now," he continued, "as come back I will, I will come into San Francisco with at least 10,000,000 dues-paying members."

The convention thundered its approval, as it had applauded his repeated requests to "organize the unorganized" and his demands for peace.

"The members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations are Americans in principle, in thought and in action," Lewis said. "We will at all times give support to our instrumentalities of government and the political leadership of our country in any crisis or situation which imperils the integrity or existence of the free institutions under our flag.

"We do, however, have the firm and unalterable conviction that our Nation is not called upon to participate in any manner on one side or the other of a European conflict."

Chrysler Willing To Settle Strike By Negotiation

Detroit, Oct. 10 (AP).—Spokesmen of the Chrysler Corporation tonight declared their willingness to negotiate for a new contract with the United Automobile workers (C. I. O.) and settle their dispute, which has made more than 18,000 employes idle.

Herman L. Weckler, vice president of the Chrysler Corporation, made the offer in a reply to union peace proposals presented by Richard T. Frankensteen, regional director and head of the Chrysler division of the union.

Cleaning Plant Blast Kills 3, Injures 35, Blows Hole in Wall of New York Theater

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

An explosion in this dry cleaning plant near Madison Square, New York City, razed the establishment and collapsed the wall of the adjoining motion picture theater. The blast, which killed three persons, was believed to have been caused when an employe tried to light a hot-water heater after cleaning hats w ith a volatile fluid

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—Three persons were killed and at least 35 injured today when an explosion wrecked a dry cleaning plant and tore through the wall of a motion picture theater.

Some of those injured were pedestrians, cut by flying glass and other debris.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Rosenblum said the blast occurred when Benjamin Oliwenstein, 48, tried to light a hot-water heater after cleaning hats with a volatile fluid.

The dead were Sylvia Binder, manager of the cleaning shop; David Torey, 13, a high school student, and William J. Shade, 60, of Glendale, Queens, inspector for the city department of finance.

A soft drink stand nearby also was wrecked.

Employes and customers in the cleaning shop and drink stand apparently were among the most seriously hurt.

Approximately 75 persons were watching a motion picture in the theater when the blast occurred. Several women fainted and were rescued by students from nearby City College of New York.

Among the first injured persons to be identified were Mr. and Mrs. George Halpin, of Lenox, Mass., who suffered head injuries.

The detonation shattered windows almost a block away and brought a huge crowd to the vicinity of Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street.

5,000 Postmasters Visit Washington

Deer Season a Subject

Beside the huge photograph of the Postmaster General in the Constitution Hall lobby stood John F. Ploog, 23 years postmaster in McCausland, Iowa. "Washington?" he said. "There's a lot of it; too much of it; too busy." McCausland is more serene, with its 100 population. Outside the door, in a confidential huddle were two postmasters—one from Maine, the other from Colorado. No shop talk there. "Say, when does the deer-shooting season open up your way?" The Coloradoan was inquiring.

At Mount Vernon, the crowds looked as two ladies planted two kisses on a postmaster they acclaimed as "Uncle Jim," the favorite of the association. He could, it was said, create a cranberry cocktail that tasted as if everything but the bartender's mustache was in it.

Along the historic slope was a postmaster with unique responsibility. He is A. Judson Pryor, and presides over the office at Texarkana, Texas-Arkansas, with the State line bisecting his desk. Consequently, he oversees the mail for two cities in two States.

Air Mail Trips

There are other aspects than meeting one another and receiving the welcomes from the Postmaster General and Washington Postmaster Vincent C. Burke. They will concentrate on stamps. Trips will be made through the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and lessons will be given on air-mail procedures, even to the seeing that postmasters who desire may have flights above Washington in mail-carrying planes.

Today, visits will be made to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and open house will be observed at the Postoffice Department from 4 to 7 p. m. State groups last night held special group parties.

A. F. of L. Vote Supports Fight On Labor Act

Convention Declines To Take 'Blanket' Stand on New Deal

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 10.—With a roar of approving votes, the American Federation of Labor convention late today reaffirmed its drive for revision of the Wagner act and a new labor board after refusing to take a direct stand on the New Deal as whole.

The convention overwhelmed a small dissenting minority in voting to carry on its campaign to place legislative curbs around some of the labor board's discretionary powers, and served notice that it would fight the reappointment of Edwin S. Smith to the board when his term expires next year.

In a floor speech, John P. Burke, of the Paper Mill Workers, warned that revision of the act would be "dangerous to the future welfare of workers."

Incompetent, Says Green

A. F. L. President William Green responded that the labor board personnel was "incompetent and possessed of peculiar philosophical ideas."

Reminding the convention that President Roosevelt withdrew the name of Donald Wakefield Smith for the reappointment to the board last summer after the A. F. of L. organized opposition to Senate confirmation, Green shouted: "We'll do the same when the term of Edwin S. Smith expires."

Resolution Defeated

Burke and George Q. Lynch, of the Pattern Makers, demanded that more emphasis be placed on revision of board personnel than of the act itself.

The federation was treated yesterday to a strong pro-Roosevelt demonstration.

John J. Egan, of the Connecticut State Federation of Labor, which sponsored a resolution indorsing the New Deal, said Connecticut labor had served notice of its opposition to "reactionaries" in both parties.

President Green called for a voice vote. "Ayes" and "nays" appeared to be almost evenly divided and he ruled a resolutions committee report for non-concurrence adopted.

McLean Sees President

Robert McLean, publisher of the Philadelphia Bulletin and president of the Associated Press, attended President Roosevelt's press conference yesterday and later conferred privately with the chief executive.

Townsend Plan Paid Broadcasts Are Limited

The code compliance committee of the National Association of Broadcasters yesterday barred from radio networks paid broadcasts in behalf of the Townsend Old-Age Pension Plan, when political campaigns are not in progress.

In a finding under the new NAB code, the committee ruled that the broadcasts sponsoring the Townsend Plan constitute a discussion of a controversial issue, barred under the new regulations, except in political campaigns.

The committee pointed out that Townsend advocates are not forbidden use of free time on the air, provided "all elements in the controversy" are given opportunity to express their views.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Lists Washington Girls in Three Disappointing Classifications; He Can't Find a Good Sport

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After two years here, I have come to the conclusion that Washington girls are the coldest and hardest-to-get-acquainted-with that I have ever known. I am 23 and I come from a Midwestern city where people are very friendly; but having always heard of "Southern hospitality," I had hoped for something even better here.

Some of the girls I have been out with are the kind who try to spend all your money. There is another type who has to return home early after a dance or a movie. Still another type is husband hunting and makes it too obvious. All of them act like a bunch of scared kids, when it comes to enjoying the moon.

What I am looking for is a girl—or girls—who will show a fellow a good time in return for the good time he is willing to show her—or them. In other words, a girl who is not on the receiving end all the time. Where is she? Sincerely yours, DISGUSTED.

Remove the Beam From Your Eye

DEAR DISGUSTED: Not long ago, I spent an evening in the home of friends and the host, an amiable soul, famous author and oft-quoted observer of human behavior (some of whose psychological writings are accepted as classics), remarked that he has a pretty low opinion of the type of young man who periodically writes to this department to express dissatisfaction with all the young women of his acquaintance.

He confessed equal distaste for the type of fellow who tells that he is eating his heart out with loneliness because he doesn't know "how to win friends and influence people." He thinks that either chap—the malcontent or the "lonely heart"—must surely be as boring, as an individual, as his letter is boring to read. In fact, he implied a certain mild wonderment that this department continues to give "house room" (shall we say?) to such complaints.

Well, to tell the truth, I think he's "got something," there. Such complaints as yours are rather tedious, since the fault is obviously more with yourself than with the accused. Instead of "looking for a girl who will show a fellow a good time in return for the good time he is willing to show her," why don't you look either for a girl who is more interested in you than she is in a "good time," or, for a girl whom you like so much that it will give you pleasure to give her pleasure, regardless of what she gives you in return?

In "looking for a girl who will show . . . etc.," it seems to me that you are reducing friendship, comradeship or what-have-you, to the level of a rather cold-blooded exchange. There's nothing very open-handed, warm-hearted, sporting or chivalrous about your approach. Being more concerned with getting than with giving, it seems only natural that you would have run into the sort of difficulties described.

Your lightmindedness has been your undoing, I daresay, since the ladies undoubtedly have recognized the fact that you regard them more as symbols of a "good time," than as distinctive and lovable personalities deserving serious consideration. Those girls who have obligated you to spend too much money; those who have had "to return home early after a dance or a movie," and those others who have blandly indicated that they are looking for husbands, simply were giving you tit for tat.

I can imagine that you complacently regard yourself as a "choosey" fellow, not content with anything less than the pick of the crop, supposedly; and that you choose your girl companions primarily for their pictorial or popularity value—since spectacular adornment of your ego is probably the first return you seek on your investment of time and money. I expect you even reflect that you are giving these belles somewhat of a break in taking them out, whereas they probably figure that they have equalized the score merely by being seen with you.

As for their acting "like a bunch of scared kids," when you would offer them romance by moonlight, don't be misled by their polite protestations. This reaction doesn't prove they are dim wits, by any means. Intelligently self protective modern young women of metropolitan background have too much prudence to make a habit of admiring the midnight moon on highways and byways.

They consider the various hazards scarcely worthwhile. Moreover, they think sufficiently well of themselves—and rightly—to believe that such concessions are not essential to popularity. They consider it neither good form nor good sense to behave, with casual suitors, as though they hadn't a home to go to, when a specific program of entertainment has come to a close.

And now for your question—where is the big-hearted girl friend? She's all around you, my boy. But she probably will remain invisible to your sight until you show the good sense to treat each individual girl as the very special human being she is, and not as a species of paid entertainer who has an obligation to go into a routine act for the price of a dance or a movie.

In your quest for a satisfactory girl companion, study the personality behind the facade of clothes and cosmetics, and, if necessary, do some research among the girls who are neither so pretty nor so popular. As if by divine compensation, these modest violets very often disclose, to the investigating mind, far richer and subtler qualities of charm than their more decorative and more self-assured sisters possess. Also, as if to compensate, they are usually more generous, more sympathetic and more appreciative.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Revival of Oak

Oak is due for a comeback—the staunch Elizabethan and Jacobean styles, for instance. The men will welcome a trend away from the feminine fashions in furniture that have been the main story these past several years. You simply can't get away with a single coy note in an oak room.

Glitter of Nailheads

An exotic new color, "Lelong Green"—a subtle gray-green hue—is illumined here by an intricate scrollwork of nailheads. They are bright silver nailheads, a handsome decorative theme beloved by the Brothers Eisenberg, who created this glittering gown. The square neckline, three-quarter length sleeves and big back bow are flattering adjuncts to the styling of this dinner-time crepe. This was one of the back-to-town clock-round fashions presented at the first of the Shoreham Hotel's luncheon style showings recently

Unlike my fortunate next door neighbor,
The dashing Mrs. Chauncey Gadd,
I did not go to a single place all summer
Now wasn't that too bad?
And yet I should not care to see Bermuda,
Nor much less take a Caribbean cruise,
With Mr. Gadd in skull cap at my elbow.
No, such a dubious fate I'd never choose.

Our old car now must do another season,
While Mrs. Percy Prink across the street,
Has bought herself a darling roadster,
And takes her place among the town's elite;
And yet she must put up with Percy's mother,
His widowed sister and her own Aunt Lou.
I think I'd rather have a car that rattled,
Than all the household fuss that must ensue.

III.

My friend Mae Swagg—he cornered copper—
In coat of mink does now appear,
What's more she has a matching turban,
My rabbit skin I'll wear another year;
Yet she must live on pureed parsnips,
And buttermilk and juice of prunes,
I'd rather keep my rags and my digestion,
For beefsteak, chocolate macaroons.

IV.

And Sadie Snapp, the smart career girl,
With money of her own to spend,
Goes places, sees things, has a high time,
No husband need she fear offend;
And yet she has a boss that's fussy,
And in her office several "difficult" men,
One's bad enough, I guess I'm lucky,
To be a very private citizen.

V.

Peg Tripp is having her whole house done over,
And at a nice hotel is now a guest.
I never have new things like other women,
Whats more, I never get a rest;
Yet at bridge she can make no boast of kiddies,
And all the clever things they do and say,
While I—well you can just bet your last dollar,
That's one time that I have my day.

VI.

And when I think of Elsie Dudd's Apollo,
Who's paying toll to several other wives,
Of Lucy Jinks' dull offspring, Jane Chubb's in-laws,
Of Evie Pine on whom her doctor thrives;
Of Ethel Prigg with skeleton in every closet,
Of the poor relations of proud Mrs. Pelf,
I suppose I couldn't do much better
Then just to keep on being my own self.

Rayon Featured In Fall Draperies

Decorative fabrics of rayon, this fall, promise an exhilarating adventure for all those homemakers who are on the hunt for distinctive new drapery or upholstery materials. Many fresh ideas for creating lovely rooms are seen in Du Pont Rayon, such as designs printed with opaque lacquer colors, sprayed-on patterns that have a gay aliveness, and spun rayons that feel like mohair.

Floral prints have interesting textures, backgrounds in honeycomb and hammered effects. Brocades, damasks, moires, bengalines, homespuns and other perennial favorites, are brought up-to-date with rayon weaves.

Hands Reveal Latent Talents, Says Woman Job Consultant

Anne Shriber Uses Them as Basis for Advice Concerning Career Choices; Also Finds Them Guide to Temperament, Health

LOOK into your hands to determine your talents before launching on a career. The hands are no magic crystals that reveal the future, but they do indicate specific characteristics that will aid your in selecting your life's profession. This is the conviction of Miss Anne Shiber, vocational guidance consultant of New York, who was a recent visitor in Washington.

Approaching palmistry scientifically, Miss Shriber emphasized that the hands reveal disposition, temperament, health, talents and ability. She does not believe in the "hokum" of future prediction through palmistry. But she does think that the hands point the way to success or failure in certain vocations. Once a pupil of William G. Benham, author of the "Laws of Scientific Hand Reading," she has become an expert at advising people as to their vocations in life. This she does by analysis of the hands.

So adept has she become at reading people's character in the hands that she instantly pointed out to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Department of Justice, that he was not the tenacious, unapproachable, hard boiled individual he would generally have his public believe.

"You have your soft moments," she told Mr. Hoover. "There's little that you wouldn't do for some one you loved greatly. But that is the side of your nature that you keep hidden from the public." This, she maintains, she learned from a study of his hands.

Women Drift Into Jobs

"Both men and women would be happier and healthier if they could interpret the story of their hands," said Miss Shriber. "They would not make so many mistakes in choosing jobs to which they are not fitted—either in ability or tempermament.

Here are some suggestions for determining temperament, talent and aptitude by the hands. These, Miss Shriber earnestly declares, are far from complete but they go a long way in helping a person size up his or her ability to choose a vocation in which the greatest happiness and success may be achieved.

Squarish fingers that are about equally developed indicate great versatility.

Flexible fingers, open hands are indicative of a youthful mind, open and receptive to new ideas, learning, varied environments and new friends.

Tightly clinched, closed hands show a narrow, closed mind.

Small, short nails point to an argumentative mind and attitude.

Long fingers are typical of talent for detail. These women have slow, cautious minds. They are dubious and suspicious of everything any everybody. Usually they turn out to be naggers.

Short Fingers for Impatience

Short fingers usually go with impatience and show dynamic force. These are the great builders; they get things accomplished.

Firm hands belong to energetic women. Those with long, white fingers are lazy.

Smooth fingers show lack of organization ability. Possessors of this type are careless in details and orderliness.

Knots on the fingers or enlarged joints show great power of organization and an analytical mind.

White hands are lazy temperaments. Women with white hands do not get along well with other people. They do not know how to deal with the public. Also they lack warmth. They do better at a desk where they can work alone.

Pink hands are indicative of a warm, colorful personality. Women with pink hands make wonderful contact people and especially good hostesses.

The ideal secretary, according to Miss Shriber, has medium-size fingers with pink skin. She must have some ability for detail and must be able to deal with the public tactfully.

Top-notch successful executives all have short or medium fingers that are knotty to show their organizing ability. Their fingers, too, are pinkish in hue rather than white, for they must know how to handle people.

Your Figure, Madame!

Fad for Slimness Has Lessened Sex Appeal Says Rex Ingram, Hollywood Expert

WELL, WELL! Rex Ingram—he was responsible for "The Four Horsemen"—doesn't think that Hollywood can today boast a single sensational star. What the screen luminaries lack, insists Mr. Ingram, is that complex factor which has been labelled "sex appeal."

Broken down into simpler components, sex appeal would seem to consist in great beauty, terrific personality and an intrinsic something else which puts the world in its place—at a star's feet! If you ask Mr. Ingram, Nita Naldi, Alice Terry and Gloria Swanson were three outsanding examples of the silent favorites so blessed.

And why don't the talking stars have what it takes. "They're too thin," is the answer. "It seems to be the fashion to have a figure like a bellhop. It isn't feminine. It isn't beautiful. All the great stars were on the curvesome order."

Thinks Corsets Scandalous

To an extent, Mr. Ingram is inclined to blame the persistence of style for thinness on the couturiers. But the couturiers have more to answer for!

"I think the vogue of the wasp-waist corset is nothing less than scandalous," the director says. "It is on a par with the African custom of putting wooden disks into the women's lips. It distorts nature just as much. Nothing that distorts nature is beautiful."

Asked to name one American celebrity—just one—with the proper quota of fascination, Mr. Ingram paid tribute to Alice Marble, the tennis star, "who is more fascinating than anyone on the screen today." But she may soon be on the screen. Her film test is overdue! It was on the schedule early this year.

Curves, Not Bulges

Now where, since Mr. Ingram is a bit hard to please, do we find beautiful women en masse? Among the Tehuanas, of Mexico, and the Tarquias, of the Sahara Desert, he asserts.

"Both have magnificent figures and postures," Mr. Ingram declares. "They hold their heads high, perhaps from the custom of carrying things on their heads, and they have long slender necks, and they walk so rhythmically that it is a pleasure to watch them move. There are no other women in the world like them unless, perhaps, the Balinese. Both the Tehuanas and the Tarquias do hard physical work. When the Tehuanas are not working, they are in the river swimming."

Oatmeal and Milk for Breakfast, Says William D. Murdock

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

HERE'S my food discovery for the day. William Murdock, genial sales manager of Station WJSV, Columbia Broadcasting System, almost always wears a smile. I think the secret is out why he has such an agreeable nature. He starts the day off right by breakfasting with his young son, Michael, age 2. To Mr. Murdock's way of thinking, there is nothing better than a good breakfast.

Mr. Murdock

Michael and his dad share in their breakfast tastes. First, they have fruit juice—orange, tomato or pineapple. That's so they will get their vitamins, Mr. Murdock volunteered. Michael is very fond of oatmeal or a creamy wheat cereal. In the winter they always have this type of cereal for breakfast. Soft-cooked eggs and toast come next. "Mike," as his father sometimes calls him, hasn't quite decided he likes his milk. He prefers to eat his dad's toast while his dad interests Mike in drinking his milk.

But the young "man" will no doubt be "converted" to milk, for his father is high in his praise of it. He says that the milk bill makes quite an inroad into the food budget, but that it is worth it, as he hasn't had a cold in seven years. That is the time when he started drinking milk regularly. He drinks a quart of milk each day, and never goes to bed without drinking a glass of milk.

For quick cooking over direct heat, pour one cup of oatmeal slowly into two cups of briskly boiling water, salted to taste. Stir constantly to prevent burning, and cook until water is absorbed. Usually about 2½ minutes is sufficient, but more time is really better. For a slower preparation, boil over a moderate fire or use a double boiler. Cooking for a longer time is preferable, as slow cooking brings out the fullest flavor.

Other than breakfast, Mr. Murdock says to give him pork chops, steaks and chicken in rotation. He doesn't care what vegetables he has with his meat just so it isn't parsnips. For dessert he prefers ice cream—any flavor.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 10.

There is a well defined rumor here that the great Fred Astaire, prime poet of la danse, is coming back to Broadway for a show, after seven years in the wilds of Hollywood. What a first night that would be! . . . And that Mary Pickford, bless her heart, is laready discussing a play with one of our managers whose hit record is great.

Well, that transplanted London Supper spot, Ciro's, opened its New York replica the other night, with all the fancy folks on hand. Its wall are of honey-colored velvet, which sets off the ladies' best dresses no end.

Rich turned up at the American Woman's Clubhouse wearing a brown and green plaid frock, over which she wore a hip-length jacket of sheared beaver—her hat was brown, with a black snood. You have to see Irene's lovely slender figure to believe it.

FRANCE has never had a better friend than Miss Anne Morgan, sister of the ruling head of that poverty-stricken Morgan clan. She did much to rebuild what was left after that other war—now she is urging us to do things for the civilians there stricken by the present holocaust. And you can bet your best wimple that a Morgan check will be among those present, and no pittance, either.

Remember when Forty-Second and best known highway in New street was the most glamorous York? In those days it had at least eight famous legitimate theaters—all of which are now dime movies or palaces of burlesque. It also has museums and side-shows. Now, at the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street, the entire second floor of the present building will become "The Fiesta Ballroom"—the rental for a term of years will be enormous, and the fun will be plenteous. "Sic transit."

KAY VINCENT, one of the prettiest of local fashion editors, has just given a reception for my pet name of the day, Bijie de Wardener, who works for that now famous Iowa boy, Mainbocher, of Paris. Bijie gave the war a miss.

Mrs. Roosevelt Plans to Keep 55th Birthday Party Today to Minimum

First Lady Says She Doesn't Inquire Into the Political Philosophies of Her Guests, Answering Charges She Entertained Communists

By Hope Ridings Miller.

COMMUNISTS IN A WHITE HOUSE TEAPOT, peace, and propaganda, came in for attention yesterday at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference, the last on her Washington October schedule. The First Lady also dropped the hint that celebration of her fifty-fifth birthday today would be kept to minimum proportions and would be marked only by a birthday cake bearing 21 candles.

Asked whether she entertained Communists unawares several years ago when the American Youth Congress met here, the First Lady said she had no way then, or now, of determining political philosophies of her guests; that she had no intention then, or now, of having any censorship imposed on her guests lists; and that being a Communist did not necessarily bar a person from tossing off a cup of tea at the White House.

Naming names and placing places regarding the fatal tea that was reported to the Dies Investigating Committee on Monday, the First Lady explained that six hand-picked members of the American Youth Congress, meeting in 1936, were asked to the White House for discussing, off-the-record, the youth bill then being formulated for introduction in Congress.

Mrs. Roosevelt said at the time she was not personally acquainted with members of the group, but that she could vouch for the fact that those she came to know later certainly were not Communists. She added emphatically that no political philosophies were mentioned at the tea.

Peace, discussion of which has interlarded many of the First Lady's recent conferences and columns, was brought to the fore again yesterday. Answering accusations she is becoming a warmongerer, Mrs. Roosevelt said that she was as much a pacifist as she had ever been, but that she is convinced, "If there is war anywhere in the world, everybody must be concerned. A breach of peace anywhere is a menace to peace everywhere. The only way to keep peace is to keep the whole peace."

As to war propaganda, and means of combating it, Mrs. Roosevelt confessed she had few suggestions to offer. She pointed out, however, when questioned on her opinion of Representative Fish's Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars, that she felt Americans adready were eager to stay out of the conflict, and would do everything in their power to avoid it.

Diplomatic Reception Set in December

While war in Europe has cast its shadow over Washington society to the extent that the White House calendar definitely will be curtailed, it looks as if diplomats of warring countries will be invited to the same parties anyway. At her conference, Mrs. Roosevelt said that the diplomatic reception will be given in December, as it has in other years, but she dropped the hint that envoys of nations at war could mix and mingle as they chose, and need not speak to each other if they did not feel like doing so. The Cabinet dinner also will take place in December, the definite date and program to be announced Sunday.

Mme. Peter, wife of the former Swiss Minister, who has been a Washington resident almost long enough to be considered a "cave-dweller," will be feted at a luncheon today at the White House. This afternoon, the First Lady will receive three wives of new diplomats. Some time during the day, she will cut her birthday cake. On hand to help their mother celebrate her fifty-fifth birthday will be two of her sons, James and Elliott Roosevelt, who "just happen" to be in town.

Two Luncheons For Tomorrow

Two luncheons are on Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar tomorrow. She will go first to the one given by a group from the Labor Department, and later, she will stop for a few minutes at the luncheon at the Shoreham to be given by City Postmaster Vincent Burke for delegates to the postmasters' convention.

From 4 to 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, the First Lady will be hostess to 1,500 persons here for the convention. The party will take place on the lawn if weather permits. At 5 p. m. tomorrow, she will receive the group of Central and South American women here on the peace mission, and tomorrow evening Mrs. Roosevelt will be a guest of honor at a dinner by the Women's National Democratic Club.

On Friday she will be feted at a luncheon by the B'Nai B'rith organization and that evening she will be in New York to speak before a camp fire meeting. On Saturday night she is scheduled for a lecture in Lennox, Mass.

Heavy Calendar Remainder of Month

Her calendar for the remainder of October includes a luncheon and afternoon meeting of the Democratic Institute at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Monday, October 16; a speech before the Prison Congress in New York on Thursday, October 19; a luncheon with the staff of Parents' Magazine on Monday, October 23; a New York Woman's City Club meeting that same afternoon and a speech before a Girl Scout group in Philadelphia that night.

On Tuesday, October 24, she will participate in the Herald Tribune Institute forum and that same evening she will leave on a lecture tour. She will return to the White House on November 7 and the following day, Wednesday, November 8, she will have her next press conference.

Yesterday at 2 p. m. Mrs. Roosevelt received at the White House a Czecho-Slovak author, Mme. Mila Vegrova, who presented a copy of her book, "Czecho-Slovakia's American First Lady," a biography of Mrs. Masaryk, wife of Czecho-Slovakia's first President.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Mrs. Catherine Brown Writing Biography of Her Daughter, Formerly of D. C., Helen Hayes

MRS. CATHERINE BROWN, who used to wangle dancing lessons and theatrical engagements for a talented little daughter, is now writing the biography of that daughter, since grown up and famous as Helen Hayes, the actress. The story will be serialized in a national magazine before appearing in book form.

Since Miss Hayes and her witty and waggish husband, Charles MacArthur, are in Washington for the week's run here of "Ladies and Gentlemen," they are using their visit to dig up material on the old days. The actress spent her childhood in the Capital.

Miss Hayes is a bit disturbed about the current hot weather. "It's so hard to make people laugh in the heat," she explains. Noel Coward would probably agree with her, for as he says in his autobiography, he has sweated in the Sahara and sweated in the jungle, but never has he sweated so hard as during one September week rehearsing a show in Washington.

A FRIEND of ours who came down on the plane from New York with the famous pair disappointedly relates that the playwright did not get off any of the quips and antics for which he is known from coast to coast, but both sat quietly reading newspapers. Miss Hayes wore a stunning new Flato pin her husband had recently given her, made of gold in the image of her little dog. Yesterday, incidentally, was the actress' birthday.

Thomas Leiter, who has always had a secret worship for Miss Hayes, decided last week to send her a telegram asking her to come to a supper after the opening performance on Monday. Never thinking that she would even have time to answer, much less accept, he was amazed to get a prompt acceptance. Then he realized that the home of his mother, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, was closed for the winter, and he had no place to give the party. So he called on his god-mother, Mrs. Kenna Elkins, and it was at her home on New Hampshire avenue that the late supper took place.

BURKE ELBRICK of the State Department certainly doesn't lack excitement in his life. He was stationed in Prague when Hitler moved in an Czecho-Slovakia last spring, and then was transferred to Warsaw. People are hoping that Rumania isn't automatically in for the same fate now that Mr. Elbrick has been ordered to the legation in Bucharest.

The Elbricks (she is the former Elvira Johnson of Washington) were here last spring for a brief vacation. On their return to Warsaw, after the situation became bad, Mrs. Elbrick took up residence with the American Ambassador and Mrs. Biddle at the embassy until the war came so near that they had to leave the country.

HAVING had to listen to a great many speeches in the course of their duties, several members of the Junior League have decided to find out how it feels to be on the giving end of one. A large and enthusiastic number turned out for the first lesson on Monday in the new course which the league has organized in public speaking. Mrs. Hugh Butler conducts.

The first lesson was largely given over to getting rid of any tendencies to shyness that might be evidenced, and to hearten her pupils, Mrs. Butler called on Stellita Stapleton to give an impromptu three-minute speech. Miss Stapleton is a veteran, having studied last year under Mrs. Butler.

Among those who turned out for the first lesson were Mrs. Lewis Clark, Miss Julie Camp, one of the many Washington "refugees"—she was in Scotland for a wedding when war broke out; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Beale Jackson, jr., Mrs. David Karrick, Mrs. Eberhart Haynes, Mrs. Robert W. Wilson, Miss Elizabeth Nolting and Miss Cecil Jones, president of the league.

Also the league's original president, Mrs. Smith Hempstone; Miss Frances Carter, Mrs. P. Landon Banfield, Mrs. Edward Sturdevant, Mrs. Phillip Young, Mrs. Ernest Swift.

MR. AND MRS. Hugh D. Auchincloss entertained at one of their famous Sunday afternoon gatherings earlier in the week at Merrywood, their place on the Potomac, where the view is of the best this time of year.

Among those who dropped in, we're told, were many of the Diplomatic Corps, among them the Argentine Ambassador and charming Mme. Espil; the Italian Envoy and Princess Colonna, who is spending her first winter in Washington; the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben, and Count and Countess Roberti.

Others present were Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Theodore Green, Senator Dennis Chavez, the Chief of the Division of American Republics of the State Department and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, the Chief of the Passport Division, Mrs. Ruth Shipley; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, civil service commissioner, and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frantz, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, Andrew Donovan, Mrs. L. H. Cornish, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Senora Susanna Larguia, Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Irene Wright, Horton Schoelkopf, Miss Mary Winslow, Dr. Louise Stanley, Mrs. France Flunn Paine, John Abbott, Alfred Barr, Henry O'Bleness, Dr. Robert Smith, Juan Lecuna and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Evans.

Delegates included Senorita Susana Perez Irigoyen, Senora Angela Acuna de Chacon, Senorita Mercedes Guerra, Senorita Yvonne Gonzalez Rincones and Miss Mabel Vernon, of the mandate committee.

The tea which was to have been held yesterday at the Brazilian Embassy was postponed, as Senora de Fonseca, a member of the group and daughter of the Brazilian Envoy and Senora de Martins, was slightly injured in an automobile accident earlier in the week.

Lillian Willett Arrives Tomorrow From France

Though obliged to leave all her baggage behind in Paris, Miss Lillian Willet feels more than compensated because she is about to land on these safe shores. She will arrive in New York tomorrow aboard the liner Washington, and will be met at the dock by her mother, Mrs. E. Jean Willet, of this city.

Miss Willett had just passed the entrance examinations for the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, and was to have enrolled there this winter. She had been visiting Mrs. Richard Vernon, assistant movie producer for Warner's, in the British Capital for several weeks this summer.

From there Miss Willett went to visit friends in Tours, France, where she was when war broke out. Advised by American consular authorities not to return to Paris, she went immediately to LaBaule, seaside resort, where she awaited passage on the Washington.

Miss Willett left Washington for Europe more than a year ago ago and last winter studied at the Sorbonne. She has not yet completed plans for the coming winter, but there is talk of a trip to South America.

Repeal of Arms Embargo, War Shipping Ban Indorsed by Jewish Women's Council

Neutral Zone Around Amercia's Approved In Closing Meeting

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Closing its annual conference at the Washington Hotel yesterday afternoon, the Mid-Atlantic States section of the National Council of Jewish Women went on record in favor of the repeal of the arms embargo and the substitution of the cash and carry clause and for Government control of manufacture and trade in arms, ammunition and implements of war.

Resolutions also were passed urging the registration with the Sate Deparment of persons engaged in he collection of funds for the relief of belligerents, and approving the policy of creating an extensive neutral zone surrounding the Americas.

The resolution calling for the repeal of the arms embargo act described such a measure as "legislation designed to keep our country out of war and to prevent war." It also urged a provision for restriction of travel by American citizens on vessels of belligerents and for restriction of entry into and passage through established war zones by vessels of American registry.

Mrs. Irene D. Koenigsberger presented the resolutions.

Mrs. Bowman New President

Mrs. S. M. Bowman, of Richmond, was elected president of the MidAtlantic States Section. Officers of the area were elected at the afternoon session preceding the joint banquet of the council and the Federation of Temple Sisterhoods of the Eighth District, held last night at the mayflower.

Other officers include Mrs. Harry Roller, of Washington, who was chairman of the convention, first vice president; Mrs. Sam Tobias, of High Point, N. C., second vice president; Mrs. S. E. Ullman, of Richmond, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Bernard Legum, of Annapolis, secretary-treasurer.

The council was addressed yesterday afternoon by Harry Greenstein, executive secretary of the Associated Jewish Charities of Baltimore, who talked on the refugee problem.

Banquet Honors Mrs. Morgenthau

Mrs. Mark Lansburgh presided at last night's banquet, in the absence of Mrs. Alexander Wolf, who was unable to attend. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, was guest of honor. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, was the guest speaker. The affair marked the formal close of the council's conference and the opening of the three-day convention of the Federation of Temple Sisterhoods. An operetta, "Counciliana," by Mrs. Jacob Dashaw and Mrs. Gustav Leibowitz, was presentedby the Baltimore council, under the direction of Mrs. Anna Green Sachs.

This afternoon, Dr. Elmer Kayser, professor of European history at George Washington University, will address the Sisterhood convention which will be in the Washington Hotel. A tea for the delegates will be given by the district president Mrs. Morris Cafritz, at her home, following the program. Mrs. David Simon is president of the local Sisterhood.

Among the guests at the head table last night, in addition to Mrs. Morgenthau and Rabbi Gerstenfeld, were Mrs. Gerstenfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Lansburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Simon, Mrs. Abram Simon, founder of the Federation of Temple Sisterhoods; Mrs. Benjamin Spitzer, of New York, who addressed the council ssesions; Mrs. Edward Sonneborn, local council president, and Mr. Sonneborn; Mrs. Simon Sobeloff, of Baltimore, president of the national council, and Mr. Sobeloff; Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Dalsheimer, Mrs. Charles Reissman, Mrs. S. Business and Professional Women's Club To Greet Array of Presidents Tonight

AN IMPOSING ARRAY of presidents will grace the head table at the banquet being given tonight at the Shoreham by the Business and Professional Women's Club, honoring Dr. Minnie Maffett, of Dallas, president of the National Federation of B. and P. W. clubs. Besides her, there will be Dess Gurganus, of Raleigh, president of the North Carolina Federation; Mrs. Amelia Kopenhaver, of Bristol, president of the Tennessee Federation, and Virgie Harris, of Elkins, president of the West Virginia Federation—with Judge Lucy Howorth, president of the local club, and Earlene White, of Washington, immediate past president of the national federation, thrown in for good measure.

DR. MINNIE MAFFETT

Sunflower Special

Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the League of Republican Women, who has just returned from an extended visit in Kansas, her former home, will receive today at the open-house silver tea at league headquarters, 1301 Seventeenth street. Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, second vice president, will assist.

Sugar Creek Iitem

Sugar Creek, Mo., may sound like a little town where women's interests center around apple pies and the missionary circle, but it isn't. Its delegate to the postmasters' convention, in Washington this week is Bernice Desner, who assumed her duties as postmistress last August, following her appointment by President Roosevelt. She has been selling insurance in Kansas City, practicing law in Sugar Creek and now is killing a couple of birds with one stone, attending the convention and seeking admission to practice before the Supreme Court, while she is in the Capital.

Elizabeth F. Reed, grand dean of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will move her admission before the Supreme Court tomorrow.

Architect Flies In

Another interesting woman who is here for a few days, is Mrs. Grace Perego, California's only licensed woman contractor and builder. She flew East from San Francisco on business, in connection with a proposed 450-room FHA rental project there. She is author of a 350-page book, "Apartment House Ownership and Management," and has built more than $5,000,000 worth of flats and apartments since 1913.

'Our Daughters'

No wonder I always have a warm spot in my heart for the D. A. R. Just yesterday I discovered that a letter from Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood, published in The Washington Post July 13, 1890, first called upon women of Revolutionary lineage to organize. Associated with her in founding the Daughters of the American Revolution were Miss Mary Desha, who organized the first gathering; Miss Ellen Hardin Walworth, who became first editor of the society's National Historical Magazine, and Miss Eugenia Washington, direct descendant of a brother of George Washington, who became first registrar. Caroline Scott Harrison, wife of President Harrison, was the first president general.

The 2,500 chapters throughout the country are observing today as founders' day.

Star Out at Teatime

Helen Hayes will be guest of honor tomorrow afternoon at a tea being given by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Raleigh Hotel. It's at 4:30 and should be an interesting party.

President 'at Home'

Taking a postman's holiday, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, stopped at headquarters last week-end to dispose of pressing matters in her office between trips. She had been in the West attending federation meetings.

Today she is in Connecticut for the conference of the State federation and she will make another brief stop at headquarters before going to New York, the week of October 22, to attend the Herald Tribune conference. Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of The Clubwoman G. F. W. F." will also attend.

Kensington Front Quiet

War in Europe does not disturb the tranquillity of the Woman's Community Club of Kensington. A talk by Robert H. Engle, on "Early American Glass," was the feature of its first meeting Monday afternoon. The club did not overlook local needs however, having a display of new articles contributed to the Needlework Guild.

Dr. David Lvovitch To Address ORT

Dr. David Lvovitch, vice chairman of the Central Board of World ORT Union, who has just arrived from Poland, will address the Washington Chapter of Woman's American ORT, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Miller, 3101 Northampton street northwest. Dr. Lvovitch will give an account of the effect of the present European war on ORT activities in Poland and elsewhere.

He has devoted practically all his life to the amelioration of economic and cultural conflictions of Jewish life in Eastern Europe. In the ORT, he found already operating, a plan of resettlement combined with a system of training for vocations designed to raise the Jewish masses from impoverishment and degradation and to turn them into self-respecting craftsmen.

Goodwill Tourists Deny Naziism Spreads in Latin America

Women's National Press Club Entertains Group at Luncheon; Argentine News Writer Speaks for Delelgation

If German propaganda is rampant in the South American republics, it is not reaching the ears of the women. This was indicated yesterday by the Argentinian, Venezuelan and Costa Rican members of the goodwill tour of the people's mandate committee, all of whom denied that Nazi propaganda was being spread in their countries.

The subject was brought up in questions asked the goodwill visitors by members of the Women's National Press Club, who entertained them as guests of honor at the club's weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. Only the Cuban delegate, Senorita Mercedes Guerra, raised a contradictory voice. She told of Nazi publications being sent to Cuban youth, setting forth the great accomplishments of the Hitler regime.

Senorita Susana Perez Irigoyen, of Argentina, as a sister newspaper woman, was invited by the club to speak as representative of the delegation. She expressed the conviction that the new civilization must come from this hemisphere and stressed the important part newspaper women of the republics could take in promoting friendly understanding.

Asked about Nazi propaganda in her country, she asserted it was negligible and would fall on deaf ears anyway. The same sentiment was expressed by Senora Angela de Chacon, of Costa Rica, and Senorita Yvonne Gonzzles Rincones, of Venezuela. Senora Lucia de Paula Fonesca, of Brazil, who suffered slight injuries in an auto mishap Monday night, was unable to be present.

Miss Irene Wright Guest Speaker

The functions of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department were explained by Miss Irene A. Wright, assistant in the division, who was guest speaker. Miss Wright, noted historian and for many years a resident of Spain, spoke in both English and Spanish. Miss Ruby Black, the club president, presided.

Among guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Thomas Burke, chief of the division of international communications of the State Department, whose wife is the People's Mandate chairman for Latin America; Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Mandate Committee, and Dr. Lee DeForest, "father of the radio," and Mrs. DeForest, who are returning from the World's Fair, where he was honored.

Other Prominent Women Present

Among others were Mrs. Hugo Johnson, wife of the newsreel cameraman, who covered the recent Pan-American conference in Panama; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mme. Haidar, Miss Vella A. Winner and her guest, Mrs. Arabello Ward, who has recently moved here from Philadelphia, and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman.

Last night the visitors were entertained at a buffet supper at the Sulgrave Club by Representative Caroline O'Day.

The delegation will spend today in Baltimore. Tomorrow the members will visit the various universities here and be received by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House in the afternoon, following which they will be entertained at a reception by Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles at Oxon Hill, just before their departure for their Western tour.

Dr. Leonard, who is former dean of women at Syracuse University, was a guest at yesterday's luncheon. It was held in the Women's National Democratic Club, with Mrs. Emil Hurja, president of the Washington Unit, presiding and 40 members attending.

Holmes, Smith To Judge Safe Drivers Here

First Post-WJSV Car Plates to Be Awarded Saturday Night

By Howard F. Wentworth

Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, and Capt. Milton D. Smith, commanding the traffic division, were named yesterday to select award candidates for The Washington Post-WJSV safety tag program.

Special plates, furnished by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, will be ready for distribution when the first winners are announced over WJSV at 10:15 p. m. Saturday. Traffic policemen in scout cars, on motorcycles, and those assigned to crossing duty have been supplied with report forms to nominate prospective recipients.

Policemen have been instructed to note any unusual acts of courtesy or careful driving on the part of District motorists, and to furnish Inspector Holmes and Capt. Smith with complete details of each instance.

Motorists who receive the special safety award tags will be chosen on the basis of past traffic records and the merits of their acts of courtesy or caution which attracted attention.

Two drivers will be selected this week. With the policemen who observed their driving habits, they will be called to the studios of WJSV for Saturday's award presentation. The special tags, reading "1940 Safety Award, District of Columbia," will be issued to individual drivers. The tag will then become the property of the winner and may be used on any automobile driven by him or by her. The plate is to be attached just above the front or rear license tag.

Whenever possible, policemen who observe the courteous or safe acts will stop the driver and take his name and address. Circumstances of the case will be submitted to Inspector Holmes and Capt. Smith.

Because of difficulties involved in checking out-of-town traffic records, only holders of District driving permits will be eligible.

Teachers, Students Urged to Help

Teachers and older students in District Public Schools were urged by Supt. Frank W. Ballou yesterday to join the city's campaign against child traffic casualties.

In a special circular addressed to principals of all schools, Dr. Ballou cited Washington's juvenile accident record during the last year and called upon teachers to make safety instruction part of daily classroom lessons.

He said the older pupils "can be most helpful" in protecting younger companions.

"Just now," said Dr. Ballou, "it is especially important that these older children, who know what is safe, be urged by their teachers and their parents to do what they can for the little ones."

He quoted police records showing 804 children under 15 were injured last year and 18 were killed. He cautioned youngsters against playing in the streets, riding bicycles in heavy traffic and crossing against signals.

Way Opened For 'Soap-Box' Park Debates

Ickes Asserts Public Controversy Exposes Subversive Fallacies

With President Roosevelt's approval, Secretary of Interior Ickes yesterday promulgated an order governing meetings in Washington parks to give groups wishing to answer scheduled speakers preferential rights for time immediately before or after such meetings at the same places.

The order specifies that groups asking to use parks must post the names of speakers and scheduled subjects sufficiently in advance of meetings to give other organizations adequate opportunity to apply for equal facilities for their replies.

It was announced that a bulletin board will be set up for the purpose in the Parks Service permit office. Heretofore permits were issued without public notice and no opportunity was given other groups who might wish to continue the debate at the same place.

In issuing the order, Ickes said: "Under the new ruling, speakers will either have to hold their meetings on private property or submit to the democratic discipline of open debate. Whatever we may think of the inconsistency or hypocrisy of those who claim the right to use the public parks of our democracy to preach the virtues of undemocratic forms of government, I am convinced that the most effective way to expose the fallacies of such subversive philosophies is to pull them out of their hiding places and subject them to the antiseptic reaction of free and open public controversy."

Post to Seat Officers

Waithman succeeds Count Raoul de Roussy de Sales, of the Paris Soir, who returned as a vice president. A. Caprile, correspondent for La Nacion, of Buenos Aires, was also named a vice president. Alan O. Trower, of the British Reuters News Agency, was made secretary-treasurer. Others elected were:

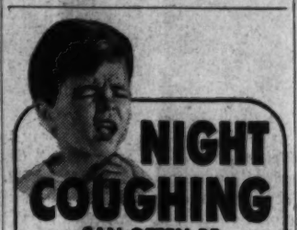
Second Blimp Visits Capital, Held by Weather

To reassure those who saw two blimps in the Washington sky yesterday and, knowing there should be only one, wondered—

There were two Goodyear blimps aloft yesterday for the first time in a year or more.

One was the Enterprise, regularly stationed here. The other was its sister ship, the Rainbow, marking time while awaiting favorable weather before proceeding to Akron.

The Rainbow was en route from New York. She was moored last night after having made several daytime flights.



NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

Your child's coughing at night—caused by throat "tickle" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing his throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. VapoRub's swift poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, clears air passages, tends to stop mouth breathing. This helps him relax into healing sleep.

France Had To Fight, Says Envoy

Cabinet Rule by Decree No Peril To Democracy, He Tells Trade Board

France is at war today because her national honor was threatened, and because "it has become evident" that new concessions to Hitler will bring new demands, Count Rene Doyel de Saint-Quentin, the French Ambassador, last night told 1,000 members of the Washington Board of Trade.

St. Quentin

Speaking with great intensity in the crowded ballroom of the Willard Hotel, the stocky diplomat maintained that "for many years the French people have harbored no hatred toward any race, no scorn for any people, no yearning for any foreign territory.

He called the policy of the French government a "prudent" one, "a policy which at times may seem to lack drama, but certainly neglects no possibility of peace."

"But," he said, "when it has become evident that every new concession granted will only bring forth a new demand, when national security is threatened in its forward outposts, the outposts of national honor, then the French people resign themselves to the inevitable."

First Public Statement

Addressing the Board of Trade's first meeting of the season, Count de Saint-Quentin vigorously denied that "dictatorship is around the corner" in France. Cabinet rule by decree is no danger, he said. The townships, with their municipal councils, "remain the guardians of democracy."

A product of France's school of career diplomats, the 56-year-old Ambassador last night made his first public remarks upon international affairs since the outbreak of war. The remarks, however, were carefully sandwiched in between a lengthy discussion of the beauties of Washington from the air and a detailed analysis of French local self-government.

He indirectly attacked the German policy of economic self-sufficiency and insisted that the French people have remained "strongly attached" to the policy of encouraging international trade.

Praises Trade Treaty

"This," he said, "enabled them to avoid the temptation to impose upon others, sometimes ruthlessly, their political sway in order to have more ready access to economic resources."

Praising the reciprocal trade treaty of 1937 with the United States, he said that at the time war broke out "we were considering further negotiations to broaden the scope of the agreement on the same basis and in the same spirit.

"We have, I hope, merely postponed our efforts."

He went on to say that he does not believe "there can be any lasting peace aside from this procedure, which makes possible the free cooperation of all nations in the field of economic relations."

Fleming Praised

Before the ambassador's speech, President Lawrence E. Williams presented a testimonial certificate to Robert V. Fleming, who recently retired as chairman of the Board of Trade's municipal finance committee. The certificate was a framed resolution praising Fleming particularly for his work in bringing about a revision of the District tax structure.

In his report on the activities of the board during the summer, Williams praised the Greater National Committee, which he said was largely responsible for bringing more than 500,000 visitors to Washington during August. These visitors, he said, spent about $1,000,000 more than tourists did in the same period last year.

Among the guests who sat on the platforms during the meeting were Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Belgian ambassador; Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, the chairman of the Senate District Committee; Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Col David McCoach, jr., engineer commissioner, and Minor Hudson, the president of the Junior Board of Commerce.

Capital News In Brief

Werheim Elected

J. L. Werheim last night was elected president of the Washington Fireman's Association, Local 36, of the International Association of Fire Fighters, at its annual election meeting in Pythian Temple.

C. S. Peterson was elected vice president; L. B. Wilson, second vice president; W. T. Kruglak; secretary; J. C. Chase, treasurer; and J. R. Ihrie, sergeant at arms. A board of directors of 18 men, representing the various battalions and divisions of the District Fire Department, was elected.

Driver Transfer Sped

Transfer of concrete mixer truck operators from the engineer to the teamster union is expected to take place by Saturday, Stuart M. Keyser, teamster business agent, said yesterday.

The jurisdiction dispute over the mixer truckmen, which threatened for a month to stop work on all major building projects in the District, has been settled in principle by A. F. of L. executives in conference at Cincinnati. Full terms of the agreement have not yet reached the locals.

Beauty Enters Queen Contest

EVANGELINE RICE, of 1749 Irving street northwest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Rice, has been nominated by a group of her District Building coworkers for Queen of the Auto Show, to be held at Riverside Stadium, October 21-28

New Drug Effective on Pneumonia

Child's Illness Leads to Tests of Sulfapyridine

Evidence that the new drug sulfapyridine is effective in the treatment of influenzal, or "bacillus," pneumonia as well as that caused by the pneumococcus, was presented yesterday by the National Institute of Health.

A series of experiments by Dr. Margaret Pittman, inspired by the illness of an 8-month-old Washington child, led to the discovery. Tests on mice led to the conclusion that the baby probably would have died had sulfapyridine not been administered.

The child was brought to Children's Hospital several weeks ago suffering from an influenzal inflammation of the eyes and ears. Sulfanilamide brought no improvement but when sulfapyridine, a chemical derivative, was given a marked change for the better was noted within 24 hours.

Since it might have been only a coincidence that the tiny patient recovered after receiving sulfapyridine, Dr. Pittman decided to test the drug's effect on mice, which had been infected with bacteria taken from the child.

Those mice which received no injections of the drug died. All of those which were given full doses survived. Some which received only small amounts also died.

It was found that sulfapyridine not only cured mice suffering from influenzal pneumonia, but protected them against experimental infections. This would indicate human beings likewise can have themselves "vaccinated."

Citizens Urge Playgrounds Downtown

Logan-Thomas Circle Group Says Play Area Is Deficient In Its Neighborhood

Recreational facilities for children, street car transportation, slum clearance, parking and beauty contest preparations highlighted last nights meetings of citizens associations here.

Logan-Thomas Circle

Additional playgrounds in the downtown area were urged at a meeting of the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

Indorsing a proposal of the Mid-city Citizens Association, members stressed the deficiency of play areas in their section. There are numerous lots that could be converted for playground use, it was said. The association also went on record indorsing the request of the Mid-city unit to the Alley Dwelling Authority for clearance of alleys in the Logan-Thomas Circle section.

Cathedral Heights

Cathedral Heights Citizens Association indorsed the recruiting campaign of the District National Guard at a meeting which also took up proposals for relieving traffic congestion in the section.

New parking regulations on Cathedral avenue northwest, congested, members said, because parking is allowed only on the north side where bus stops are located, were urged. Members also asked erection of a traffic light at Wisconsin avenue and Thirty-fifth street northwest.

Stanton Park

Stanton Park Citizens Association will sponsor a beauty contest in the Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth street and Maryland avenue northeast, Saturday at 2 p. m., it was announced at the organization's meeting. Two prizes will be awarded to the winners.

Judges will be Assistant United States District Attorney Arthur McLoughlin, George Ashton and Wilbur S. Finch.

Curtis E. Chadwick was elected president at last night's meeting. Other officers elected include William E. Monroe, first vice president; Mrs. W. H. Smith, second vice president; William J. Bartle, secretary; A. N. Panzer, treasurer. Delegates to the federation will be Harry N. Stall, recently elected president of the federation, and A. H. Gregory.

Northern Seventh St.

Northern Seventh Street Businessmen's Association indorsed United States Attorney David A. Pine for a judgeship in the United States District Court for the District. Letters of recommendation will be sent to President Roosevelt, Attorney General Murphy and the Senate Judiciary Committee, urging his appointment.

A committee was appointed to take up with John Ihlder, Alley Dwelling Authority head, proposals for slum clearance in the section.

Barry Farm

Thomas J. Anderson, assistant director of District recreation, told members of the Barry Farm Citizens Association of the District's plans to enlarge recreational facilities for colored residents. Prof. John Syphax, principal of Birney School, also spoke.

Our Town: District Waterfront Being Beautified

By Christine Sadler.

The world demand for copies of the Congressional Record and Government press releases being what it is, Washington no longer hopes to rival Baltimore as a commercial seaport.

Back in the dear, dead days when half the tobacco raised in Maryland was being shipped from Georgetown, things were very, very different. The product was so choice European boats were eager to come and get it. The Georgetown Channel was as busy as Pennsylvania avenue is today between 4 and 4:30 p. m.

Just because the city's exports have changed, however, is no indication the waterfront has gone. Take a look at the skyline when traveling back from Alexandria some time. There are 5,000 acres of water in the District of Columbia.

Like many other American cities, the National Capital turned its back on the river after railroads came—paid no attention at all when Georgetown yelled in 1802 that a bridge across the Potomac would cut it off from seagoing vessels, forgot all about what rivers could do for a town trying to be beautiful.

Waterfront Coming Back

Only in the past five years has the waterfront renaissance borne fruit, although the Board of Trade and other groups have had rivers and harbors committees in operation since the turn of the century. Until around 1934, however, the hometown boys would not let go of the plan to bring the biggest steamers into port here, to make the harbor into something that would cause Norfolk to look envious.

Today, the plan is much more challenging. It hinges on bautification for a city to work at being beautiful.

Bids were being received this morning by the War Department on the last halves of two yachting basins and two new ones, all in the Washington Channel, are the latest evidence of what is being done to develop the Washington waterfront. New concrete piers and a beautifully designed structure for the servicing of pleasure craft are others. Under the direction of Army engineers, the Washington harbor is being reconstructed.

Eventually, harbor police and firemen will receive new homes, the morgue and the prison pier will be removed from the river's edge, and old Water street (now Main avenue) will become a thoroughfare such as Jefferson himself would have approved.

Boats Increase Rapidly

Due to the regatta races and a renewed general interest in water sports, boats using the Potomac and Anacostia have increased rapidly within recent years. Lieut. William H. Carlin, who is in command of the Harbor Precinct Station on the "Seventh Street Wharves" and by virtue of this position the Harbormaster of Washington, estimated yesterday that 700 yachts and more than 500 sailboats are using the rivers.

"Of course, I'm calling everything a yacht that has an inboard motor. That doesn't mean they're all 50-footers," he said.

Lieut. Carlin and his staff of 21 men—usually called "Maj. Brown's Navy"—patrol the harbor to Jones Point, three-fourths of a mile below Alexandria. When the District ceded part of its land back to Virginia, it did not relinquish control of both banks of the Potomac.

"I know they say anything to the highwater mark comes under District jurisdiction, but I never have been instructed about that. I take it that anything in the water, whether it be at the edge of Alexandria or not, comes in our territory.

Bigger Yachts Lack Space

"When the yacht basins are finished, I think there will be berths for all the boats around here, but today the large craft can find no place to tie up. They can anchor themselves and furnish their own means of transportation to shore, but that does not induce big yachts to put in here. The Guggenheim yacht, for instance, was wanting space last week. I think it is coming, anyway, but neither municipal nor commercial space was available for it," the habormaster declared.

At the Navy Yard are kept the yachts of Government officials, and the occasional boats of visiting celebrities such as Gen. Trujillo of the Dominican Republic. The U. S. Potomac, the President's yacht, is berthed there, as is also the small yacht Sequoia for use by the Secretary of the Navy, and the Milan, which is assigned to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. The latter is considered "little more than a houseboat."

Tugs and barges from the Navy Yard mingle in the harbor with boats bearing oysters from Chesapeake Bay and melons from Georgia. Midshipmen from Annapolis come to the Navy Yard on training cruises and usually are accompanied by a division of six destroyers.

Also, lest it be thought the Washington harbor is wholly for the Navy, food, and pleasure, more than 1,500,000 tons of sand and gravel are brought in every year for the city's building industries. Petroleum products rank second in tonnage and value among cargoes imported. Naval and ordnance stores are third, and automobiles and trucks are fourth in water transit. The value of river cargoes last year was $70,428,926.

All One-Way Traffic

"But it was all coming one way," John A. Remon, chairman of the river and harbor committee of the Board of Trade, pointed out yesterday. "Washington has nothing to send back and development of a commercial port depends on a flow both ways."

Acknowledged local leader in the harbor improvement project, on which the co-operation of civic bodies has been about 100 per cent, the Board of Trade this year has a three-point program. Ranking first is the desire to "make the water front just as beautiful as the rest of the city," and second is the aim to provide the "man of moderate means with facilities that will enable him to take such recreation on the water as he desires." Its third point asks a complete survey of the Washington waterfront throughout the District in order that a long-range plan may be developed to guide in best recreational and commercial usage.

"We think river commerce can easily be increased. Especially do we believe that development of newsprint mills in the South will cause more cargoes to come here, to service our great printing industries, Mr. Remon declared.

Mr. Remon—along with many other Washingtonians—thinks it is rather ridiculous Washingtonians, in spite of their water expenses, have to go to New York to start every cruise except the all-day excursions down the Potomac.

He doesn't expect the Bremen to show up here, but feels there is a legitimate ground for wanting cruise boats to come here for their passengers. "Some of the boats going to Bermuda and Florida are filled with District people who might as well have boarded the ship right here," he said. Steamship lines think his reasoning is sound, and would have tested it out this winter—if war had not come.

Tomorrow—Piney Branch.

Dr. Bagger Urges Care Of Souls

Lutheran Leaders Told Not to Put Emphasis Only On Property, Funds

Capital area Lutheran councilmen last night were warned against neglecting men's spiritual care for the physical duties of the church.

Gathering at Luther Place Memorial Church at one of a series of Nation-wide Lutheran meetings designed to combat forces of irreligion, they were told by Dr. Henry H. Bagger, president of the Pittsburg synod of the United Lutheran Church that care of men's souls is more important than church property.

Banquet Is Held

He charged that "we have allowed ourselves to settle down in the groove covered by the care of church proprty and finances," then reminded the men that "every single soul that can be tied to his place in the community is your responsibility."

Meanwhile, in the same building, the Luther Place Young People's Fellowship was staging its annual banquet, at which the Rev. George E. Schnabel, pastor of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, urged the diners to "never 'bail out' in the cause of Christianity."

"Don't Stop," He Urges

"You are the hope of the world," he declared, "and whatever you do, don't stop in the middle of this tragic era through which you are passing."

He expressed the hope that a great group of young people, "the best the church can produce," would consolidate themselves into spiritual "suicide squadrons" and dare to live a Christian life as a challenge to a pagan world.

The Rev. Fred Eckert, assistant pastor, was toastmaster. Alden Towberman, Fellowship president, spoke.

Building Inquiry Extended to D. C. By Murphy

Nation-wide grand jury scrutiny of alleged monopolistic practices which increase costs in the building industry was extended to Washington by the Department of Justice yesterday.

The investigation was expected to reach contractors, unions and manufacturers. Witnesses will be summoned in a few days, but the date for the start of the testimony had not been set.

Walter R. Hutchinson and Gordon Dean, special assistants to the Attorney General, were assigned to conduct the investigation here, for the antitrust division of the Department of Justice. An authorization of the inquiry, issued by Attorney General Murphy, was filed in District Court yesterday.

Girl Enlists Playmates for Red Cross Mercy Work

Heeding the Roll Call campaign, Dorothy Ann Farmer, of 705 Elm street, Chevy Chase, Md., has organized a sewing class composed of the girls in her neighborhood, to make baby blankets which the Red Cross will send to Europe's war refugees. Part of the class (left to right) are Rose Bowling, Jean Webster, Jane Winings, Dorothy Ann Farmer, Ann Bowling, Priscilla Allgyer and Beryl Webster

The Red Cross Roll Call yesterday failed for the first time to better the enrollment mark established for the same period of the 1938 campaign, General Chairman Edgar Morris announced, advising that at least 10,000 memberships must be obtained on each of the remaining eight days of the drive, if the quota of 125,000 is to be realized. Total memberships through yesterday were 44,892, as compared to 47,404 a year ago, he said.

The general chairman also pointed out that all Roll Call divisions must accelerate their enrollment activities if the 10,000 per day membership pace is to be maintained. The greatest number of enrollments reported for any one day of the campaign to date is 7,247, on October 5. The daily average to date is 4,081.

More than 70 per cent of all who have enrolled are Government employes, it was announced at roll call headquarters. Total Government enrollment amounts to 29,679. Leading in enrollment are the units of the Department of Agriculture, with 7,688 members, and the General Accounting Office, with 2,430. Department chairmen are Arthur B. Thatcher, chief of division of plant and operation, Agriculture Department, and Reed F. Martin, chief clerk of the General Accounting Office. Miss Gertrude Rest, of the office of the Secretary of Agriculture, is the high individual chairman.

American Legion posts yesterday began concerted enrollment activity in the downtown business district in an effort to speed up membership activity on small business firms. The Department of Labor Post, No. 42, was among the first to send a uniformed detail to assist in the work. The post was assigned to the Woodward and Southern buildings.

One hundred per cent enrollments reported yesterday are Henry School, Bunker Hill School, Security Savings and Commercial Bank, and Brewood, Inc.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Mr. Goldwyn Sends Along A Carnival of Music

Heifetz' Film Debut an Ace Entertainment; 'Wizard of Oz' Wins National Honors; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE WHO FEEL, and have said, that Samuel Goldwyn's production of "They Shall Have Music" lacks general audience appeal because it has Jascha Heifetz, concert violinist, as its star, either must be crazy, or they haven't seen the picture.

Yesterday afternoon's preview screening laid at rest all of those bogus fears that this subject must be a more or less garbled and catch-as-catch-can film play, by reason of the fact that Heifetz' solo numbers were recorded on the sound tracks long before any story was written around them. If this be patchwork, it is very handsome patchwork.

BELL

Basically, the story told is of a piece with the one that was so enthusiastically received by all and sundry in Deanna Durbin's memorable "One Hundred Men and a Girl." The "one hundred men," in this instance, is a mixed juvenile symphony, instead of a group of down-and-out adult musicians, and Heifetz is its eventual sponsor, instead of a rich industrialist. Fundamentally, the plots are the same. The character of the music played, however, is entirely different. Heifetz fiddles almost as much as he would in a full evening's recital, but even that has its dramatic qualities, because with rare inspiration the cameraman photographed the virtuoso's technique from every possible angle and all in close-up. Watching him play is the equivalent of a lesson in the higher reaches of violin technique.

But the important thing is—and there is no pun intended—that the groundwork of the melodramatic development of the pictured fable is completely earthy. It deals with a "gang" of slum hoodlums, more or less patterned after the "Dead End" kids, whose leader proves to be a misunderstood youngster with a tremendous love of music and some inherent genius as a potential artist with a true sense of pitch. He is about to be placed in a reform school by an outraged stepfather when he decamps from the paternal roof and stumbles upon a rehearsal of the kid symphony. The whole course of his life is changed. The whole course of the symphony's life also is changed by his accidental meeting with Heifetz. How that works out you will see in the picture when it opens at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday.

Some Amazing Newcomers

The piece has been especially well cast. Four of the principals are pictured on this page. Walter Brennan is the conductor of the struggling amateur orchestra, Andrea Leeds, his daughter; Joel McCrea, her boy friend, fired from his job by the Porter Hall, the "villain" of the play, and Gene Reynolds is Frankie, the youthful "racketeer" with the soul of an artist. Terry Kilburn is in there, too, as are also such established competents as Marjorie Main, Arthur Hohl, Paul Harvey and numerous others. There is even a glimpse of Mary Carr, star of the old silent days, in one of the scenes. And the juvenile members of the cast are prodigious.

Little 11-year-old Jacqueline Nash is a coloratura soprano of extraordinary endowments. You will love her twinkling eyes, pug nose and turned-up mouth that gives her a perpetual smile. And how she can sing! To run the measure of warm and homely heart interest over, there is Zero, the nondescript dog, in the role of "Sucker," one of the best actors in the cast.

"They Shall Have Music" seemed to me a splendid hour and a half of sheer entertainment. Maybe I am the one who is crazy. There have been complaints.

In addition to the three-ply program already announced, the Variety Club's "Cavalcade of Thrills" will be embellished by an array of local "showmanship" trimmings at Griffith Stadium on Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon. One of the items scheduled by Carter Barron, general chairman of the event, is a colorful drill by the American Legion's crack team of 70 men, with music provided by the Legion's 40-piece band. It is expected that three or four bands will be on hand to make music an important part of the thrill-bill. That "Hollywood Suicide Squad" arrived in town yesterday and put on a preview sample of their stunts that knocked a group of invited guests right off their chairs. The performances are scheduled for 8:30 Friday and Saturday nights and 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The Capital will be talking about the "Cavalcade of Thrills" all winter.

The National Screen Council has selected "The Wizard of Oz" as the outstanding motion picture released in September and designated it for the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award, the organization's highest badge of merit. The National Screen Council is Nation-wide in scope and is composed of motion picture editors, the motion picture chairmen of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae and of the State chapters of the Federation of Women's Clubs. This makes four Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Awards for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this year, the other three having been for "Sweethearts," "Pygmalion" and "On Borrowed Time."

When Maestro Gray Gordon arrives in Washington late tomorrow with his famous "Tic Toc Rhythm" Orchestra, he will find a telegram awaiting him backstage at Loew's Capitol Theater, informing him that the clock manufacturers of America have decided to honor him at a special dinner to be held in New York next Tuesday. Never before has an entertainer been so honored by this organization and the word has leaked out, as the saying is, that Gordon will receive a specially designed watch with the pictures of his band boys on the face in place of the usual numerals. Sounds a little like a frameup so that none of the lads can be fired!

If you have been wondering how Johnny Coy, the tap dancer, got into Phil Spitalny's otherwise all-feminine "Hour of Charm" ensemble, it is a story of youthful persistence. Johnny, who is only 18, applied to Phil for a job during an engagement in the Middle West and was told to call on him again, "if you ever come to New York." So Johnny "came to New York," wheedled his way into an audition and there he is. Incidentally, Master Coy is the most promising dancer that has come along to New York, or elsewhere, since Paul Draper.

Leonard Hall, former Washington drama critic and editor, now graduated to the plate-paper mags, and Mrs. Hall, The Post's Alice Hughes, columnar expositor of "A Woman's New York," are three-daying at the Mayflower, with a side-trip last night to see Helen Hayes and Philip Merivale in "Ladies and Gentlemen," at the National. I'm afraid you'll be seeing them around.

And-That-Reminds-Me Note

Four Who See to It That Title Comes True

"For the first time in her long career," a publicist states at the Kit Kat, "Constance Bennett is coming East to make personal appearances" . . . "Look, with my own hands I made these light-gadgets," John Perona laments at El Morocco, "but I'll never be able to see them again. The decorator put them on the walls of the ladies' room."

Picture Stars Twist Facts For Film Mags

"Nine o'Clock Town" Legend Is Discovered To Be the Bunk

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Oct. 9.—Don't believe all the stories about Hollywood being a 9 o'clock town. The place is full of night owls and everybody stays up so late we're not getting our regular sleep.

Take world premieres. We have to go to 'em and we dread it. The tickets always say, "performance begins at 8:30 p. m.," and at 8:30 p. m. there isn't anybody in the theater except the ushers.

Around 9 o'clock a few movie makers start to arrive. At 9:15 the cameras begin to flash their indications that one or two stars have entered the front door. At 9:30 p. m., the theater is about half full.

At 9:45 p. m. the newsreel goes on. Then comes the Mickey Mouse cartoon. And at 10 the great movie—the greatest ever made—begins to unreel. At midnight, or a little after, the movie is over and out file a couple of thousand people, in evening clothes.

Premiere Hangovers

They all go somewhere for a dance or a drink or a sandwich. At 2 a. m., and 3 a. m., the audience still is hanging around the Brown Derby or the Victor Hugo, or some similar place, panning the actors.

The upshot is that you can't go to a movie opening in Hollywood without feeling bleary-eyed next day. Almost every night there is a preview, or a premiere, or something else.

The other night, for instance, we were invited to dinner in the Florentine room of the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel for the opening performance of Ray Noble's Orchestra and the first West Coast appearance of Cobina Wright, jr., the society girl, who lost her money and started earning her living as a night club singer.

Our host said dinner would be served at 9 p. m. That sounded bad, in itself, but we made a special point to arrive on the dot, have our meal, and get home at a decent hour.

Ice Water, But No Food

There was ice water on the table. There was a waiter anxious to bring cocktails. There was no sign of a menu.

We danced a couple of dances. We talked to the lady on our left and by 11 p. m. we were so hungry we could have eaten Mr. Noble's baton. We demanded food. "Yes, sir," the waiter said.

Thirty minutes later he returned with some Martinis. At midnight we threatened to go out and get some hamburgers for everybody, including Mr. Noble and Miss Wright. That brought action from a waiter who couldn't understand what was ailing us. Reluctantly he brought the bill of fare.

At 12:15 we got a cup of consomme. At 12:35 arrived a plate of lettuce, drenched in salad dressing. At 1:10—its the next morning now—we got our roast beef.

Still Going Strong

We gulped that, made excuses to the host, and went home, without ever getting dessert, or tasting coffee. As we left we noticed the other dinner guests still were going strong.

Jack Benny was diving enthusiastically into a dish of ice cream. Martha Raye was in the midst of her dinner, as were Gracie Allen and George Burns and other movie people too numerous to mention. The business of starting dinner long after most people had been in bed for three hours didn't seem strange to them.

They probably do it all the time. Maybe they don't sleep at all.

What we do wish is that Hollywood's celebrities would stop being interviewed for the fan magazines about how they're home bodies, who never step out at night. Don't believe a word of 'em.

Back at Work

Alfalfa Switzer, Our Gang "leading man," reported to the studio with the splints removed from his broken arm, ready to go to work in the new Gang one-reeler, "Learn To Play."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 10—Talked with Charlie Drake who six months ago won a "Gateway to Hollywood" contest and has just been dropped by the studio. He's had 13 bit parts in that time and played one of the monks in "Hunchback." Insists he intends staying in Hollywood and will make good. I hope so. Alice Eden, another Gateway player, was also dropped. I remember Alice the night she won; she was thrilled and beautiful, and thought the world had opened up before her. But I wonder what she's thinking these days. Contests are a chance, that's true. And if we had any definite way of determining success they'd be a grand opportunity, but it seems almost criminal to me to offer these eager youngsters a chance that far too often forces them to return home broken and defeated, unfit for the ordinary routine of their lives. No one having tasted even a bit of Hollywood success can return to oblivion and be happy.

HOPPER

Did you know that motion pictures were made by the Chinese over 600 years ago? They cut out tiny figures of men, women and animals from buffalo hide, mounted them on sticks or handles and held them between sun and a sheet of parchment so their shadows moved and carried on a story just as ours do today.

When Simone Simon arrived in town the other day reporters asked why she had quit Hollywood. "Because," pouted Simone. "I wasn't getting suitable parts.' Imagine!

And speaking of that, Bill Boyd and Grace Bradley are having their own international problems. Their French cook has a German husband and they haven't spoken to each other for the past two weeks. Bill tried to effect a reconciliation and now he's in the dog house. He's thinking of hiring an official "taster."

Marlene has taken a modest little house in Beverly Hills devoid of the usual Hollywood trappings. No tennis court, pool or playroom.

Which reminds me of Dorothy Parker's famous old gag, "A modest little bungalow where I can lay my hat."

Connie Moore, honeymooning with husband, Johnny Maschio, has been gone for three weeks since we finished working together in "Laugh It Off," and during that time she writes, she's been to a bullfight in Mexico, the finals of the tennis matches at Forest Hills, the President's Cup race in Washington, D.C., baseball game in Cincinnati and traveled by air, boat, train and motor car.

I loved Virginia Bruce's distress when she was acting as a waitress at Somerset House the other day, all for Ann Lehr's charity, when she said, "But what do we do with the old dishes? We can't use them on our best customers."

With Mrs. Phil Berg and Mrs. Milton Bren and half a dozen of our prettiest actresses serving there, it's becoming the most popular luncheon spot in town. But it's pretty hard on the bankrolls of the men in the family when girls do a fashion show, because the girls buy every dress they model in.

Ian Hunter is our busiest actor. He's playing King Henry IV in "Tower of London," Virginia Weidler's father in "Patsy," a producer in "Broadway Melody of 1940," and at home is driving his wife "nurts."

Cole Porter's latest tune for "Dubarry Was a Lady" is "In the Morning, No."

CRYSTAL AYMES, scoring a hit this week in her first stellar appearance at the Gayety Theater

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 10 (1939).—John Charles Thomas has finally succumbed to the movies. The world famous barytone will be starred in "Kingdom Come," a new novel by Adele Rogers St. John, due to make its appearance as a serial in Cosmopolitan magazine. Thomas has never paid much attention to his calories and is therefore a little portly for a screen hero, but he should worry when he can break records as he did when he appeared here at the Philharmonic last season to a box office of $44,000.

LOUELLA PARSONS

At any rate, Mr. Thomas has capitulated and will make his first picture for the Producers Corporation of America, a new company launched under the leadership of four young Hollywood veterans, George Green, president; Carl Winston, vice president; Howard Levi, treasurer, and Harry Sokol, secretary. Production is slated for December.

It's no idle rumor that Jules Stein, brains of the Music Corporation of America, is thinking of turning movie producer. But guess again if you think Jules has a musical up his sleeves for his debut. On the contrary, he is interested in sponsoring the "Scattergood Baines" series with none other than Guy Kibbee as the lovable philosopher. RKO planked down $100,000 for the rights to the Clarence Budington Kelland stories, which, as Damon Runyon says, is no small potatoes. Guy Kibbee is a natural for the starring role—he is Scattergood and, let me say, after "Babes in Arms" he is back in his stride.

Aside from being the best tonic in months for depression, "Ninotchka" is reasonably sure to be an antidote for communism. So cleverly has Ernst Lubitsch poked fun at the Reds that it's sure to let them see themselves as others see them and to keep possible converts from U. S. S. R. propaganda. As for Garbo, well, just wait until you see her in her drunk scene. Maybe that's too inelegant a word for a lady who imbibes champagne too freely. And as for her laugh, it's the best sign she is really human. So it's not surprising that M-G-M wants Lubitsch to pick out her stories and direct her again as soon as possible. Hear the communists aren't too pleased with Melvyn Douglas, Garbo and the rest who had a part in this movie.

When Maxie Rosenbloom told me his bride, the former Muriel Fader, was smart, he spoke the truth. I knew it as soon as I met her. She taught child psychology, speaks French fluently and is a college graduate. Moreover, she is very pretty. Her mother, who tried to separate her daughter from the pugilist-comedian, has so far relented she is furnishing their home as a wedding gift. Maxie called his mother in New York after the ceremony, hoping she wouldn't take it too hard. But Ma is nothing if not practical. Her first words were "Where's my check? I didn't receive it this week."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Wedding bells ring Sunday for Frank Kilduff and Toni Anderson. He is a local agent and she was formerly soloist with Ted Weems' orchestra; Eleanor Powell has packed up her romance with Capt. (Pilot) Teague where she left off, a few months ago; the Ralph Wheelwrights have adopted a cunning year-old girl, whom they are calling Phinie Louise; Mrs. Jack Oakie is in the Cedars of Lebanon with a badly impacted wisdom tooth; the Dorothy Lamour-Robert Preston romance continues to be the honest twosome of the moment—that is, if dancing at the Cocoanut Grove, dining at Victor Hugo's and seeing each other seven nights a week means anything in Hollywood; Mrs. Jean Bello, who is so like little Harlow since she shed so many pounds, dining in a ringside seat with Heinie Brand at Slapsy Maxie's; Helen Gilbert and Lew Ayres are acting as if they mean it.

Roland Drew planing East to make personal appearance with "Hitler, Beast of Berlin;" the Henry Fondas, who for over a week didn't leave their home because of kidnaping threats, dining at the Beverly Derby; Cobina Wright, jr., and Jimmy Bryant at the La Maze, getting a look at Alice Marble, Cobina's competition; Rochelle Hudson and her bridegroom, Hal Thompson, Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward others at ringside tables; Frances Robinson stepping out with Whitney Derham; Jeanette MacDonald has gained back the eight pounds she felt she needed on a ginger ale-ice cream soda diet; Spencer Tracy and Father Flanagan will be reunited when they appear as speakers for the Community Chest drive in San Francisco; can this be true?—John Garfield and Marc Lawrence eating cream puffs at the Del Haven.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Star's Tenement Home in Movies

George Raft has moved the four-story tenement building in which he spent his childhood from New York to Hollywood.

It's the idea of Lloyd Bacon, who is to direct Raft and Humphrey Bogart in "Invisible Stripes."

Raft just returned from Europe. While on the high seas he received a radiogram from Bacon advising him to linger in New York long enough to take photographs of his boyhood home. It still stands on Forty-first street between Ninth and Tenth avenues.

Raft's "Invisible Stripes" role is that of a paroled convict who returns to his home in Hell's Kitchen. That's where Raft once lived.

With the aid of Raft's photographs, the tenement will be re-created for the picture. In the reproduction of his actual home, inside and out, Raft will relive the memories of his boyhood during the production.

NEARLY 5,000 OF THEM swarmed on Washington, getting a taste of our Indian summer, as the thirty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Postmasters of the United States opened with headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel. It's not Indian summer that A. Hudson Pryor (left), of Texarkana, and E. R. Ganey, of Jamestown, N. Y., are sampling here, but cooling water from a garden hose

3. MONTANA MAIL MAN—George W. Williams, of Prior, Mont., handles the mail for 300 Crow Indians and 10 white families. He writes their letters and wraps their packages for them. Said Williams, "I do a good parcel post business sending native food to Indian boys and girls away at school"

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 10.—W. L. Brann's Maryland-bred Challedon clipped two-fifths of a second off the world record for a mile and 3-16 today when he won the first running of the $5,000 added Tranter Stakes at Keeneland Park in 1:54 3-5.

The son of Challenger II carried top weight of 120 pounds, or 1 more than was carried by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery in establishing the old mark in 1935. He shattered the Keeneland track record of 2:03 2-5 by almost 6 full seconds for the outstanding performance of the year.

First '39 World Mark

The new mark was the first world record set in America this season. C. S. Howard's South American, Sorteado, ran to a new North American mark for a mile and a half at Belmont Park two weeks ago.

Challedon, top horse of the year in earnings and almost certain 3-year-old champion, rolled to his record with none of his four rivals closer to him than three lengths. Off a trifle slowly, the colt moved to second position at the half and then easily took command.

Within a few yards he was on top and he stayed there. Without a single tap of Jockey Georgie Woolf's whip, Challedon stretched his stride and won easily. Greentree Stable's Hash was second, and Lawrence Barker's Chief Onaway third.

Calledon Pays $2.80

A slow beginner, Challedon was beaten easily by Johnstown in the Kentucky Derby but came back to take the Preakness in the mud. Since then he has captured five of ten starts, including such rich stakes as the Arlington Classic and Narragansett Special. The victory today boosted his earnings for the season to $169,000 and to approximately $237,000 for two years.

The victory also established Challedon as the fifteenth richest money earner in the history of the American turf.

Chisox Take Fifth City Title In Row, 7 to 1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The Chicago White Sox won their fifth consecutive city baseball championship tonight, defeating their National League neighbors, the Cubs, 7 to 1, in the seventh and deciding game of the series.

A crowd of 14,781 braved 53-degree weather to see Ted Lyons, 38-year-old Sox veteran, set the Cubs down with five hits to become the only pitcher on either team to win two games in this year's municipal title battle.

Cubs Last Won in 1930

The Cubs last won the city title in 1930. The American Leaguers won the crown in 1931, 1933, 1936 and 1937, no series being played in the other years. Tonight's victory gave the Sox 16 victories and the Cubs 5 in their rivalry dating back to 1903.

The Cubs got their only run in the fourth on singles by Augie Galan and Hank Lieber, an infield out and Glen Russell's outfield fly.

The Sox started in the second inning, Gerald Walker singling and scoring on Mike Tresh's triple to center. Lyons sent Tresh home with another single and Ollie Bejma dropped a single into right. Joe Kuhel scored both runners with an other single, after which claude Passeau relieved Earl Whitehill. The Sox added two more runs in the fifth and their final tally in the seventh.

The Cubs had a 3-to-1 edge in the series through Saturday's game, but the Sox bounced back to win the next three games.

Durette, Navy Star, May Be Out for Year

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Oct. 10.—Bob Durette, the best pass-catching end on the Navy squad, may be out for the season, it was announced here today. The kidney injury which Durette received in Saturday's game with Virginia was a serious one, though not alarming, and this valuable player will certainly be out of the game for a long time, probably for the rest of the season. He has one more season at the Navy, however.

Cliff Lenz, 200-pound back, was in contact work this afternoon, playing in the second backfield, and seems to be getting into shape. His bad cut above the eye, received in the Indian game, has almost completely healed.

Coach Swede Larson again used Doc Wood, Bob Leonard, Ev Malcolm and Pat Gray as his first backfield quartet, and that combination is expected to start the Dartmouth game in Baltimore Saturday. Wood will again be in the quadruple role of ball carrier, passer, punter and field general.

The backfield is three-quarters Southwestern, Gray and Leonard being from Texas and Malcolm from New Mexico, while Wood hails from western Pennsylvania. Moreover, it is about the most versatile passing combination that has ever been in the points for the Navy.

Wood is making good as a passer this year, while Leonard, a sophomore, is the most accurate tosser on the squad. Malcolm is a left-hander and good on either end of a pass play, while Gray has been receiving passes in good style. Titanic Hal Hansen was back at left end this afternoon, restoring the 200-pound plus forward wall which is likely to start against Dartmouth Saturday.

'Villains' Booked For Groan Program

Every man a villain developed as Promoter Joe Turner's theme song yesterday as he announced that the supporting card has been completed for tomorrow night's battle between The Golden Terror and Bob Wagner.

The preliminaries bring together Bibber McCoy and Abie Coleman, Jack Hader and Don Evans, Joe Campbell and Ralph Garibaldi and Johnny Katan and Les Ryan. Turner happily announced that each of these gentlemen is pining a shot at the 303-pound hooded frame of The Terror.

Rippy-Spencer Double Victors In Pro-Am Play

Match Event at Indian Spring Enters Semi-Final Round Today

Claude Rippy and Cliff Spencer pulled a match out of the fire in the morning and won with ease in the afternoon to feature the first two rounds of the Indian Spring match play pro-amateur yesterday over the Four Corners course. The choice team in the lower bracket, Ed Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., and Volney Burnett, of the host club, also were double victors.

The favored duos were joined in the semifinals by the young team, Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree, and Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart, and the Coffey-Bean twosome, Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., and Eddie Bean, also of the host club.

Worsham and Bogart featured the sub-par scoring with an eight under par brand of golf with victories over Bob Barnett and Russ Hollebaugh in the morning and Kenwood's George Diffenbaugh and Johnny Bergelin in the afternoon, finishing a total of 7 up and being even or better all day. The Kenwood team held them even for 12 holes in the closest match.

Short Game Saves Day

Spencer and Rippy had to call on their best chipping and putting game to eliminate the Congressional favorites, Wiffy Cox and Frank Goodwin, jr., in the first round, Spencer holing chip shots on the twelfth and fourteenth and Rippy on the sixteenth to help in a 2 and 1 triumph. Goodwin birdied the eighth and ninth to square the

Pitcher Whitey Moore Sent To Workhouse for 3 Days

Reds' Hurler Charged With Drunk Driving; Loses Driver's Permit

Cincinnati, Oct. 10. — Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, 25-year-old Reds' pitcher, was sentenced to three days in the workhouse and his drivers' license was suspended for six months today on conviction in police court on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Attorney Louis Rubenstein, representing Moore, asked fo a ten-day stay of execution, with bonds at $1,000, indicating he cntemplated an appeal.

A charge of reckless driving was dismissed. "I was not driving the car," Moore said, adding he had been with friends who promised to remain with him.

"Whitey" Moore, 25-year-old right-hander, was one of the Reds' brightest figures in the World Series despite the fact that he saw only three innings of duty.

Young Moore, relegated to the bench after his traffic episode in the last month of the season, took no part in the crucial series with the Cardinals that decided the pennant, and was not expected to figure in the series against the Yankees.

But in the third game, after Junior Thompson was batted out of the box and the Reds were in need of a relief pitcher, Manager McKechnie called on Moore. He faced the Yankees in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings, not a Yankee reaching base as he hurled hitless ball.

Dibenedetto Named A. A. U. President

56-Year-Old Southerner, Former Vice President, Succeeds Late S. E. Hoyt

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Oct. 10.—An interest in school yard athletics 34 years ago was the stepping stone from which Lawrence Dibenedetto rose to the presidency of the Amateur Athletic Union and became the first southerner to head the organization in its 52-year history.

The 56-year-old, 200-pound Dibenedetto advanced to the presidency today because of the death of National President Samuel E. Hoyt, Sr., of New Haven, Conn. He formerly was first vice president.

"I never was much of an athlete myself but only took part in inter-club basketball and baseball," Dibenedetto said. "In 1905 I lived in back of a Parochial school where the ushers society of the adjoining church played basketball, baseball and volleyball.

Benny joined the ushers society and persuaded the group to become members of the Southern Amateur Athletic Union. He was elected secretary of the southern body in 1907 and has held the position ever since.

He traveled through Texas and organized the East Texas and southwestern district and then formed the southeastern.

Several times he has been offered an opportunity of travel abroad in the interest of American athletics but said, "someone else should have the job."

Comiskey and Hill Get First Taste Of 8-Round Route

heavy contender, will have at least one common ground when they step into the ring Monday night at Turner's arena—it will be the first time either has boxed an eight-round professional fight.

The New Jersey fighter, who has piled up an impressive record of 15 knockouts in 17 preliminary fights, all six and four-rounders, on "big money" matches in the East, is developing into a deadly puncher and a possible contender for the world's heavyweight championship.

Hill, virtually unknown to District boxing fans, will bring to the Capital the prestige of a two-round knockout victory over Lou Nova as an amateur fighter. The Californian, a deaf mute, weighs an even 200 pounds and as an amateur took victories over Bob Nestell and Chuck Crowell. The match is scheduled to headline an all-heavyweight card.

Crosley Will Remain In Cast for 6 Weeks

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 10 (INS).—Powel Crosley, jr., president and owner of the Cincinnati Reds, will be laid up for about six weeks in a cast as a result of a riding accident at his Indiana country estate, physicians at Good Samaritan Hospital in Cincinnati reported tonight.

Crosley suffered a back injury when thrown from his horse last Sunday after the final World Series game between the Reds and the New York Yankees at Crosley Field. An X-ray revealed three broken transverse processes of the vertebra, the physicians said.

Marion Brown Leads Mid-Atlantic Play

Defending Champion Scores 2-1 Victory In First Round at Washington Club; Mrs. Sloman Also Winner of First Match

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Marion Brown, the Middle Atlantic women's defending champion, and Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Baltimore's Maryland State titleholder, weathered tought first-round opposition in the fourteenth renewal of the former tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Miss Brown avenged a defeat suffered in the recent Mason-Dixon tourney at the hands of the Baltimore City champ, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, with a 2 and 1 triumph, while Mrs. Sloman scored over Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, on the last green in a match that found only three holes halved.

Otherwise a half-dozen favorites led by the medalist and three-time titleholder, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of Elkridge, moved into the second round. Mrs. Morrow defeated Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, of the host club, 6 and 5, and qualified as Miss Brown's foe in today's quarter-final feature.

Mrs. Meckley Wins

Mrs. Betty Meckley, another former champion from Indian Spring, posted an 8 and 7 victory over Mrs. Wilda Martin, of the host club. By the same margin a clubmate, Mrs. Walter Stokes, scored over Mrs. W. H. Wise, of Old Point Comfort.

District Champion Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Monar, recorded four-hole margins of victory, while Jeanette Myers, of the Suburban Club, completed the quarter-final bracket with a two-hole victory over Washington Club's champion, Sally Whipple.

A putting lapse in the middle of the round nearly cost Miss Brown, twice Manor Club titleholder, the match. She was guilty of three putts on the eighth, ninth and tenth, to go 2 down, but squared the match on the fifteenth and won the next two holes for a 2 and 1 triumph, scoring a 39 for the incoming trip and 80 for the round.

Mrs. Sloman and Mrs. Davy halved the first, sixteenth and eighteenth holes in pars, but the other 16 holes were either won or lost in the see-saw battle. The biggest advantage was Mrs. Sloman's 2 up lead, but it was short lived. Mrs. Davy ran into trouble on the seventeenth, finding the ditch and then missing a 4-footer to lose the hole to a 5, and they matched 5s on the eighteenth for the match.

The competition is a little more severe today for the favored players,

Parsons Gains In Mid-Atlantic Net Tourney

Ritzenberg, Channing, Rawlings Also Enter Semifinal Play Today

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 10.—Delos (Deacon) Parsons battered his way through the quarterfinals of the tenth annual Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tennis tournament today with a 6—3, 8—6 victory over troublesome Bill Washburn, of Washington and Lee.

The 18-year-old Marshall College sophomore, who holds the West Virginia closed title, experienced some trouble in finding his game but once on stride he bettered Washburn's best with a smashing service and brilliant work at the net.

Semifinals Today

The triumph gave Parsons the right to meet Charles Channing, of the University of Virginia, in the semifinals tomorrow.

Channing defeated his doubles teammate from Virginia, Dick Feuille, with a pretty exhibition of softballing which overcame the hard-hitting Feuille, 6—4, 7—5.

Bill Rawlings, of the University of North Carolina, was extended to three sets to defeat his Tarheel colleague, William Meserol, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Hitzenberg Wins

In the final match of the quarter-finals, Al Ritzenberg, of the University of Maryland, won a two hour and a half match from Hughes Davis, of Guilford, 11—13, 6—1, 6—2.

Ral Parr, Noted Owner, Dies in Baltimore Hospital at 62

Bred Paul Jones, 1920 Kentucky Derby Winner; Had Oldest Active Colors

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Ral Parr, 62, race horse owner and breeder whose Paul Jones won the Kentucky Derby and the Suburban in 1920, died unexpectedly tonight.

His racing colors, black and white stripes with a red sash, are the oldest active ones registered with the New York Jockey Club. He began racing in the early 1900's.

Parr was in ill health this summer while traveling abroad. The outbreak of war caught him at sea on an Italian ship and he had to return to Italy. His condition grew worse after he returned to this country by a circuitous route. He suffered a stroke at home this afternoon and died three hours later at Union Memorial Hospital.

Parr was born in Philadelphia but was brought to Baltimore when only a few weeks old. He lived here all his life and built up the insurance firm of Maury, Donnelly and Parr, one of the largest in Maryland.

Legal Light was one the best known horses racing under his colors in recent years. A promising 2-year-old, Legal Light won a number of stake races two years ago. His best horse this year was Hypocrite, winner of Maryland stakes this spring. Another, Victory Morn, won the Richard Johnson stakes at Laurel Saturday.

Parr said that his interest in racing began when his father gave him a goat at the age of 4.

RAL PARR

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Sure, we know the World Series is over, but they're still writing about the Napoleonic wars, aren't they? So, by that license we are still taking as our topic last week's Tale of Two Cities wherein the Yankees gave the Reds the dickens.

POVICH

It has recently occurred to us in a great burst of vision that the National League has been approaching this World Series business from the wrong angle all of these recent years. Confronted annually with the task of beating the Yankees, they have been sending into the World Series any team that happens to win the National League pennant. That may be the accepted good form, but it has been no less foolhardy and a wanton sacrifice of any chances of National League success.

What we are about to suggest, at a cost to the National League of only three cents, is that the N. L. get smart about this World Series business.

It is well to have a pennant winner each year. Every league ought to have a pennant winner. The National League should give its pennant winners full credit, honor them, toast them, nad then forget 'em, and let the St. Louis Cardinals represent the league in the World Series.

There's something about the Cardinals. The Gas House Gang can always be depended upon to go down fighting even if they don't win. And they always stand up there and take their cut, in shining contrast to the weak-swinging displays of the Reds, the Cubs and the Giants, who have encountered the Yankees for the past four years. The Cardinals might not beat the Yankees, but they would at least make it interesting.

Cards Welcome a Clutch

They wouldn't be licked before they took the field, anyway. Fellows like Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin and Johnny Mize and Terry Moore and Don Gutteridge and Mickey Owen probably don't know how the word is either spelled or pronounced. What they do know is that the Yankees, like themselves, are only human. They welcome a clutch. Somehow the National League ought to discover a way to shoo the Cardinals into the World Series.

One could be most unkind to the National League, if one chose. It may be de trop, whatever that means, to gloat but American Leaguers can take double satisfaction in what happened in that last game at Cincinnati. The Reds came closer to winning that game than any other game in the series. They had a 3-2 lead at the start of the eighth inning. Where did those three Cincinnati runs come from?

They didn't come from any born and bred National Leaguers, we find on examination of the details. Who put the first run in scoring position? Former American Leaguer Al Simmons with a line-drive two-bagger to centerfield. Who drove the tying second run across the plate? Former American Leaguer Willie Hershberger, with a pinch-hit. Who drove in what appeared to be the winning run in that inning? Former American Leaguer Bill Werber, with a single to right.

Berger vs. Simmons

Hindsight is always better than foresight in any league, but had Bill McKechnie been a bit more hard-boiled about his Reds, the series might have lasted more than four games. The World Series battleground is no place for sentiment, but that, apparently was the only reason McKechnie started Wally Berger in all of the games while a proven money-performer, lik eAl Simmons, languishing on the bench.

McKechnie defended himself on the ground that Berger was good enough to help the Reds win the pennant, but somebody should have told him that the pennant race was over; that this was the World Series. Berger, slow-footed and with a candy arm, figured directly in the series. Simmons, playing the last half of the last game, litterally lifted the Reds out of the ruck with a two-bagger that served to wipe out the Yanks' 2-0 lead.

It's difficult, though, to be harsh with Bill Mc Kechnie's sort of guy. Unruffled, paternalistic, an undeniably shrewd baseball man, McKechnie is justifiably one of the most beloved characters in baseball. His players always go down the line for him. There never has been any intraclub friction on a McKechnie managed team

Great Guy Bill McKechnie

He demonstrated the sort of a fellow that he is when the Reds returned to their dressing room at the end of the fourth game debacle, licked in four straight. Billy Myers, with his two errors at second base, was the undeniable goat of the game. Save for his misplays, the Reds would still have been in the series and Owner Paul Crosley would have realized at least $70,000 from a fifth game. Newspapermen besieged McKechnie for a statement.

Here was the time when a manager could chuck in with what appeared to be the obvious and blame Myers for the defeat, thus saving his own skin in a measure. But McKechnie didn't choose to do that.

"Don't blame Billy Myers for what happened out there today when he muffed that double play throw from Frey in the ninth," said McKechnie calmly. "It may have looked bad, but it wasn't his fault. Let me tell you something:

"Myers and Frey have been a great double-play combination all year. They worked together great. When Frey fielded Dickey's double-play grounder in the ninth and flipped the ball to Myers, it was the first time all season that he had handled a ball that way—with a backhand throw. Myers wasn't looking for it. Frey crossed him up. It was the ball game, but it wasn't Myers' fault.

Correction—In this space yesterday it was stated that only 30 stations broadcast the recent World Series. What a boner that was. Exactly 248 stations broadcast the series, the network claiming greater coverage than in any former series.

Jockey Basil James Is Toast of New York

'The Champ' Leading Saddle Rivals in Horses Brought Home

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—In most sports, a fighting name is considered something of an asset. That idea does not hold true where jockeys are concerned. To name just a few of the booters who were christened along Milquetoast lines, how about Laverne (Fator), Lavelle (Ensor), Earl (Sande), Linus (McAtee), Raymond (Workman) and Clarence (Kummer).

Nothing pusillanimous about those lads. They were hell-bent for leather on the racetrack. Now comes another, newer idol. He answers to the intrepid, pugnacious, devil-may-care name of Basil (James)!

James is the toast of New York's racing public. Figures make dry reading, but this little piece is to show why metropolitan fans call Basil "the best horse on New York tracks."

Tops Winning Jockeys

Seven of the nine meetings in the Empire State, or 151 of the 175 days constituting New York's 1939 season, were written into history with the Belmont Park wind-up over the week-end. Only 12 days at Jamaica and the same at Empire City remained after last Saturday's climax.

Going into these final four weeks, James topped all rivals for the New York season with 124 winners. Don (Comeback) Meade was second with 113. Then came Johnny Longden, 81; Ronnie Nash, 79, and Eddie Arcaro, 66.

James has been the most consistent and most spectacular of them all, with 29 doubles, seven triples and one "home run." Longden was the only other rider to win four races in one day (until Meade did it at Jamacia's opening yesterday). But in all other respects James was supreme. Meade had 24 doubles, 4 triples; Longden, 15 doubles, no triples; Nash, 13 and 3, and Arcaro, 11 and 3.

James led the jockeys at four of the seven meetings and finished fourth at two others. The five leading riders fared as follows:

Philadelphians Suggest Sub Meet For 1940 Olympics

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—Civic leaders suggested today a Pan-American sports meet in Philadelphia next year as a substitute for the 1940 Olympics, scheduled to be held in Helsingfors, Finland, but which may be canceled because of war.

Acting Mayor George Connell suggested organization of the city's sport leaders to formulate plans.

John B. Kelly, former Olympic rowing champion, said "I think the meet should be called the 'All-American Olympic' but we should invite any nation not at war."

However, Lawson Robertson, coach of the U. S. Olympic track and field teams, termed the suggested meet "a nice idea," but added, "I don't think it will work."

"Canada couldn't be in," he pointed out.

DeChard Fights Novak on Amateur Card for Blind Tonight

Benefit Show In Stadium Opens at 8:30

D. C. Amateur Champ Will Be Underdog; 12 Bouts, 40 Rounds, Make Up Program

Amateur boxing returns to the District tonight at Griffith Stadium in grandiose style with a 40-round show topped by two 21-year-old heavyweight sensations, Jimmy DeChard, of Washington, and Tony Novak, national amateur heavyweight champion, sponsored by the Washington Society for the Blind.

A crowd of more than 5,000 persons is expected to turn out for the 100 per cent benefit show of 12 fights, beginning at 8:30 p. m. Entire gate receipts will be used by the society to set up stands to be operated by the District's blind in Federal buildings.

The main event, a five-round bout of national importance, because of Novak's amateur standing, will find the A. A. U. champion taking the ring with a 28-pound advantage over DeChard. District Golden Gloves heavyweight champion.

Novak's 218 pounds will be offset, at least in part, by DeChard's superior speed and ranginess. The Washington boy should weigh in today at 190 pounds.

K. C. Fighter Favored

The Kansas City fighter will be favored over DeChard on the basis of his record, which shows 44 victories in 51 amateur matches—26 of which were by knockouts. DeChard has won seven out of his eight fights, three by knockouts.

Jimmy Lake, who handles the announcing at local professional fights, will be at the microphone tonight when the amateurs take over in a show which may revive some of the interest in boxing that faded out after the recent poor decision handed down by Judges of the Joer Archibald-Harry Jeffra fight.

The supporting card of 11 bouts is headed by a five-round semifinal between heavyweights George Galvin, Fort Myer soldier, and Johnny Sinkovictz, central Pennsylvania amateur champion. The latter has been seen here before, and this bout promises to be a swift-moving, wild-swinging battle that will end in a knockout.

Other Preliminaries

The other preliminaries, all three-rounders, bring together amateur champions from the District, Harrisburg and York, Pa., Frederick, Md., and Alexandria, Va. The complete lineup for the night:

112 POUNDS, THREE ROUNDS—Paul Coakley (Junior Golden Gloves champion, Washington, D. C.) vs. Grover Davis (novice Golden Gloves champion, Washington, D. C.).

Gobblers Gird For Real Test

Special Dispatch to The Post

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 10.—Spurred on by tales of William and Mary's prowess that Tech scouts brought back from the Indians' encounters with Navy and Apprentice School, Virginia Tech gridmen are girding themselves for one of the hardest tests of the season Saturday in Richmond Stadium.

The game renews one of the major rivalries in Virginia football and is expected to be viewed by a turnout of better than 10,000. The tilt will bring together Tech's stout line and a battling band of Braves who are also a potent threat in the State title race.

There are classy new ball carriers in the Indian line-up for the Gobblers to worry about. Among them is Howard Hollingsworth, the State's leading scorer. If Tech's capable defense bottles him up they still have such other big worries as Birchfield, Matthews and Hickey.

Several of Birchfield's brilliant runs against Navy and Apprentice all but made Scout Tex Wilson's hair stand on end, so the Gobblers are being forewarned aplenty. Against such boys as these, who are sparking William and Mary's best team in a decade, Tech will pit a hard-hitting line led by Capt. Dave Pitts and Jim Coleman, tackles, and Preston Graves, a bit of dynamite at guard. Vying with the Indian aces for yardage will be Tech's main ball-toting threesome, Herb Thomas, Sonny Ellison and George Warriner.

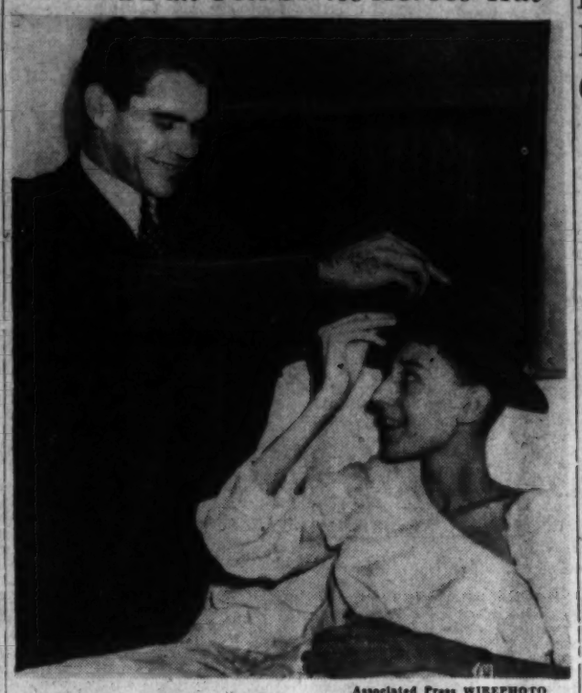
Invalid Fan Gets Series Heroes' Hat



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Charley Keller, the Yankee outfielder who became the hero of the World Series, presents 14-year-old John Tambini with a hat autographed by New York and Cincinnati players in a New York hospital. John, an invalid for almost a year, is an avid baseball fan

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 10.—Notes so hot:

The Yanks have lost at least a million dollars, by playing honest baseball in the World Series in which they have appeared since 1927 . . . If they had been even faintly corrupt they would not have won with such uncompromising consistency . . . When they beat the 1927 Pirates in four straight they erased the three other games which make up a World Series—games that would have been played before sell-out audiences if the Yanks had deliberately prolonged the competition . . . The same thing happened in 1928 and 1932 . . . In 1936 the Giants pressed them to a six-game series, and in 1937 to a five-game series . . . But against the Cubs of last year and the Reds of this year the Yanks won in four straight games . . . Honest baseball has wiped out 18 potential series games which, if they had been played, would have meant a fortune to the club . . . and it needs another fortune about as badly as it needs another centerfielder.

CONSIDINE

Art Rooney, the Pittsburgh plunger who won a fortune at the New York tracks two years ago, dropped same this year by bankrolling a bookie . . . Rooney's greatest day as a bettor was $108,000 won, but by a galling accident he missed a chance to win $500,000 on a single race . . . He got an overpowering hunch on a 10-to-1 shot one afternoon in his lush days . . . He rushed to Frank Erickson to bet $50,000 on the horse's nose . . . Erickson was momentarily absent and his helper was too startled to take the bet . . . Before the bookie returned the race got under way, the horse won, and Rooney had lost his chance to win a pot that would have lasted him darn near a week.

Rooney, who is running for political office in Pittsburgh, recently got something free for the first time since he moved into the chips . . . He traded Frank Souchek, an end on Rooney's Pittsburgh Pirates, for Coley McDonough, Cardinal back . . . McDonough reported to the Pirates all right, but Souchek refused to play for the Cards . . . So the Cards said the heck with the whole thing and let the Pirates keep McDonough—who nearly beat the Giants Sunday.

'Other League' Looks Like Cheese

Bill McGowan, who did such a great job behind the plate in the first game of the World Series, will open an umpires school in Florida this winter . . . Johnny Vander Meer's only appearance in the World Series was a brief unveiling as a lowly batting practice pitcher . . . The Yanks make the other league look like cheese each year, but the N. L. outdrew the A. L. this season . . . Attendances in the old lodge were up 600,000, thanks to the Reds and Dodgers.

Mickey Cochrane will manage the Detroit team in the National Softball League, with George Sisler in charge of the St. Louis entry . . . The New York franchise has been bought by a group of young Wall street men, who may ask Babe Ruth to take the pilot's job.

Roland Logan, the United States Military Academy trainer, who has trained Glenn Cunningham for years, tells us that Cunningham will run in the major meets at the Garden this season and then begin a four-year job of "untraining" . . . This means he will unwind himself gradually, instead of quitting at once . . . He is afraid that if he stops suddenly his oversized heart and huge lungs will deteriorate.

Prince Georges Title To Be Decided Sunday

The Oxon Hill Baseball Club, champions of the first-half of the Prince Georges County League, will meet the Maryland Aces, second-half champions, in a double-header Sunday at 1 p. m., at Shady Oaks, Md., to decide the county championship.

Oxon Hill, with 37 victories and three defeats this season, defeated the Aces, 5 to 3, last Sunday, in the first of the playoff games, in Oxon Hill.

Keller Returns Home Today to Gala Welcome

Middletown Fans Plan Big Reception for World Series Star

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10.—Charley Keller, the Middletown Valley farm boy who became a baseball hero, returns here tomorrow to receive the adulation of home-town fans agog over his sensational slugging in the World Series.

The rugged rightfielder of the champion New York Yankees is coming down from the big city to the new home he recently built here for his wife and baby boy—and arrangements were completed today to give him a rousing reception.

Frederick was first to plan a Keller celebration but his alma mater, the University of Maryland, where "King Kong" first caught the eye of Yankee scouts, was quick to follow, announcing Thursday, October 19, would be "Charley Keller Day" at College Park.

At the university celebration the lad who led World Series hitters with a .438 average and socked three homers will be feted at a luncheon, be a guest at the R. O. T. C. regimental review and receive a gift at an undergraduate rally.

At Keller's home-coming in Frederick tomorrow night, there will be a parade and a testimonial dinner sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Keller will receive a gift from Frederick fans.

The parade will begin at 6:30 p. m., and end at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, where the dinner will be served at 7 p. m.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, and Burton Shipley, baseball coach, will speak at the dinner. Edward D. Storm, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be toastmaster.

Other guests will be Keller's father, C. E. Keller, and William E. Hauver, of Middletown.

Oct. 19 Charley Keller Day at Maryland U.

"Charley Keller Day" has been scheduled at the University of Maryland for October 19 when a student rally and regimental review will be staged in honor of the Maryland alumnus who was the outstanding star of the 1939 World Series.

It was at Maryland that Keller, as a star varsity outfielder, first attracted the attention of big league scouts who were intrigued by both his hitting and fielding ability and bid high for his services. He graduated from the university in 1937.

Following a luncheon in Keller's honor, he will review the entire ROTC regiment with which he had served in his undergraduate days. The student body will assemble at the baseball field following the review and Keller will be presented with a testimonial. Tom Coleman, president of the student government association will make the presentation.

Temple Bowling Teams Resume Play Tonight

C., Camden Tavern, Loggia Roma, Miller Furniture, Trant's, Bennings Station, Wolf's, Lloyd's, Bright Star and Lord Baltimore.

Skulls Booking

The Ballston Skulls, undefeated eleven of 1939 are seeking games for Thursday night and Sunday with nearby teams to be played at Ballston, Va. Challengers call Oxford 1196.

Iowa's Kinnick Is 'Superman' To Corn State's Football Fans

By the Associated Press

Iowa City, Iowa, Oct. 10.—"Triple threat" doesn't go far enough for enthusiastic Iowa football fans in describing the exploits of Nile Kinnick, Hawkeye senior halfback whose play is leading the Tailcorn State university out of the gridiron wilderness.

They want a term that also will take in those seven straight dropkicks the stocky senior sent through the uprights for extra points in Iowa's triumphs over South Dakota and Indiana.

He came down to earth a bit on this extra point business in the Hoosier game, missing the last three

Bel Air Stud's Thelusson Wins Wakefield Purse at Laurel

Bass Wood Is Second, Chi Third

Victor, Given Rousing Ride by Shelhamer, Brings Backers $7.90; Seabo Is Suspended

Laurel, Md., Oct. 10.—The Wakefield Purse, named for the Virginia birthplace of the father of his country, proved a romp for the Bel Air Stud's Thelusson, and he made five horses, including E. R. Bradley's Bass Wood, the favorite, yell "papa" in a battle over the mile and 70-yard course. In taking down the chief money in the top race of the day, Thelusson finished three lengths in front of Mr. Public Choice and another half length ahead of the Walmac Farm's Chi.

Thelusson was a $7.90 choice in a field of six and was given a rousing ride by Jockey Al Shelhamer. The winner, a 3-year-old son of Gallant Fox, was timed in 1:43 1-5 over a lightning fast track.

The kind of racing weather that California and Florida advertise prevailed and one of the best week day crowds, some 8,000, witnessed the day's action, which bordered on the sensational in some races. Not more than a head separated horses on the front end of the first three events.

It was a costly day for Jockey George Seabo. He had the mount on Galt Davis' Yankee Lad and was accused of crowding at the first turn in the second race. The stewards issued a ruling later in the afternoon, suspending him for ten days effective after tomorrow's program.

Getting back to the feature, Thelusson broke well from his outside stall and had a clear lead going into the clubhouse turn. Banner Man was rushed through horses to get to the leader, but began to falter almost in the same motion. In the meanwhile, Jockey F. A. Smith was riding confidently on Bass Wood, the favorite, having only Fox Shade beaten on the backstrech.

Going to the far turn, Thelusson had a four-length lead and Chi had moved into second place. This one whittled down the pacemaker's margin some on the trip to the stretch as Bass Wood came boldly on the outside.

In the stretch, Shelhamer shook up his mount and the son of Gallant Fox responded. Bass Wood was able to lessen the leader's margin, but that was all. Chi managed to take third money.

MISS GINO, carried wide at first turn and raced on outside thereafter, weakened after moving up menacingly. HERO WORSHIP closed full of run. GOSSIP TIME was through early. DOMKIN assumed command at once, shook off LITTLE MOWLEE to draw clear and easily held CHALLAMORE safe in closing stages. CHALLAMORE close up from start, closed gamely under hard drive. RACE RIDER came willingly from a sluggish beginning. HENRY TATT, slow to begin, closed with bold rush. LITTLE MOWLEE, off alertly, weakened gradually after a quarter. RACE ON had early speed. PAPER GIRL was through early. MARY'S LASSIE could not keep up.

THELLUSON had speed to go to front going to first turn, drew out on backstretch and held BASS WOOD safe while under drive. BASS WOOD dropped far out of it, came around horses while making move and finished gamely under hard drive. CHI was closest to pace to stretch and weakened. RADIO GOLD could not menace while strongly handled. FOXSHADE showed nothing. BANNER MAN, off poorly, was rushed to contention and weakened.

TRANSMITTER, first away and sent to front under hustling tactics, was rated while setting pace, disposed of AIRACUDA and drew out easily in closing stages. AIRACUDA, hard ridden throughout, pressed pace and held on gamely. CAREFUL, MISS, steadied along for half, responded gamely when placed to drive and closed with good energy. ROYAL BUSINESS, within striking distance from start, closed willingly. MAECLOUD moved up along rail entering stretch and weakened. SHAMBLES closed some ground. SUN VICTOR had early foot.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY INFINITE, $19.70, $7.80, $5.30; ALEXANDRINE, $5.10, $3.80; BALAPIN, $5.60.

LADY INFINITE, sent to front under hustling tactics in opening furlong, saved ground while setting pace and stood a long drive to hold ALEXANDRINE safe. The latter, off forwardly, was closest to pacemaker and closed gamely to be wearing down winner at end while bearing out. BALAPIN bettered position boldly leaving backstretch and hung thereafter. THE RUNNER moved up samely on backstretch, but weakened in closing test. HUNTING HOME went evenly. THE QUEEN rallied mildly. DIXIELAND had some early speed.

Dear Al:

Everything's O. K. now. Jockey No Boy Jacobs has returned from his annual pilgrimage to the New York tracks and he's strictly a Bimelech rooter. Jake says the Bradley 2-year-old is nothing but Kentucky Derby bound. "I ain't been doing no good, as usual," said Jake, "but this here Bimelech is duck soup in the Derby. Man, oh, man! you should have seen him up there, just zigzagging through the field one day when he was almost left at the post." Jake reports, very sadly, that his friend, Col. Bradley, is in ill health and we'll take

Redskins, Facing Improved Pirates, Settle to Hard Work

Baugh Still Out as Team Prepares for Game; Rookie Backs Make Fine Showing

Back to work went the Washington Redskins yesterday, confronted now by a rugged battle which last week had loomed as a "breather." No longer is their game with the Pittsburgh Pirates, scheduled for Sunday at Griffith Stadium, regarded as a soft touch.

The reason is obvious. At Pittsburgh, three days ago, the Pirates confounded the New York Giants by holding the champions to a 14-7 score. Under their new coach, Walter Kiesling, the Pirates made serious motions toward at least tying the Giants.

They had the ball within the Giants' 20-yard line three times during the last quarter. They scored a touchdown against the Giants with an uninterrupted march from their 31-yard line in the second quarter to take a 7-0 lead. In the same quarter they held the Giants for downs and forced them to surrender the ball on the 1-yard line.

Under Kiesling, who recently replaced Johnny Blood as head coach, the Pirates showed marked improvement. With Sam Francis, Swede Johnson and McCullough, former Oklahoma star, comprising the punch in their backfield, the Pirates were a constant worry to the Giants. In Niccolai, big tackle, the Pittsburgh club boasts a field goal kicking threat who beat the Redskins in 1937 with a long boot.

Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, gave his players only a one-day respite after their 41-14 conquest of Brooklyn and yesterday at Griffith Stadium he drove them through a two-hour workout with little regard for the unseasonable heat.

The Redskins will be Baughless against the Pittsburgh club, Slingin' Sammy's twisted knee still causes him to walk with a painful limp and he may not return to the line-up until the game with Green Bay on October 29. Also still missing from the Redskin line-up is Halfback Red Morgan. Backs Jay Turner and Don Irwin, however, will be available for the Pittsburgh fray.

An unconcealed source of joy to Coach Flaherty is the showing of his rookie backs, Jimmy German and Dick Todd, who starred against the Dodgers. Both players are expected to get heavy assignments against the Pirates. Frank Filchock and Andy Farkas, however, will be the wheelhorses in any Redskin offensives.

Last night the Redskins saw unreeled the films of their triumph over Brooklyn.

CharlesTown High Wins Night Opener

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 10.—More than 2,000 fans jammed Memorial Field here last night for Charles Town's first night football game, which Charles Town High won from Davis (W. Va.) High, 21-6 after the visitors had led for most of the game. School officials were highly gratified with the financial results of the experiment with night playing. Portable lighting facilities were used. It was intimated that permanent lighting for the contests may be added later in view of the experiment's success.

They'll Provide Thrills Friday in Stadium

Woman Driver Leads Suicide Squad Show

It is sad to think that anyone who has that Hollywood quality known as "oomph" would do such things as drive a perfectly good automobile through a flaming wall and crash same into other autos, but that is exactly what will happen Friday and Saturday at Griffith Stadium in the Variety Club's Cavalcade of Thrills show.

This was learned yesterday when a preview of the thrill business was staged for newspapermen at the stadium, and Miss Ula Holt, who possesses that quality and who doubles for film stars, was introduced around as the leader of the Hollywood Suicide Squad, which is composed of a group of fellows who don't seem to care much about growing old.

The show will usher into the stadium a new type of sport—jalopy racing—a deadly sort of business which has Edward Eynon, secretary of the Washington Nationals and a sort of godfather to the stadium, biting his nails over what will happen to the turf.

Object of the preview was to illustrate a bit of the "hell driving" which will take place Friday night, but they didn't get very far with this after Miss Holt appeared. Incidentally, most of her doubling in Hollywood is for Dorothy Lamour.

It took them two hours, a smashed packing case and a broken wheel before a gentleman known both as Chet Wallen and Rex Rekir could turn over an old fugitive from a junkyard, and during this time Miss Holt was around and naturally there was a lot of conversation—what with so many people and just Miss Holt.

Ula—that is, Miss Holt—started her stunting career six years ago when she first went to Hollywood and made a Tarzan movie series. She had to play with wild lions, go over waterfalls and fall out of trees and finally became so adept that the studios began calling on her to double.

Now she holds the distinction of being the only woman stunt driver with the Hollywood Suicide Squad of crash artists and as such will play a large part in the introduction of jalopy racing into Griffith Stadium—which already this week is taking a beating from professional football, high school football and an amateur boxing carnival crowd.

"The object of jalopy racing is not racing but to crash into the others and see who can last the longest," Miss Holt explained. "Often there are some pretty bad spills."

She broke a rib in one such race when rammed by a fellow driver and was doused by boiling water from the radiator in another crash But it is a severe test upon the imagination to associate Miss Holt, who, to point out again, doubles for Dorothy Lamour, with such things as mangled jalopies.

When the curtain runs up on the first show at 8:30 p. m., Friday however, she will be out there risking her neck with the others in a siege of hair-raising spectacles which will include top-speed crashes through brick walls and a real, rip-roaring brick walls and a cowboys and cowgirls from the West.

From the looks of things yesterday there will be plenty of thrills on hand. A matinee will be held Saturday at 2 p. m., and the show ends Saturday night.

Violets Drill 3 Hours On Defense for N. C. U.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—New York University's football team devoted three hours to its defense against North Carolina plays in a dummy scrimmage today. Coach Mal Stevens tried three men, Irving Mond, Emil Tanassy and Paul Boroff, at end in place of the injured Bob Connally. All three performed well at pass receiving, but Tanassy, the best defensive end of the three, apparently clinched a starting berth against the Tarheels. Ed Boell and Jack Barmak, regular backs who have been taking things easy because of slight injuries, will be ready to play Saturday.

Brown Expense Pool Denied by Harridge

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—William Harridge, president of the American League, today denied a report that the league had subscribed $100,000 to help the St. Louis Browns pay expenses for their 1939 operations.

"There's absolutely nothing to it," Harridge said. "Every team in the league is operated separately and defrays its own expenses."

The report, published in St. Louis, said the American League had subscribed $100,000 from the seven other clubs to be turned over to the Browns if the St. Louis club lost money this season.

Colonials Face A Severe Test In Butler Tilt

Extensive Passing And New Plays Due In G. W.'s Next Game

Though George Washington had hoped to save its Sunday punches for Georgetown, it now appears the Colonials may have to cut loose a week ahead in Saturday's game with Butler.

The Indianapolis team has shown much more strength in its three games to date than G. W. Coach Reinhart had expected ar the word is out that the Colonials realize they'll have to turn their football bag of tricks inside out to win in their first test on a foreign field.

An extensive forward passing attack and more plays to make use of End Bob Nowasky's ball-carrying talent are expected to figure prominently in the pepped-up G. W. offense.

Butler in undefeated, with decisive victories over Ball State Teachers, Ohio University and Indiana State Teachers. The Bulldog's defeat of Ohio U. is particularly significant because Ohio later dealt Western Reserve its first setback in 13 games.

U. of Virginia Looking Ahead To Big Season

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 11.—The belief is growing that a new phase of Virginia football was born at Annapolis last Saturday and is not likely to be reared in defeat.

Starting against Navy were only two 1938 regulars and progressive improvement is expected of last season's reserves and the large quota of sophomores who figured in the first major test, all of whom emerged from the 13-12 defeat with little loss of prestige.

The Maryland game here Saturday will find the Cavaliers battling on even terms and the result should give a good estimate of the team's true strength for the rest of the schedule.

Jim Gillette, one of the finest backs in Virginia football annals, and Lee McLaughlin, a greater left tackle in his junior year, were in their normal positions last week. Harry McClaugherty, co-captain and backfield blocking specialist; Mosby Cardozo, quarterback, and Roscoe Willett, last year's regular center, were unavailable because of injuries, although Cardozo did make a brief appearance.

Starting with Gillette were Sylvester O'Grince, understudy to McClaugherty last year, and Bill Dudley and Leroy Neustedter, sophomores. Moved up for first string end positions are Tabb George and Nick Gianakos, reserves last year, who draw their support from Kenneth Rathbun and Jim White, both new to varsity competition.

At right tackle was Albert Frerotte, new to the line this year, and the guard posts were taken by Phil Rothar and Jack Sauerback. Rothar won a letter last year in a reserve capacity and Jack Sauerbeck came up from the freshmen team. Herbert Winokur, regular game starter last season, was withheld at the beginning.

N. B. A. to Recognize 10-Round Title Bouts

The executive committee of the National Boxing Association yesterday announced it would recognize as title fights, ten-round events in N. B. A. States where 15-round bouts are prohibited by law.

C. U. Is Nonchalant Over Detroit U. Game

CardsExude Confidence in Preparation For Titan Invasion of Brookland Saturday; Victory Fever Rampant

By Jack Munhall.

Something like the condemned man who ate a hearty breakfast—because he knew sumpin'—the Catholic University football team is whistling while it works this week in preparation for Saturday's big intersectional game with the University of Detroit.

For a campus that soon will quiver under the onslaught of the Terrrible Titans who have allowed Card elevens 000 while shellacking them the past two years, Catholic Unisity's sweeping terrains is mysteriously innocuous-looking and everywhere there is optimism and scenes of joy.

It doesn't add up, but there is not a single C. U. student, let alone a player, who doesn't have rosy dreams of a victory Saturday. Memories of Andy Farkas and the 1937 Titans who routed a promising C. U. team, 27-0, at Griffith Stadium, and of Eddie Palumbo and last year's Titan powerhouse which shattered the Cards' hopes of an undefeated season, are still poignant.

Nor are the natives out Brookland way allowing reports that the current Detroit eleven is little, if any, less formidable than its 1937 and 1938 predecessors to fall on unheeding ears.

C. U. Confident

They have a grim and unfaltering confidence in the machine-like C. U. team that Dutch Bergman has turned loose to roll up 36 points in its first two games while holding the opposition to none. It is C. U.'s finest since the 1936 Orange Bowl champions, they shout, and as yet there is a strange absence of dissenters.

Experts and the indifferent football fans alike have been at first surprised and then astonished at the power and cool precision of this rugged Catholic University eleven and with each glimpse are conceding it a higher place in the local grid realm.

In preseason statements Coach Bergman repeatedly said that if Halfbacks Charley Moutenot and Joe Guyon remained in good condition and if the squad received not more than its quota of injuries, then Catholic University was ready to show its rooters something.

Moutenot has been running as of old on the leg which was injured last season, and Guyon has been comparatively free of the stomach trouble that greatly handicapped him all during the 1938 campaign. In addition, Fullback Rocco Pirro has been a great delight to Bergman with his newly found speed and improved ability to rend an opposing line to bits. Hank Brostak, another halfback, has been scooting around enemy ends as if a dreaded monster were on his heels.

These are the specific reasons—these and the C. U. line, whose power never was doubted—that Cardinal rooters see a timely end to the Detroit jinx.

The current C. U. forward wall may turn out to be the greatest in an unending succession of impregnable lines that Fod Cotton has developed at the Brookland school. It reeks of power from end to end and its blocking to date stamps it as definitely the finest in this vicinity.

So win, lose or draw, you may be assured that C. U. won't be beaten Saturday if Detroit makes the mistake of trying to disprove the nice things we just said about the Cardinal line.

Pre-track season training is over for the three Georgetown thinglads who last week attached themselves to Jack Hagerty's football squad with the hope that they might provide the backfield punch so lacking as Georgetown barely beat Temple in its opener.

Because they were deemed to valuable to the track team to be allowed to risk injury on the gridiron, Mort Alnwick, Vinnie Braun and Johnny Buckley yesterday parted company with the Hoya squad, Coach Hagerty announced. Possibly the fact that none of the trio turned out to be a combination of Gipp, Thorpe, Grange and Nagurski also had something to do with their release.

However, the remaining 30 members of the G. U. squad will entrain for Syracuse tomorrow afternoon at 3:43 o'clock and will arrive at the scene of Saturday's game Friday at 7:30 a. m.

A workout is scheduled Friday afternoon and the team will then rest until game time. Jules Koshlap, now recovered from a leg injury suffered in the Temple game, was passing better than ever in yesterday's practice and once again on Saturday Georgetown will rely heavily on his accurate arm to carry them to victory.

Syracuse Gets Rough Work For Hoyas

Quarterback Co-captain Joins Injury List; Solem Satisfied With Squad

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Determined to get his Syracuse squad into a hard-tackling, sure-blocking condition for the game here Saturday with Georgetown, Ossie Solem today ordered an hour and a half scrimmage. Combinations alternated on offense and defense against the Frosh, who demonstrated the tricky attack that has given Georgetown ten straight wins.

Solem expressed satisfaction with the squad's improvement, but the injury problem, persistent this fall, was further complicated when co-Capt. Bill Hoffman, quarterback, went to the infirmary with a possible concussion, received in the Cornell game last week. His probable absence Saturday, means the orange will be minus four regulars, Fullback Walt Zimdahl, Halfback Gene Hopkins, Guard Johnny Congdon and Hoffman.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Lew Jenkins, 130¾, of Sweetwater, Tex., stopped Primo Flores, 135¾, of Puerto Rico, for the second time in three weeks tonight when Referee Arthur Donovan stopped their scheduled eight-round fight at the Coliseum in 2:51 of the fifth round.

Richmond Frosh Win

Fork Union, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Halfback Courtney Driscoll ran 50 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter to lead the University of Richmond freshmen to a 6 to 0 victory over Fork Union Military Academy here today.

Rippy-Spencer Double Victors In Pro-Am Play

match. Cox birdied the eleventh to keep it even but they couldn't match the pace from there in.

In the afternoon, Spencer, still in a scoring streak following his Middle Atlantic P. G. A. victory last week, and Rippy played good partners to score over Mel Shorey and Billy Shea.

Oliver and Burnett were four under par in the morning in trouncing Allan Burton and his partner from Army and Navy, Joe Greenwood, 6 and 5, and in the quarter-finals held a two-hole lead over Al Houghton and Louis Fuchs on the ninth and went on to win, 3 and 2, with par golf.

Coffey-Bean Victors

The Coffey-Bean team scored, 4 and 3, over Gene Larkin and Lou Harrison, and then won the hard way in the second round over Al Treder and Harry Pitt, of Manor, one up. The afternoon match was give and take, with the winners three-putting 10, 14 and 15, and Treder and Pitt missing 3 and 2-foot putts, respectively, on 16 and 17 to give the winners their margin. Coffey dropped a birdie on 16 to go one up, after Pitt's birdie on the previous hole squared the match.

Treder and Pitt pulled the only surprise of the first round with a last-hole triumph over Host Al Jamison and Johnny Burk, the Georgetown U. star from Newport, R. I., with Treder's 33 on the second nine furnishing the punch.

Spencer and Rippy meet Worsham and Bogart this morning, with Oliver and Burnett against Coffey-Bean for the final round berths. Winner and runner-up pro prizes are $150 and $60, and the amateur awards are a set of irons and golf bag.

Cadet Coaches Well Pleased With Eleven

Lexington, Va., Oct. 10.—V. M. I.'s mud battle victory over Davidson last week by the baseball score of 2 to 0 pleased Head Coach Allison (Pooley) Hubert and V. M. I. supporters in general for more than one reason.

Besides evening the 35-year-old series at 11 games apiece, the Cadets proved that they had materially strengthened their defense since the loss to Kentucky. The Davidson Wildcats were able to register only one first down, and Ray Reutt, Tom Thrasher and Venable Johnson took turns blocking punts. It was Reutt's block that gave the Fighting Squadron its safety, though Harold Tipton, 230-pound tackle, also was rushing the Davidson punts all day.

Equally gratifying to V. M. I. men is the fact that Capt. Paul Shu and James (Son) Shelby were able to take part in the game after having been on the bench with injuries Trainer Herb Patchin believes that the workout under fire means that this pair of veterans will be ready for regular srevice from now on.

Still another pleasing fact was the fine guard play of Sophomore Billy Walker, of Richmond, who was an all-Virginia freshman tackle last season. This 185-pounder showed marked improvement, and is now in a hot fight with a fellow Richmonder, Tom Thrasher, 193-pound junior, for a starting berth in the Vanderbilt game.

Corn State Calls Kinnick Superman

tries. His seven-straight performance is a modern Iowa football record, however, in part because the Hawkeyes haven't been in the habit lately of making the touchdowns that must precede extra-point trials.

As a dropkicker, the Iowa firebrand is just a cub. He took up the booting specialty as a serious proposition last spring under the direction of Backfield Coach Frank Carideo, who is still as good a kicker as he was in his playing days at Notre Dame.

Kinnick averaged 8.5 yards from scrimmage in the two games this year, he tossed five touchdown passes and his punts have soared high and far. Capt. Erwin Prasse, an end, caught three of his aerials for scores in the Indiana game.

Nile is the team's leading scorer with 31 points and his gains, 223 yards in 27 trials, come within 25 yards of equaling the achievements of the other 12 Iowa backs combined.

Last year Iowa scored only 46 points in the entire season, 27 less than the revived Hawks counted in the Indiana and South Dakota battles. The Hoosiers were beaten, 32 to 29, and South Dakota was whitewashed, 41 to 0.

In Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

SPITALNY TO RIVIERA. Phil Spitalny and the winner of his audition contest at the Capitol Theater will be guests of honor at the Lounge Riviera tonight, together with a group of those "Charm Girls" from the famed Spitalny orchestra. It's another of those star-studded parties that always seem to be popping at Riviera. The winning lass of the Spitalny auditions will be chosen at Capital Theater today. . . . Riviera's Artie Hume has been working himself blue in the face making arrangements of the hit numbers of the new Rogers and Hart musical, "Too Many Girls." They'll be played tomorrow eve for the first time.

P. S.—Biggest cocktail party of the season has just been tossed at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. No less than 500 guests gathered to honor Mr. John L. Weaver and celebrate his fortieth anniversary with the Boston Insurance Co. Mr. Weaver is proud of his 74 years but looks less than 60.

PEGGY LE BARON, lovely socialite from the Virginia hunt country, will soon be starred in the Shoreham floor show, we hear . . . The National Association of Postmasters dined happily in the Blue Room on Monday eve, applauded the comic golf of Horton Spurr, the picture dancing of Woods and Bray, the fine barytoning of Gene Archer. Ida May Clark accordioned Barnee's "Hail to the Redskins" in honor of the postmasters . . . Postmaster "Pete" Peterson, of Reno, "biggest little city in the world," was given a special introduction to the crowd.

RINGSIDING CELEBRITIES. Shar-Zad. Judge Ferdinand Pecora with Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and pretty and petite Mrs. Douglas, also SEC Chairman Jerome Frank and Mrs. Frank . . . Radio's Boake Carter . . . Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater and attractive Mrs. Meakin . . . Mrs. William Harryman Rapley and party right from the opening of "Ladies and Gentlemen" at the National.

Troika. Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his very sweet mother enjoying Vanya's super-dancing a la Russe and a Russian dinner, discussing his forthcoming trip to the Antarctic.

Metronome Room. Roland Carr, that Washington esquire, who went to Europe the "hard way," as deckhand on a three-masted schooner, celebrating with the same group of friends who gave him a rousing send-off on his voyage . . . Paul Drury and Loretta Offutt, young socialites, who'll be wedded next week at St. Matthew's.

Mayflower. Senor Carlos Davila, former Chilean Ambassador to the United States, now a resident of Manhattan . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell . . . Pretty Doris Becker, of Warrenton, with a group of her hunt country friends.

"KEEPER OF MY HEART" is the title of a new song just written by Ross De Roy, of the Capitol Theater orchestra, and Sidney Prosen. It will be introduced to Washington by Maestro Al Norton and Songstress Marian Dawn at Bamboo Gardens. P. S. It's still "Anniversary Week" at Bamboo. Be sure to see the Evans Family do their tricky "chain dance."

TONIGHT'S OPENINGS. El Morocco. New downstairs spot in the Trans-Lux Hour Glass. Tropical music by Louis and his El Moroccos, who scored at Rehoboth's Hotel Henlopen last summer . . . Songs by delightful June Bartlett at the cocktail hour with Sparty (former Casa Manana) at the piano . . . Waiters will wear fezzes which will not look nearly so funny as your best girl's hat.

L'Escargot. Gala fall opening of this home of la cuisine Francais and nectarlike French wines . . . Continental music by Sasha and Raion . . . Dining is supposed to be removed indoors from the L'Escargot Terrace, but with Indian summer going strong, we wouldn't be surprised to find diners still in the beautiful outdoors.

MAYFAIR'S Burt Raeburn got his start in entertaining when he neglected his commercial art course to write and direct a musical comedy for the Bufalo art school, where he was a student. Everyone liked the musical but Burt's art teacher.

BERT GRANOFF is singing request numbers by the bushel in the Neptune Room . . . And a great treat it is for the customers, since Bert's previous appearances here have been in the Earle Theater where his songs were definitely programmed . . . All sorts of talent are to be encouraged in Bert's new "Talent Interludes." Not only singing, but dancing, instrumental music, acrobatics or what-have-you is in order . . . Ps-st! Supper dansing is in the air at the Neptune Room. But we don't know when.

"SOUTH OF THE BORDER," previously mentioned here, is coming to the top like a skyrocket, being played everywhere . . . Rainbow Room's Milton Davis thinks it will be at the top shortly . . . But he likes better the new "Let's Make Memories Tonight," though he doesn't think it'll be a hit. He explains, "It's a musicians' tune, and if musicians like a tune, it's sunk."

BILL STRICKLAND is due back at the Lotus today after keeping a session with the aches and pains . . . It's fine news, though Frankie Garner has been subbing splendidly for the maestro . . . Lovely Lotus newcomer is Gertrude Briefer, who also dances like a mad girl, doing the most amazing cartwheels while she clutches one ankle . . . The Allis Girls have broken out stunning costumes of black lace with claret colored sequins for their new modernist rhythm number.

FOR ATMOSPHERE PLUS. Pirates' Den. Capt. Kidd was a sissy compared to Don Dickerman's diverting buccaneers . . . Cutlass duels . . . Potent drinks . . . Hangings . . . Pirate ditties . . . Bob Rinaldi's weird card tricks . . . Piper Manning's music . . . And de-luscious steaks.

Pall Mall Room. Vurra swank . . . The Arthur Murray Dancers will teach you La Conga . . . Food fit for Brillat Savarin . . . The Bert Bernath music so sleek that it would please Zorina.

Cafe Caprice. Beautiful with gold mirrors, a luxury bar and murals of sinister ladies all looking like Katharine Cornell . . . Knowing music by the Swing Sophisticates . . . Evalyn Tyner playing a fascinating piano . . . Adele Van singing—sweet as a gardenia.

Madrillon. Exotic as Algiers . . . Double piano by Carr and Don—plenty stratospheric . . . Songs a la Espanol by Adelita, who's very much on the tamale side . . . Songs a la Manhattan by dark-eyed Mary La Marr.

Maryland Gardens. Soft lights and sweet-swing music by Lou Williams . . . Dainty piano interludes by Ann Curwood . . . Songs by Phyllis Page . . . A big and handsome horse-shoe bar just made for conviviality.

Hi Hat. Just sit here during the cocktail session (if you can find a seat) and you'll see everyone you know . . . Oscar, very natty and white-carnationed, makes the customers happy . . . Also Jack Manning's "Strings of Romance."

DOWN VIRGINIA WAY, Jimmy Gandley's band, the jitterbugs' delight, will play for dancing at the Log Tavern tonight. Plenty of room for fancy stepping . . . And the weekly "shrimp feast" is due tonight at the A. T. & S. Barbecue. Come on, you all!

Building Loan Industry Makes Giant Strides

8,951 Associations in U. S. Add Half Million Members in Year

By Thomas M. Cahill.

New evidence of the remarkable growth of the building and loan industry is revealed in a report of the District of Columbia Building & Loan League by a national league official, an increase of 500,000 members in the savings, building and loan associations of the Nation the past year being announced by H. F. Cellarius, Cincinnati, secretary-treasurer of the United States Building & Loan League. The 506,148 net increase brings total membership up to 6,829,167 in the 8,951 associations in operation at the close of 1938.

Assets of $5,629,564,859 are reported for the entire business in the United States and its Territories for the year ended December 31, 1938. Thirty-seven States, the District of Columbia and Alaska and Hawaii increased their assets. There are three States with more than half a million dollars: Ohio continues as the ranking building and loan State in the Union with $806,150,778, followed by New Jersey with $691,959,895, and Pennsylvania with $533,125,762. Some increases in the percentage of reserves in the consolidated balance sheet of the institutions was noted for the year.

"Associations enrolled five and one-half times as many members in 1938 as they did in 1937," says Mr. Cellarius, in part. "This is the second consecutive year since 1930 that a substantial number of new members have been enrolled by our institutions, reversing the downward trend of the thirties.

Decrease in Assets

"While the general trend in total national assets continued downward, favorable signs are noted in particular areas. There was a decrease of $82,093,541 for 1938, and the number of States contributing to this decrease remained static in 1938 at 11, but Alabama, Colorado, Delaware, Louisiana and Tennessee, which reported decreases during 1937, registered increases during 1938. The States showing the biggest increase in assets during the past 12 months were New York, $18,091,216; District of Columbia, $12,373,964; California, $11,691,915; Minnesota, $10,622,432, and North Carolina, $10,419,725.

"The savings and loan business, even though emerging from a depression period, today rests behind an increasing bulwark of reserves. In 1937, the surplus and undivided profits were $515,582,659, or 9 per cent of total assets, while during 1938 they mounted to $517,112,464, or 9.2 per cent of total assets.

"A most encouraging trend is noted in the percentage of total mortgage loans to assets. The $3,918,-661,795 of mortgage loans outstanding at the close of 1938 was an increase in volume over the past year of 1.8 per cent, and amounted to 69.6 per cent of total assets, and that in the face of a very real business depression last year. This portends an ever-increasing earning capacity for our associations."

Auditors' Meeting

The first regular meeting of the auditors' section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, will be held at the Lee House tomorrow. The chairman, H. Norman Glasco, of Union Trust Co., will preside and will devote the entire meeting to business of the section, with a report on the proceedings of the national convention held in Seattle last month.

Foundrymen's Meeting

At the October meeting of the Baltimore and Washington Chapters of the American Foundrymen's Association, to be held at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, October 20, D. M. Curry, of the development and research division of International Nickel Co., Inc., will give a talk on "Gates and Risers for Non-Ferrous Castings."

D. J. Reese, also with Itnernational Nickel's development and research division, will talk on "Cupola Practice" before the same meeting. He will also act as discussion leader on cupola maintenance and refractories at a round-table luncheon before the conference on October 21.

Treasury Borrows At 0.022 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated October 11, 1939, and to mature January 10, 1940, which were offered on October 6, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks. The total applied for was $331,978,000 and the total accepted, $100,198,000.

The average price was 99.995 equivalent to a rate of 0.022 per cent.

New Pit Demand Advances Wheat 2 Cents a Bushel

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Resumption of moderate but persistnet buying in the grain market today hoisted wheat prices more than 2 cents a bushel. Purchasing also was distributed among other grains with advances ranging up to a cent or more.

A strong stock market, prospects for clearing weather over the farm belt and reductions in margin requirements were bullish factors. Purchasing by previous short sellers to cover accounts prior to the Daladier speech and release of the Government crop report also was a factor in the trade. Just before the close a partial account of the French Premier's address was interpreted as indicating the Allies have no intention of stopping the war under present conditions. This added fuel to the buying movement.

Wheat closed at the best levels of the day, 1⅜@2⅜ cents higher than yesterday, December 82⅞@83, May 82½@82⅝. Corn was 1@1¼ up, December 50⅝@50¾, May 53¼; oats ½@1⅜ higher; rye 1⅛@1¾ up; soy beans 1⅛@1⅝ up, and lard 13 to 17 higher.

Cotton Futures Gain 25 to 45 Cents Per Bale

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—The cotton futures market jerked into action late today following French Premier Daladier's pledge to fight. Closing prices were up 5 to 9 points. Foreign buying early had resulted in small mark-ups which were sustained by trade and Wall Street demand. Up to the last hour, however, trade was a dawdling affair.

The sharp afternoon rally on the French news brought in increased hedging and profit-taking and the list backed away from top marks.

Realizing Sets in After Warlike Speeches Closings Slightly Above Monday Prices Government and Domestic Bonds Higher

New York, Oct. 10.—Stocks opened irregularly higher today, attracting additional buying, particularly in steels, rails, chemicals and heavy manufacturing shares. The advance continued both before and during the Hitler and Daladier speeches, after which realizing developed and the trend was reversed. Closing prices were not much above Monday's last and substantially under best levels of the day. Volume, at 953,500 shares, was about 33 per cent ahead of the previous session, when sales were at a low for more than a month. Government and domestic bonds were steady to higher, with foreigns easier.

Wheat, war prospects and announcement that September steel product shipments were at a two-year high motivated buying for at least half of the session. After traders and others had analyzed the declarations by Hitler and Daladier, however, they admitted inability to take positions either for war or peace operations. Despite the German chancellor's reiteration that Germany will crush enemies unless they make (ritter) peace, financial quarters were unconvinced that his bold words are not screening worry over Russia's rapid and extensive extension of influence. The Daladier message merely restated the French position—peace is desired but not on the terms or promises of Nazi leaders. From the tenor of the Berlin-Paris statements, Wall Street felt that the British prime minister, in his message to the House of Commons tomorrow, will again insist that Hitler's peace ultimatum provides no basis for ceasing to fight.

War and Peace Views Conflict

While a comparison of the German and Anglo-French views apparently points to continued war and, for that reason, to speculation in stocks based on war profits, many analysts are taking an opposite view. For example, after more than a month of hostilities on the Western Front, the Allies have expended only trifling amounts of munitions and employed a fraction of forces. Navies and air fleets have, meanwhile, been only moderately active. It is now a question in the minds of many Americans whether, and providing Congress provides the authority, the United States will sell enough materials and supplies to Britain and France to compensate for the loss of legitimate foreign trade. Estimates place the decline of foreign peace-time business as high as 40 per cent.

Of additional interest is the emphasis which leaders place upon the aftermath of war; the necessity of rebuilding by belligerents and their inability to resume cash trade with this country. Such a crippling of foreign resources would become aggravated in relation to the duration and intensity of war.

Aircraft stocks ended rather better than most groups today, although the most active, Curtiss-Wright, ended unchanged. Douglas sold up to 76¾ and closed at 75½ for a gain of more than a point. New orders by the U. S. Government for airplanes were a factor.

Steel Shipments Encouraging

U. S. Steel shipments for September, a good indicator of general activity in the industry, greatly exceeded the most optimistic of estimates and were at a peak for any month since September, 1937. Steel common was about 3 points ahead at its best, but ended at 74¾, up ⅛. Bethlehem and Republic, both in the active list, added large fractions.

Motors, stores and coppers all enjoyed the early gains but ended about even, while rail equipments and stores actually lost ground. Allied Chemical was a strong feature in light dealings with a net gain of 3¼; DuPont was up 2 and Westinghouse and Johns-Manville better than a point apiece. Atchison was a gainer in the rail section with New York Central and Pennsylvania. Oils made some headway, although buying was cautious due to the prominence the petroleum business is receiving in the monopoly hearings. Statistics on country-wide crude oil output announced after the close reflected the return to the five-day producing week in Texas from the six-day basis in effect last month.

Activity in rail bonds at somewhat higher levels for both speculative and better grade issues imparted an appearance of moderate strength to the market on the stock exchange today.

In the Treasury section price movements were somewhat mixed, final prices being easier while later prices in the outside market showed the list unchanged to up 7-32. Foreign obligations were more active than on Monday and many issues suffered declines after the Daladier speech.

For the market as a whole volume of $6,685,000 was slightly above Monday but Treasurys amounted to only $304,000, against $389,000 on Monday. The average of 30 issues closed with a gain of 0.42 point. The rails were up 0.32 for the better issues and up 0.94 for the others; industrials advanced 0.10, and utilities rose 0.38 points.

Baltimore & Ohio bonds improved on further consideration of the approval given the revamping plan. Some New York Centrals and Nickel Plates also displayed firmness, along with bonds of Southern Pacific and Southern Railway, where gains amounted to as much as 2 points.

By the Associated Press

The Agricultural Department's October crop report yesterday placed production of corn this year at 2,532,417,000 bushels and the total wheat crop (winter and spring wheat combined) at 739,445,000 bushels.

Corn production was forecast a month ago at 2,523,092,000 bushels, last year's crop totaled 2,542,238,000 bushels and the average production for the ten years, 1928-37, was 2,308,-674,000 bushels.

The combined wheat crop was forecast a month ago at 736,115,000 bushels; production was 930,801,000 bushels last year and the ten-year average production was 752,952,-000 bushels.

Winter Wheat

Winter wheat production was put at 550,710,000 bushels, compared with 686,637,000 bushels last year and 560,160,000 bushels, the ten-year average.

Spring wheat, including durum, totaled 188,735,000 bushels, compared with a forecast of 185,405,000 bushels a month ago, 244,164,000 produced last year, and 192,792,000, the ten-year average.

Durum wheat production was estimated at 33,144,000 bushels compared with last month's forecast of 32,652,030, last year's production of 40,445,000, and the ten-year average production of 35,076,000.

A 941,230,000 bushel oat crop was predicted. This compared with a forecast of 929,968,000 last month, 1,053,639,000 produced last year, and 1,049,300,000 the ten-year average.

British to Buy $40,000,000 of U. S. Tobacco

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 10 (AP).—Tobacco auction warehouses in the Carolinas and Virginia, where sales were suspended in mid-September because of the withdrawal of British buyers, were stuffed with an accumulation of millions of pounds of leaf today as the auctioneer's voice again started a flow of money to the growers' pockets.

Most markets reported they had more tobacco on the warehouse floors at one time than ever before. At the larger markets this meant several million pounds. It was believed that several days would be required to bring the amount of offerings down to anything approaching normal.

Chief concern of the growers, however, was the price, which they hoped would be appreciably higher than the 14-cent-a-pound level to which the market plummeted early in September after the outbreak of the European war.

Today found the British buyers back on the markets. Under a plan worked out by Government officials, the Commodity Credit Corporation is to put up $40,000,000 to be used by British companies to buy tobacco. This tobacco will be stored in these companies' warehouses and plants, but the title will remain with the CCC until the British companies actually pay for it.

B. & O. Carloadings

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended October 7, totaled 55,417, an increase of 10,944 loads over the corresponding week of last year. For the previous week of this year total loads were 55,987.

Jewelry Steel Developed at M. I. T.

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—Steel that will last forever in all kinds of outdoors, a major goal of science, became a possibility today with the announcement by the Chemical Foundation of discovery of five new processes for making stainless steel impervious to all known natural corrosion. These discoveries change not only the surface but the depths of the metal. One of them renders the steel as lustrous as precious metals so that it can be made into jewelry.

All discoveries were at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by four men, Herbert Henry Uhlig, John C. Wulff, Albert L. Kaye and Robert S. Williams. They assigned their patents to the Chemical Foundation.

TO CONSERVE ASSETS
. . . . an Important Estate Function

Estate administration, never a simple thing, is today a highly specialized business demanding the full time and attention of thoroughly qualified people in many different fields.

Here at American Security, for instance, trained personnel devote their time and effort to the constant study of investments and to checking the investment portfolio of estates in our care. As an added precaution, however, no purchase or sales of securities is made for any estate without the approval of our Investment Committee which consists of the President and three Directors.

This is typical of the care we exercise in every function of Estate administration. For 49 years American Security has demonstrated its ability to serve as Executor or Trustee.

Our Trust Officer will be glad to discuss your plans.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

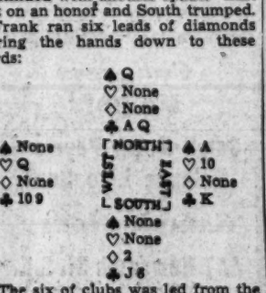
Confidence is merited in a partner who like Aaron J. Frank, Cleveland expert, daringly jumps into the bidding at the five-level and then proceeds to drop a singleton king and win his doubled contract.

The hand, shown in today's box was reported by W. Howard ("Buffalo Bill") Woolworth.

After the opponents had methodically climbed to four hearts, Frank decided to take a sacrifice. He won the contract when he counted East for a king of clubs, called for the ace from dummy, and caught the singleton.

West led the king of hearts, which was won by Frank with the ace. The diamond king was played and West took the ace, leading the spade ten, which held the third trick. West continued with another spade. East put on an honor and South trumped.

Frank ran six leads of diamonds paring the hands down to these cards:



The six of clubs was led from the closed hand, West played the nine and Frank paused to consider. West had turned up with a diamond ace and the king and queen of hearts.

East held the ace and king of spades originally, and should have had club king, the one opposing high card not yet placed, to open the bidding.

East might have raised on three hearts and have the club king guarded, but declarer could not do anything about it. He, therefore, pessimistically called for the club ace, but felled the king to win his five diamonds doubled. He lost only a diamonds and a spade.

Chapter 18

"They had brought us up to despise the men who like to keep women inferior. Aunt Lavina wrote me, all this time, begging me to say just how we boys were living, and if Father had left us money enough. I never answered her very exactly, except to say that we were all right, getting on . . . I didn't show very good sense, I might have known that would only make her more anxious. I'm not proud of the way I acted then. The fact was, I suppose, looking back on it, that I was really beside myself. I was a bookish boy, you know. I'd expected as a matter of course to go to Oxford as my father and grandfather did. We'd always lived with civilized people. I hadn't known a thing about the under side of life till then. And now it looked as though I'd never see anything else. It didn't occur to me that thousands of other boys had no more to look forward to—never had had. I thought about nobody but myself. You see it looked as though I was done for—before I had even begun. I couldn't see anything ahead but to be a slave to slave-driving employers. I thought I'd go on all my life selling neckties, and delivering packages, and sweeping out stores and living in a rat's nest of dirt and disorder. But it wasn't really that—that wasn't the worst—"

HE DID NOT know it, but his voice which in all the years she had heard it had been strong and harsh, dropped to a murmur, "I missed my mother," he told her, "more than I could bear. I dreamed of her almost every night. I saw her just as she used to be, tall and beautiful and clean—my brother and I were never really clean any more. Sometimes for an instant, even after I woke up, I could feel her hand on mine. She had lovely hands, strong and white, with long musicians's fingers. I loved dreaming of her. I dreaded waking up."

He dreamed again, woke up again, and went on soberly in his usual voice, "But, of course, I had to get out of bed and go on. So we went on living on six or seven dollars a week—when we could get it—cooking on a gas jet, eating, sleeping, doing our washing and mending, being sick alone, getting over it alone—all in one room.

"And then on a black, zero, stormy, winter evening, when I got back from work frozen and crawled up those endless stairs and pushed open the door to that room—there was Aunt Lavinia! Tall and beautiful and clean—like an angel in tweeds. She was sitting on our frowsy bed, talking to Downer, stroking his head with her strong, white musician's hand that was exactly like my mother's."

His listener dashed her hand across her eyes, and said in a trembling voice, "But I thought you said you hadn't told her."

"I hadn't. She had guessed. From what I hadn't put into my letters, I suppose. I feel sure now that she had had a frightful quarrel with her husband about it. I suppose she had wanted him to do something for us—or let her earn some money to send us, and probably that made him furious. We were nothing to him. But she didn't let us know that. She lied to us. She told us that he had to be away for a long business trip, and she had come to be with us so that she wouldn't be alone. She made us think we were doing something for her by letting her take care of us. She'd come back to Margaret's boys to see that they had a chance to be what Margaret would want them to be.

"Well, she held the door open, and I turned my back on all the other thousands of boys in trouble, and went through that door to the kind of life my mother meant me to have—to college, to decent living, to music, to a home. Aunt Lavinia taught music again, had another church choir to manage, got a little apartment, made a circle of civilized people for us to know. It was easy for her. She was really, though you wouldn't think it now, a well-known musician of her time. And like my mother, a very cultivated woman. This Scotch accent of hers is just one of the whimsies of her old age. She and my mother used to talk that way for fun. Sometimes I think she does it now to bring my mother back to her. She often had pupils in diction, her English was so pure.

"Well, she saw me through Columbia and into a position as teacher in a city high school, and got Downer into a job as salesman that interested him, where he was doing well—Downer always hated books, could hardly wait to get out of high school and into business. He's very good in business. And then she went back to Australia to her husband."

"But would he—I though you said they'd quarreled."

"Oh, alas, they had. She could not have realized how they had quarreled or she would not have tried to go back. Or perhaps she was willing to try anything to have him again. Or perhaps he had bided his time vindictively till he had her where he . . . She never told me what happened. I don't know. She has told me very little about her husband, ever. And nothing at all about those last few years after she tried to go back to him. I thought from her letters that perhaps things were not going very well. But I didn't dream—I was astounded when after I'd left New York and come to Clifford to teach, a letter came to say she thought she would like to make me a visit. I went down to meet her ship. And when I saw her . . ." The breath went out of his lungs. Through clenched teeth he said in a choked voice, "He'd paid her out for leaving him! I don't know what he'd done to her! Broken her to pieces! She'd gone a little insane, I think."

DOROTHY CANFIELD

HE PUT HIS HAND over his eyes, took it down and looked through the girl, back at that incoming ship—"I actually didn't know who she was, at first sight. I didn't recognize her. If I told you how she looked, you wouldn't believe me. She'd been too distraught to take care of herself. I had to remind her for weeks, for months after that, to undress when she went to bed, to comb her hair, to wash her hands. For more than a year she hardly ever woke up from sleep except in terror. When I had to leave the house I used to wake her up before I left and stay with her till she knew me and was quiet. I didn't ever dare leave her alone when she fell into a daytime nap. There are still times when I need to be watchful, but seldom now. And I can tell when she's in danger. She forgets again to wash her hands. Her poor hands that had been so beautiful and clean. I kept looking at them, there on the dock, when she was saying over and over, 'I've come back to see do you still need me, Tim? If you don't, let me die.'"

The girl's lips were trembling. A tear brimmed over and ran down her cheek. But she looked bewildered too, as if she did not understand. He saw that he had left out too much; and in a single sentence gave her the explanation that he had reached only after years of the effort to understand. "You see she had just paid too big a price for what she had done for us. Her husband saw to it that it cost her too much. She'd had—I suppose—a real passion for that man, one of the fatal kind. Looking back on it I have often thought that all the four years she stayed in America taking care of us there must have been death in her heart."

He was amazed at the story he was telling, and cried out in remorse over it as though it were new to him. "How could she have done it? How could we ever have let her do it?" He offered an excuse. "But we never knew a thing about all this—whatever it was," and pushing the excuse away in shame, went on, "The reason we never knew was because we never tried to know. Ignorant, selfish boys, we took her for granted."

He said with fierce self-blame, "It makes me sick when I think how we let her carry us through those four years—yes, and grumbled about her housekeeping. She's always been a terribly bad housekeeper. We thought we were doing very well, I remember, not to make any remarks about the coffee's being bad, not to ask why our shirts hadn't been sent to the laundry. There is no excuse for us. We should have known what it was costing her—should have—"

The girl broke in impatiently, her tears gone, cutting him short with authority, "Don't be so foolish! If you had known, you'd have spoiled it for her!"

It was Timothy's turn not to understand.

"Why, you must see that if you'd known what it was costing her, you couldn't have taken what she gave you, and then she'd have felt she had lost everything—everything in her own life, and yet not done anything for you."

"I don't know what you mean," said Timothy blankly.

She looked hard at him as she might at a student in her class, whom she suspected of willful inattention, and restated her explanation, "Listen—what was it she wanted? It was to have you and your brother finish your growing up like other boys, wasn't it? To see you natural—to give you a home you could be natural in—that you couldn't help but be natural in. Wasn't that what she gave up everything else for? You know it was. And so your being natural, and just like other boys—that was proof she hadn't failed. For goodness' sakes, you must be able to see a simple thing like that!"

BUT HE could not—not at once—see how his long years of solitary remembering had warped his sense of proportions, had over-simplified the noble complexity of that long-ago story. "No," he said in an accent at once sincere and sad. "No, I can't see that."

She looked deeply into his face, not fondly at all, her eyes intent on penetrating through what he thought was in his mind to what was really there. Then she said with peremptory plainess, "You are thinking you can somehow do something for her by making it out worse for her than it was. But think what she got back! Do you suppose she didn't know what would have been ahead of you if she hadn't helped you? To have been the one to save her dead sister's boys—" her voice wavered, she caught her breath, she put a hand on her heart, and reminded him, "You see, I'm not just making this up out of my head. I have a sister too. I know. I'm trying to do for Delia what Aunt Lavina did—a little. I know how it made living worth while to be able to do that for her sister. It's sort of selfish of you, isn't it, to pretend there wasn't any other thing in it for her but just what she lost?"

He forgot what she was saying, enchanted to find himself in one of the moments of vision when he could really see her, as, until he had met her, he had never seen anything.

Abashed by his silent gaze, she hurriedly qualified her words, "Well, not selfish—I don't mean that. But just so wrapped up in your own side of it, you don't admit there is another person's side."

And now he did see, astonished at the keenness of her intuition which came, as nothing ever came for him, from a deeper source than mere experience.

"Why, yet, so it is! Selfish is the right word." He yielded the point with a glad humility. "I never thought of it that way. You see, I never spoke about it before to anybody, and so I never had a chance to find out how it would look to somebody else."

They stood silent, looking back down the long way they had climbed together. He thought with thankfulness of how infinitely farther they had come along an inner path. He thought with joy that the new element had borne him up safely this first time he had struck out freely and without fear in it. He smiled at her with a confident tenderness. "Well, now you know about Aunt Lavinia," he said, "and you're the only person in the world who does."

She turned upon him the full thrilling ardent look that had made two other talks with her unforgetable, and told him, "Yes, now I know. And now I see why—" Her voice trembled and broke. She could not go on, although she took two or three long shaken breaths.

But he needed no words. In thought he lifted her young hand between both his and held it to his heart, in thought he leaned to touch with his the childlike freshness of those firm young lips. But, "It is too soon . . . " he felt. This great step forward was enough for one time.

IN THE dark-blue valley hollow, far below them, now bestarred with lights, a small backward-slanting column of white crawled slowly from north to south. The few trains which passed Clifford were, through infinite repetitions, time-signals to the subsconscious minds of all who heard them. The man and woman high on the mountain pasture were not conscious that they had seen a train. But both took from it the remorseful reminder that Aunt Lavinia had been alone too long. "Aunt Lavinia will be wondering where we are," said Susan, with compunction. "The fire may have gone out. We'd better turn back." As Timothy Hulme stooped his shoulders to that old responsibility it was sweet to know that someone else beside him lifted it with him.

They dropped swiftly down the long steep slope that had cost them such effort to climb. In a moment they were at the spot where, crowned with the benign flower of pity, she had said slowly, ". . . when you were only 14 years old!" Dark and shapeless in the twilight, the rock crouched heavily in the cold which to his memory was always to be sun-warm. He saw her turn her head to look at it as they passed, and knew without words that her hand, like his, remembered the strangeness of a warmth so mild lodged in so stern a hardness.

She had knocked, he had opened, she had taken the first long step into his life. The first fire on his hearth was safely kindled, burned clear and quietly. He was surprised to see how naturally he opened his lonely heart to its comforting warmth.

As they came around the corner of the last field they could see that another hearth was warm. The windows of the living-room were flickering and rosy. So the fire had not gone out. Aunt Lavinia had not needed them. They slackened speed, stepped slowly side by side over the grass already clammy with dew, and finally stood still to look at the leap of flames reflected in his windows like a pulse of life in the low stone house.

"Yes, the fire's been kindled on my hearth," he thought. He stared at the flickering light too fixedly, too long, he lost his sense of time and of reality; for a dizzy instant it seemed to him that this beginning was the end, that he and Susan were already returning together to the house that was their common home. She had wept for his sorrow, had she not, she had shared his secret, never-told pain, she had rebuked wtih authority a false note in his remorse he had not known was there, the walls were down—he was no longer alone—he would never be alone again.

Britain Turns To Canada as Air Arsenal

Fliers From Entire Empire to Be Given Training in Dominion

By the Canadian Press

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Canada seemed likely tonight to become the wartime air capital of the British Empire.

The increasing importance of her place in Britain's war preparations was stressed today in the announcement of a co-operative air training program upon which she has agreed along with the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand.

The plan, announced simultaneously here and in London, calls for pilots, observers and gunners from the four empire countries to come to Canada for intermediate and advanced training.

Each country will conduct its own schools for preliminary training. A mission from the United Kingdom, headed by Lord Riverdale, is on the way to Canada, and others will come shortly from New Zealand and Australia.

Figures on the number of airmen to be trained in this dominion were lacking, but more flying fields, aircraft, instructors and living quarters will be provided.

Dominant Role Revealed

Copyright 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 10.—With the British air force playing a dominant role in warfare against Germany as the eyes of the army and the guns of the navy, in contrast to its auxiliary status a quarter-century ago, Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood disclosed today that "in due course" Britain's production of military aircraft would be more than double its present rate.

Sir Kingsley declared Britain's general aim, in co-operation with France and the British dominions, was to achieve "air force of overwhelming strength."

Without mentioning any figures—although in peacetime Britain's goal was 2,370 first line planes by next spring—Sir Kingsley said that at the outbreak of the war the rate of British aircraft production "represented an achievement unprecedented in this country in time of peace."

Immediately, he said, carfully prepared plans for greatly increased production were put into effect and would mean, "in due course a rate of production more than twice the considerable figure we have now reached."

Anti-Sub Work Cited

He presented a detailed picture of the air forces' activities in the first month of hostilities.

Planes of the coastal command, co-operating with the Navy in hunting subarines and escorting convoys of merchant vessels, flew 1,000,000 miles and provided air escort for more than 100 convoys, he reported.

Searching for enemy warships and submarines beyond the range of vision of surface ships, British planes had sighted Nazi U-boats on 72 occasions, and had delivered 34 attacks, "some of which were undoubtedly successful," he said.

"Day and night, he added, "reconnaissance aircraft are penetrating into the enemy's country, testing his defenses and observing his movements and troop concentrations. A complete photographic map of the Siegfried Line has been made."

In conjunction with their reconnaissance flights, he said, the bombers have distributed leaflets to the German people, some of which were recently found on German prisoners.

Claims Best Fighters

Refuting German claims that the R. A. F. night survey flights over Berlin had not disturbed the population, Sir Kingsley said:

"Our airmen, on their return, spoke of the firing and searchclights they encountered, so we can only conjecture that the people of Berlin must be very heavy sleepers. Next day we may hope that they were wakeful enough to peruse what Hitler describes as these 'wretched leaflets.'"

Sir Kingsley said recruiting for the air force was being maintained on a voluntary basis and that in the first two weeks of war 10,000 men were accepted for service as pilots, crews and maintenance personnel.

"Our latest fighters are definitely better than their German counterparts," he declared.

As for German claims of British losses in the air, he said some had been inaccurate, others "grossly exaggerated."

Robert Elliott, Who Killed 300 'to Avenge the Law,' Dies

Hauptmann's Executor Was Against Profession For 'It Does No Good'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—Robert G. Elliott, 65, official executioner for five Eastern States, died today at his home in Richmond Hill, Queens.

Announcement of his death was made by his son, Robert G. Elliott, jr. The executioner had been ill since last May. The cause of death was given as coronary embolism.

Among the persons he put to death were Bruno Richard Hauptmann, kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby, and Sacco and Vanzetti, convicted in Massachusetts of murder and the central figures in a worldwide protest.

Elliott's condition improved so much in recent weeks that he returned to his home on October 2, but suffered a relapse.

Foe of Own Livelihood

Elliott was an outspoken foe of the legalized killing from which he derived his livelihood.

"It doesn't do any good," he said, repeatedly.

"There is a certain satisfaction the State gets—a sort of revenge. But we keep on getting these terrible criminals just the same."

Elliott had spun the rheostat dials of death for more than 300 murderers during his 13-year career, including Ruth Snyder and her illicit lover, Judd Gray; and "Two-gun" Crowley, notorious bandit.

A taciturn man who kept his calling a secret even from his children, Elliott, or "Pop," as he was called, showed signs of fraying nerves in the months preceding his final illness.

In October, 1938, he complained to Massachusetts prison officials that the electric chair, the oldest in the Nation, was dangerous and that he "couldn't breathe easily" for fear of death when he pulled the switch.

Five Were Women

As America's best-known executioner—performing his work in New York's Sing-Sing, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut prisons—Elliott had seen all types of condemned prisoners go to their death.

He had seen them cocky and blustering . . . The swaggering "tough guys" whose jaunty poolroom bravado crumpled, who babbled and collapsed at the end of the long "last mile" . . . The white-lipped frightened kids who took the wrong turn of the raod and died with a half-finished prayer on their lips . . . And the women. Five of them.

"It's hardest executing the women," he said after throwing the switch on Ruth Snyder in 1928, and a few weeks later he suffered a nervous breakdown.

He had seen seven men die in seven days by his own hand . . . seen them come blinking into the bright-lit execution chamber, shuffling in carpet slippers and garbed in the somber blue cotton shirt and dark, leg-slit trousers men wear to die in . . . adjusted the death helmet close down over part-shaved pates where the electrodes fit . . . and then, as the guards stepped quickly away from the death chair's rubber matting, spun the rheostat.

Preferred "Electrician" Title

A myriad times, in that pre-midnight hour of execution—with death a 3-minute job to make a corpse of a man—he had seen them scream and sob and blaspheme, and still he said:

"It doesn't do any good. It never will."

Appointed at Sing Sing in 1926, Elliott had a monopoly on death-chair executions in the East. He never had an assistant or trained a successor in his highly-specialized task, always working alone since he took over the grisly job from John Hulbert, who committed suicide after resigning five days before a scheduled execution.

Elliott's house in Queens, where he lived with his wife and two children, was wrecked by a bomb in 1928, shortly after he had electrocuted Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts, and until his death a police booth was erected in his yard with a policeman to guard him.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ROBERT G. ELLIOTT
Hauptman's Executioner Meets Death

From death, he derived a substantial income, earning $3,150 for 21 executions at Sing Sing alone in 1936; but he maintained a small electrical business and preferred to be known as "Business Electrician" rather than by the more forbidding title of "Executioner."

He was New York State's fourth legal killer, following in the footsteps of Robert McNeal, a keeper at Sing Sing, who received $5 for pulling the switch in the prison's first execution on July 7, 1891.

Although described as appearing "shaky nerved and scared" toward the close of his career, Elliott always insisted his job was entirely impersonal and mechanical.

"I don't order the deaths," he said once. "That's something the judge and jury and the State laws do. I only carry out orders."

Successor's Choice Tentative

Farley Believed To Control N.Y. Democrats

Delegates of President's State Expected to Follow Postmaster

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 10.—James A. Farley holds the answer to which way the New York State delegation will go at the next Democratic National Convention.

But Farley, himself, doesn't know yet which way to turn. He doesn't know how far the European war has gone toward whipping up sentiment for a third term. His close friends say that back in July, before he, himself, sailed for Europe, he had the word of President Roosevelt that the Chief Executive would not run again. But whether the political picture has altered the Presidential mind, Farley does not know.

Some of those close enough to the situation to know what they are talking about, say the possibility of a break between the President and his topmost political advisor still is a factor to be considered.

On Good Terms Now

They are on good terms now. But the situation between Farley and the President, and for that matter the feeling between the President and the Southern and Middle Western Democratic dissenters from his domestic policies, is more of a truce during a national emergency than anything resembling a permanent peace.

The President, through Farley's advice, has adopted a more conciliatory course toward the Southerners who had broken away from him.

A part of this course is determined by the fact that the Administration is anxious to use every wile to get the neutrality program through Congress. Whether, after the extra session is over, the conciliatory methods will be continued remains to be seen.

The genial chairman can say the word that will send more than one State delegation into a quick step for himself or most any other candidate he might name. In spite of the fact that New York is the President's own State, this is said to apply as strongly, or more so, to New York than to any other.

Dewey Dominates G. O. P.

The Republicans in New York are no less cognizant of the threat of a third term. Already, whisperings can be heard: "Is Roosevelt going to run again, and if he does will the Republican nomination be worth anything?"

That questioning of the worth of the nomination has not penetrated the outer walls of the offices of Thomas E. Dewey, the New York County prosecutor, however. There the feeling still is that if the New Deal, or a large share of it, is wrong in principle, a mere war will not keep the American people from voting against it.

And Dewey dominates the Republican picture in New York. Political calculators say he will have the bulk of the New York State delegation to the convention.

Dewey is an unannounced candidate. He has yet to express an opinion on many national topics. Many of the State leaders believe he will make a series of speeches late in the fall outlining his views.

Col. Oehmann Urges Licenses For Builders

Permits Violated in Hundreds of Cases, Inspector Asserts

Licensing of all local builders and an increase in personnel for the building inspection force have been recommended to the Commissioners by Col. John W. Oehmann, inspector of buildings, it was revealed yesterday.

At the same time Col. Oehmann reported that the total value of building construction in the last fiscal year was $42,517,792, or an increase of more than $16,000,000 over the previous fiscal year. The total included District government work.

Col. Oehmann said that during recent years there have been hundreds of cases where a builder has violated the terms of his permit, in one way or another, or has done work without a permit.

"Had the builders in question been licensed we could have suspended their licenses and refused to issue them further permits until the illegal conditions had been rectified," he said.

"Under the present regulations, our only redress in the event of Code violations is against the property owner," Col Oehmann stated.

The increasing number of elevators in the District, which has been augmented by the Federal building program and the increase in commercial building construction in the past fiscal year, has made it difficult to make the maintenance inspection required by the regulations when due, he said.

Col Oehmann said the tri-yearly inspection of all elevators was about two months behind the schedule at the close of the fiscal year, because of the limited personnel. He has recommended two additional inspectors.

Georgia Lifer Reaches Texas Seeking Mercy

Slayer Who Escaped Hopes Governor Will Refuse Extradition

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 10.—Richard Gallogly, fugitive Georgia lifetermer, surrendered at the sheriff's office today, and pleaded for the "Texas mercy" he sought in a five-day flight across four Southern States.

The 29-year-old member of a prominent Georgia family, prison-bound for ten years in one of the State's most sensational criminal cases, told Sheriff Smoot Schmid he had traveled night and day since escaping from two prison guards Friday night.

Says "They'll Understand"

"The people out here in the Southwest are real men—they'll understand my case."

The former Oglethorpe University student, who, at 19, pleaded guilty in the slaying of a drug store clerk and three times has been refused a parole from his life term, said he would fight extradition.

"That was my purpose in coming here," he said. "I can't get justice in Georgia. If your Governor refuses to grant extradition, I can live an honest, forth right life. I just want a chance."

"I had read in the newspapers about the Texas court refusing to extradite a big oil man to another State and knew I could get justice here."

Wife Accompanied Him

Gallogly's blonde wife, whom he married in May while in an Atlanta hospital, accompanied him to Dallas. He told officers he did not know where she could be found. He met her in prison some six years ago when, as a teachers' college student, she visited the prison for piano recitals.

Gallogly violently denied that the two guards from whom he fled, Joe Freeman and Roy A. Matthews, knew of his escape plans. Matthews had been charged with aiding the escape.

Alumni Group to Form

Washington alumni of Boston College will organize a club at a meeting October 19 in the Lee House, Fifteenth and L streets northwest. J. Edward Collins, of the Catholic University law faculty, is in charge of arrangements.
